PTA Congress hears Dr. Patterson

Speaking Thursday at the opening session of the Annual Convention Program of the Maryland Congress of Parents and Teachers, Dr. Roland N. Patterson, superintendent of Baltimore Public Schools, told more than 250 delegates attending from throughout the state, Baltimore is not alone in experiencing crises.

He said. "The crises and confrontations which we experience in Baltimore are countrywide. The task to solve the problems is not for educators alone."

In his 10 minute address the city school head alluded to the recent shootings in Baltimore Public Schools by stressing that "the total community must join together" to solve problems.

He asked the delegates that doing their two-day conference they would keep in mind the idea of "Responsibility and Accountability." He admonished the delegates to hold themselves accountable to their children as parents and to their students as teachers. "working together."

Notably absent from the scheduled introductory ceremonies was Mayor Thomas J. D'Alesandro III. Standing-in for the Mayor was Chairman of the City Council Education Committee, Councilman Alexander Stark (D.5th).

Mr. D'Alesandro and Mayor-elect William Donald Schaefer, Mr. Stark said, were in Atlanta attending a conference of Mayors.

The congress ends tonight (Friday) after two days of workshops and small discussion groups. The keynote address was given yesterday by Mrs. Leon S. Price, immediate past president, Nathanial Congress of Parents and Teachers in the Calvert Grand Ball Room of the Lord Baltimore Hotel.

Education Forum is lively with skits and frankness

The topic for this week's Education Forum: "Discipline and Social Problems" brought a large inter-racial crowd to the auditorium of the Poly-Western High School Wednesday night.

Moderating the program was School Commissioner Robert J. Thieblot. Mrs. Marion Banfield was credited with "getting the whole thing together."

The aim of the nearly three-hour long session was to acquaint parents; and the general public with the legal and educational as well as health aspects of the discipline problems as experienced by teachers and students in city schools.

Dr. John Crew, director of Special Services for the School Administration and the School Board, introduced the assemblage to the legal problems of enforcing discipline in schools while maintaining the constitutionally guaranteed rights of the student.

Speaking for the parents and citizens, Mrs. Banfield emphasized the Department of Education must work with parents to promote: relevant curricula, an understanding of the cultural kinships between peoples of the world and to dispel the disciplinary problems which stifle initiative.

Among the students expressing views was Miss Fran Sugarman from Northwestern. Her recommendations on discipline and social problems were: motivation of students by teachers; the fact that the atmosphere in a classroom may be so relaxed that students often lose respect for the instructor and learning does not take place at all; and the role of the substitute teacher in the schools needed a more definitive explanation.

However, the student that won the heart of the entire audience was Forest Park Junior, 17-year-old Ernest Spears. Parts of his remarks which brought joy to and applause from the audience included: "I didn't know this would be such a large audience; it's sort of frightening."

This brought relief to the audience, which had been "uptight" before and lessened Ernest's fears as well. He went on to discuss in clearly outstanding fashion his views on discipline.

He noted how he found the road to being something in the world was: "In order to make it you have to know something." He discussed reasons why students don't come to school. He asked for more guidance counselors instead of the usual ratio of 300 students to one person as is presently constructed in most city high schools.

In other actions the Board approved the appointment of Eric Byrd as director of training and technical asssitant programs (TTAP) replacing Mr. Grover L. McCrae Jr.

Mr. McCrae will become project director for Construction Employment Training and Management and Entrepreneur Development Co-ordination, which will be funded jointly by H.E.W. and the Labor Department.

William Campbell, a graduate of Gettysbug College, succeeds Mr. Byrd as director of the New Careers Program.

Charles Cherubin, president of the American Federation of Teachers, Local 1930 athe faculty bargaining agent at the college, questioned the Board's actions wi. regard to the federal wage freeze.

Mr. Cherubin declared that the union felt that the Board had not been vigorous enough in its efforts to unfreeze teachers' salaries.

After a lengthy discussion; the Board, while re-affirmng its judgement that separate litigation on behalf of the college was not warranted at this time, voted to review its actions and to seek clarification of several specific issues raised during the discussion.

In its final action the Board voted to accept the gifts of oxygen and vacuum safety locking outlets and of respiratory equipment made by several commercial enterprises. The oxygen equipment is the gift of the Puritan Bennett Corp.

2 students will sit on the School Board

By PAUL EVANS

Two students from the Baltimore Public Schools will soon sit on the Board of School Commissioners in a non-voting, advisory capacity.

By a 4-2 vote, Thursday night, Commissioners agreed on the establishment of two "Student Commissioner" positions allowing students to bring their views of concern directly to public sessions of the Board.

On the motion of Commissioner Stephen McNierney, seconded by Commissioner Elizabeth Murphy Moss with additional amendments by Commissioner Larry S. Gibson, a member subitely took one of their most dramatic and progressive moves since the Board was reshaped earlier this year with the addition of Commissioners Kalman Hettleman, Cyril O. Byrtn and Stephen McNierny.

Stipulations of student tenure on the Board will include:

"That the Student Commissioners be two in number, elected by and from the secondary school students of the Baltimore City Public Schools to one-year terms according to procedure designed by the (School) Staff to guarantee the representative character of the office.

"One term shall run from September 1 to August 31; the other from February 1 to January 31. For the first year two students could be elected immediately. One term would run to August 31, 1972 and the second term to January 31, 1973.

"That Student Commissioners be non-voting, but invited to participate in all regular Board meetings, supplied with agenda, minutes and reports, and eligible for appointment by the President (of the Board) as non-voting members of any committees on the Board.

"Students will be excluded from any reports or discussions relating to matters of personnel or the acquisition of sites for construction of school property."

* * *

Edward Daniels, 17, president of the Student Government at Edmondson, who was prime-mover in promoting the idea to the Board two weeks ago, commented after the vote: "I am very enthusiastic. I was scared for a moment it would not pass. I am very well pleased."

Melvin Jones, 17, senior also at Edmondson said, "I was sure we were going to win."

Chip Scammon, American Friends Service Committee, noted, "I think though that students should have a right to vote.

Dr. Roland N. Patterson, superintendent told the AFRO, "They will serve to help the commissioners understanding of the students' point of view". He felt the students would have ready access to the School Board on questions that directly affect others in the system.

The Association of Student Councils of Baltimore City will meet on December 9 to elect the two commissioners.

Two factors were most likely influential in the outcome of the vote. Commissioner McNierney noted the Board would not be "diluting its primary responsibility" by adding students to the Board.

Commissioner Moss added that the old Baltimore Junior College, now the Community College of Baltimore (once under the Board's authority) has a student on its Board of Trustees in a non-voting capacity.

Thus, commissioners voting in favor were Commissioners Moss, McNierney, Hettleman, and Gibson. Voting against were Commissioners Maree Farring and Robert Thieblot. Board president, Robert Karwacki did not vote. Commissioners James Griffin and Cyril O. Byron were not present.

* * *

In other business, commissioners deferred action of deciding policy of admitting students from the counties to city schools.

A special meeting has been arranged for November 18 in which the entire matter of the reciprocating admission between county and city would be finally and thoroughly aired.

* * *

The Board approved a recommendation by Dr. Patterson that he be allowed at his discretion to require that certain outside groups using school property have insurance or assets enough to protect the public's property in case of damage.

* * *

Members approved the establishment of a $190,000 center adjacent to the Woodbourne Junior High School for experimenting with students in disciplinary problems.

* * *

Finally, President Karwacki announced the Education Committee of the City Council would hold hearings Monday afternoon at 3 p.m. on the matter of discipline in the schools in light of recent developments in area high schools.

* * *

The next meeting of the Board will be at Northern High School. November 18, 1971 at 7 p.m.

Frisby protests nuclear blast

The White House acknowledged Thursday it had received "some calls and some letters" protesting the big U.S. nuclear test which will be fired under Amchitka Island, Alaska Saturday. But it refused to say how many.

One of them is Arctic Explorer Dr. Herbert Frisby who was on the island during World War II as an AFRO war correspondent.

Dr. Frisby expresses outrage at the blast which will destroy animal and plant life, whales, seals, walruses, polar bears, fish and arctic birds. Tidal waves and earthquakes could result, he states.

Deploring also the advantage the U.S. government has taken of the Aleuts, persons he describes as closely related to Eskimos, he states, "I am tired of our government considering profits more than people."

The blast set for Saturday 3 p.m. EST is 250 times the bomb that destroyed Hiroshima to end World War II with Japan.

The test, which the atomic energy commission has defended as generally safe, will test a warhead for the Spartan ABM missile. Too big for the AEC's Nevada test site, the explosion will be the last on Amchitka if all goes well.

The State Department has announced it has barred shipping within three nautical miles of Amchitka, located at the western part of the Aleutian chain, through Monday.

The atomic weapons test is a mile underground and 1,200 miles west of the Alaska mainland.

On Capitol Hill, Senate Democratic Leader Mike Mansfield called the test "dangerous, an outrage," and Sen. Edmund S. Muskie, D-Maine, urged President Nixon to go before the American people to explain "why he overruled most of his advisers" in approving the test.

National PTA honors Keyes

Sterling S. Keyes, former acting superintendent of Baltimore Public School and presently Associate Superintendent for Administration, Finance and Planning, was awarded a national life membership by the Maryland Congress of Parents and Teachers at its two-day convention in Baltimore this week.

Only one such award is given each year to a person whose civic contributions have furthered the objectives of the PTA.

The National Life Membership Award is presented annually and confers lifetime association with the national PTA.

The Maryland PTA Convention was attended by 1,000 delegates representing the total state membership of 275,000 parents and teachers.

Mandel for gun control

By VAL HYMES

Governor Marvin Mandel told the AFRO Thursday he would support legislation to control gun sales between individuals.

The governor was commenting on the situations involving shootings in Baltimore Schools and the increase in crimes involving guns in the city.

He said, "I certainly feel private sales of hand guns should be included in the law now covering gun dealers."

The governor added, "We may be able to strengthen our gun control laws but we can't control people. . . not in our system of government.
