with Mr. Embry," stated Perkins, who wished that Commissioner Embry would "stop pitting two black people against each other."

Perkins stated, "I never recommended Mr. Burroughs," rather Burroughs came to Perkins seeking a letter of recommendation to develop the lots between Biddle and Orchard.

Perkins gave Burroughs a letter of invitation to Embry, but Perkins said he added a letter asking Embry for an opinion of Developer Burroughs.

"Months and months went by without a word from Embry," said Perkins, so he recommended Lester Morton of the Walker and Dunlap firm in Washington.

Morton visited Embry but returned with the response: "Didn't you know? Burroughs is your developer."

Morton and another developer, Avatus Stone of Washington, claimed they could construct the desired houses for $13,000 or $14,000, remarked Perkins.

The $20,000 price on the proposed houses, said Embry, was the ceiling price that would qualify for a Federal program to reduce the interest rate to the buyer to as little as 1 percent.

Perkins said the Pac had agreed to reconsider the developers, but the motion somehow returned to the board of directors for reconsideration.

When the motion came to the floor again, the question was changed to whether the Pac wished to retain Burroughs, Perkins stated.

The Pac voted to keep Burroughs, said Perkins, because half of the Pac members were not present. They were down at City Hall to discuss money for homes south of lots 1 and 2.

The Oxford St. group withdrew from the Pac, Perkins told the AFRO, the Pac was "not listening to the majority of the people" but was receptive to the "wishes of HCD."

"We are located in the heart of the center city and we run certain tutorial projects, Dr. Burnett stated.

"If we allow a flow of people on campus," commented Dr. Burnett, "a very few will abuse this privilege."

Dr. Burnett concluded: "The purpose of the assembly was to generate serious discussion," and he is satisfied "the assembly did provoke some thought."

spent unselfishly soliciting money from neighborhood business in his area for this needy cause.

Randy is an 8th grade student at Clifton Park Junior High School and says, "I like helping the needy."

Each day after school he walks from store to store with his letter of permission which he received from the AFRO, asking merchants to please lend Mrs. Santa a hand by writing her a check so that she might be able to buy food certificates, clothing certificates and food baskets for those who would not have a happy Xmas.

Mrs. Yancey said "everybody in the neighborhood loves him so; it is hard to turn him away." He also has a sister Miss Regina Yancey who was recently graduated from Eastern High School.

Mrs. Janie Sanders and her Wonder Workers are still conducting their candy sale. All proceeds go to Mrs. Santa.

lice quote the man as describing himself as "a romantic, lonely guy."

Continuous lineups are being held as police watch out for the one male in particular, a man between 20 to 25 years of age who has a medium bush hairdo, mustache, goatee and long sideburns.

On Thursday Officer Vernion May of the Police Community Relations Division under Major James A. Watkins told the AFRO:

"Citizens may rest assured that the Police Department is making every effort and using all resources available to put an end to these criminal attacks on the women in the area.

"In addition to our men, Major Clarence Roy, deputy chief of Area II, has his men on it 24 hours a day."

In addition to the 20-year-old nurses' aide, forced at gunpoint into an abandoned garage in the 4800 block Reisterstown Rd. early Sunday, the victims also include a Pimlico High School 7th grade girl, age 13, who the man slung over his shoulder and carried off to the rear of a school in the 3700 block Rogers Ave. about 8:30 p.m.

A nurse reports the man in the red car drove up and pointed a gun in her face and said, "If you don't get into this car, I'll kill you."

She said he grabbed her inside and drove off from the Garrison Blvd. and Liberty Heights bus stop to a vacant lot before the attack in the front seat.

She said she was put out, ordered to walk up an alley and not to look back.

She said she walked until she saw a light in a house and asked the residents for help.

Others including two nurses, two waitresses, a beautician, a nurses' aide and a Police Department clerk, state the fast-riding gunman carries the pistol in his belt.

One woman, a nurse at a convelesent home in the Garrison-Liberty Heights area said she told the man who took her from the No. 19 bus stop in the 2400 block Garrison, "My son knows your name. I have seen you. I'll know you next time" and he let her go.

A nurse of a nursing home on Granada told police she was waiting for the bus in the 2800 block Liberty Heights when a man of similar description drove up in an old green car, grabbed her inside and holding a gun on her, took her near the golf course off Forest Park Ave.

She said when she finaliy broke away from him, she ran screaming down the street and attracted a resident who let her inside and called police.

The man who took a high school student, age 15, from the 2300 block Gwynns Falls Parkway also had a gun and walked her to his car before the assault. Driving to Douglass High School campus, he forced her out and ripped off her clothing, she told police.

"There is no restriction on the length of hair provided that it is well groomed and provided that the length or styling is such that in the opinion of the Chief of the Fire Department it does not interfere with the safety of the firefighter."

Th Department's regulations for facial hair are unchanged: no beards, sideburns no wider than 1½inches at the base which can not extend below the level of the ear lobe; and mustaches not below the corners of the mouth.

These rullings end the moratorium on firefighter hair length that begun over a month ago when the Board found itself unprepared to rule on Rooks' suspension.

Firefighter Rooks told the AFRO he first became a firefighter in 1968 but was drafted into the Army after 6 months on the job.

Once discharged by the Army, January, 1971, Rooks decided to rejoin the Fire Department but now is considering going back to school.

Rooks grew up in Baltimore and graduated in 1964 from City College.

His parents, Mr. and Mrs. John Young, reside at 3748 Columbus Dr., while Rooks, who is single lives at 2143 Pentland Dr.

No booze election day okeyed by Sen Welcome

By VAL HYMES

Sen. Verda Welcome (4th) protested and voted Wednesday against a proposed bill to allow liquor to be sold on election days.

The measure was adopted, however, by the legislative committee and will go to the general assembly under its sponsorship in January.

Mrs. Welcome said she voted against the bill "because there is no need for liquor to be sold on election days."

"The bars open after the polls closed," she said and everyone knows they will be closed beforehand so they can buy what they need."

The senator said police had to be called to remove a drunk who was collasped outside an election headquarters on Tuesday.

Del. Kenneth L. Webster (5th) added that loitering around bars tends to discourage the voters. People need to be able to walk peacefully on election day without worrying about the drunks.

He said that 70 percent of those drinking on election days won't vote. The committee studying the bill was almost evenly split on the issue.

Del. Douglass against tax increases

Delegate John Douglass, (D., 2nd Dist., Balto., City), today called on the Legislature to resist pressures for another round of tax increases. Douglass cited figures released recently showing that Maryland ranked 9th in the Nation in the highest total amount of sales income and other taxes collected from its citizens.

Maryland garnished $83 in sales and income taxes, exclusive of property taxes, for every $1,000 earned by the average taxpayer to support government services. "Taxpayers are no longer going to put up with governmental services.

* * *

"Taxpayers are no longer this kind of pilferage of their paychecks," Douglass said. He cited a personal poll conducted by him which showed that among city dwellers, high taxes is the number two issue, second only to crime.

Douglass is particularly concerned about the proposed education equalization formula which calls for personal and corporate income tax increases to provide an additional $40 million to support the program.

While supporting the equalization of aid to public education, Douglass is opposed to a tax increase to provide for part of those extra funds.

* * *

Douglass feels that there should be a shifting of priorities to provide the additional funds.

"There comes a time when we have to support more needy programs at the expense of those of lesser need. Increasing taxes is the easy way out, and we as Legislators shirk our responsibility to our constituents to provide as efficient gov't as possible.

Stacking one layer of governmental programs on top of others without reducing or eliminating less needy programs is no way to run State gov't. At a time when Federal gov't is moving to provide tax reductions for our hard pressed citizens, it seems inconsistent for State gov't to rush in and confiscate that relief."

he would sponsor legislation, he would sponsor legislation during the next session which would require State Dept. to submit their budgets in program form. In this way, Legislators could evaluate programs which are not meeting their goals.

years at the St. Johns School in the community.

Police say that they are at a standstill in the murder and have not been able to come up with the missing rifle or wallet.

* * *

Saturday night Howard County Police received a call at 11:40 p.m. from a female reporting a shooting on Race Rd. and messages were sent out to all state troopers in the area.

The body of Alphonso Brown, 42, of the 4000 block of Belview Ave. was found with a bullet hole in the left chest lying beside his white Charger.

Police report that a wallet was found on the dead man with no money missing. On Thursday the AFRO went to the murder scene accompanied by Jack Marsh, director of State Police Public Relations.

In the daylight several attractive houses line Race Rd. in a peaceful Maryland countryside. About 50 feet from the scene of the tragedy are three homes.

* * *

Persons living in the vicinity are reported to not have heard a gunshot. Police officials speculate that because of a train that comes by the area, they probably didn't notice.

Mr. Marsh states state police are making progress in solving the mystery.

Several persons have been brought in who say that they saw the man driving on Race Rd.

Mrs. Jessie Brown, the dead man's wife, told AFRO that she didn't know of anyone who wanted to kill her husband and that he had not been threatened.

She also stated that her husband had gone out to Howard County and his car broke down on him. He had returned to get his car started.

Funeral services were held for Mr. Brown in the Morton and Dyett Funeral Home chapel Wednesday. The body was shipped to Redspring, N.C. for burial.
