Mrs. Clark's heart is with the needy

By PAULA M. BROOKS

"My aim has always been to reach the people who are at the bottom of the ladder," said Mrs. Flozella R. Clark, who recently resigned from the staff of the Family and Children's society.

Mrs. Clark, who began working with the Family and Children's Society in 1943, said, "Many times people don't know how to get things and use things, and this is where I come in to help them."

She said that often she becomes frustrated with some of today's social workers for their seeming lack of interest in the problems of the poor and neglected.

However, Mrs. Clark has made the vast problems of the poor an intricate part of her life.

Since January, 1943 Mrs. Clark has involved herself with obtaining legal, medical and familial help for families in distress.

For a period of 16 years, 1943-1959, she worked as a caseworker at the Society. During that time, she plaied about 60 hard-to-place black children in adoptive homes.

Many times she would make speeches to fraternal and church groups in an effort to secure favorable homes for hard-to-place children.

Mrs. Clark has given her energies to working with unwed mothers, direct casework service to children living in long-time foster homes, supportive [illegible] parents as well as foster parents, [illegible] a student in the [illegible] who worked with babies in adoptive study homes and recruitment and study of homes to be used in placement of children for adoption as well as adoptive study.

Promoted to director of the Protective Services Division in 1959, Mrs. Clark worked with all of the neglected children in Baltimore City, prior to the commitment of the court to DSS (Department of Social Services).

"We had to establish a relationship with the parent of the neglected child. If the parent didn't consent to taking proper care of the child, Protective Services would have to go to court to file Petitions of Neglect with the juvenile court and give proof of parental negligence," she said.

Also at this time, she worked with a staff of four trained workers in addition to students from Howard and Catholic Universities and the University of Pennsylvania, Schools of Social Work, involved in field placement.

She directed the division until a law was passed in 1957 stating that because of the increase in abuse cases, they would no longer be referred to the Society, a private organization, but to a public organization, DSS.

After her division was forced to close, Mrs. Clark went out into the community to find out what services were needed. She drew up plans with the Mondawmin (Mondawmin Shopping Center) Merchants Association.

"There," she said, "I found out the youth in the Mondawmin area needed a center. Sometimes I would walk around in the mall and talk to the people just to find out what was needed."

Even though she is no longer working in the shopping center, her desk is there and literature is still being passed out explaining what services are available.

She said that while working in Protective Services, approximately 600 to 700 distressed families per year were brought to her attention, and this involved thousands of children.

A native of Tuskegee Institute, Ala., she received her B.S. degree from Tennessee State A and I University and a Master of Social Work degree from Atlanta University, School of Social Work.

She received an Advanced Curriculum Certificate from the University of Pennsylvania, School of Social Work.

Mrs. Clark was the baselius of Epsilon Omega Chapter Alpha Kappa Alpha Sorority in 1964. Mrs. Clark is presently a board member of the Metropolitan Senior Citizen's Center and an NAACP member.

Married to Harold A. Clark, chairman of the guidance department at Carver High School, and night principal there, the couple has three children: Mrs. Veronica Counts, a systems instructor at UNIVAC, Harolyn Clark, a junior at Georgia State University and Maria E. Clark, who has a Master of Social work degree from Howard University.

Interested in travel, last summer, Mrs. Clark and her daughter, Maria, traveled to East Africa, visiting Kenya, Ethiopia, Uganda and Tanzania. Before returning to the United States, they stopped in Europe, visiting Greece, London, Paris and Rome.

The Clark family, who resides at 2017 Wheeler Ave., attends St. Celia's Catholic Church.

Economy meals for good eating

Pert and sassy, with lots of personality — that's cranberries!

These cherry-red gems of flavor bounce their way through Thanksgiving dinner, lending their rich hue and superb flavor to every food they meet. And the old-fashioned tradition of including cranberries on the holiday table has been enriched by modern processed cranberry sauces and cranberry juice cocktail.

Fresh cranberries, brilliantly radiant through clear plastic or cellophane bags, add gay color to fresh produce offerings. Cranberry juice cocktail is a pleasantly tangy nectar delightful to serve hot or chilled as is, or to use as the base for superb appetizers or party punch.

Jellied whole cranberry sauce is a jellied creation with delicious whole cranberries interspersed. Jellied cranberry sauce has a smooth, firm, jelly-like consistency.

Fresh cranberries are generally served as a traditional holiday-type dish. The whole berries may be gently simmered until tender in a bit of water with orange, lemon, or grapefruit peel added and perhaps some cinnamon, clove, or other spice. This homemade fresh cranberry sauce may be served hot or cold.

Fresh cranberry relish is another holiday mainstay. The washed berries are ground with whole oranges (rind and all) from which the seeds have been removed. Sugar and spices are added to taste.

A number of recipes call for the addition of canned cranberry sauce as a main ingredient. Cranberry-glazed ham slices, cranberry pot roasts, cranberry pies, cranberry puddings and cranberry molded salads are only a few.

And don't forget that after the feast is over, you can make a delicious turkey salad with the addition of chopped fresh cranberries.

Cranberry products provide the creative cook with a world of holiday accents, for Thanksgiving and the holiday season ahead.

Here's a perfect ending for any holiday dinner, Cranberry Apple Crunch:

Use one lb. (2 cups) sugar, one pint (2 cups) water, one lb. (1 qt.) fresh or frozen cranberries, one and three-fourth lbs. (4½ cups) apples, unpared, cored, chopped, ½ lb. (2 cups) rolled oats, uncooked, three-fourth—cup all-purpose flour, sifted, one and one-fourth cups brown sugar, packed; one and one-half teaspoons salt, three-fourth cup butter or margarine, melted; and one cup nut meats, chopped.

Boil sugar and water for five minutes. Add cranberries and boil five minutes longer. Cool. Stir apples into cranberry sauce. Place in greased 16-½ x 10½ x 2½ inch baking pan. Combine rolled oats, flour, brown sugar, and salt.

Add melted butter, mixing until crumbly. Sprinkle crumb mixture over cranberry mixture. Top with chopped nuts. Bake in oven at 350 degree F. for 1 hour. Serve warm, topped with a scoop of vanilla ice cream. scoop of vanilla ice cream.

Mushrooms are better with a surprise inside, like A.1., the seasoning for the party season.

STUFFED MUSHROOMS
24 medium-sized mushrooms
2 tbsp. butter
2 tbsp. grated Parmesan cheese
½ tsp. celery salt
½ cup minced fresh onion
3 tbsp. A.1. Sauce
1 tbsp. chopped fresh parsley
1 tsp. garlic salt
1 cup fresh bread crumbs
2 tbsp. melted butter

Clean mushrooms and remove stems. Set caps aside. Finely chop stems. In a skillet, melt 2 tbsp. butter and lightly saute mushroom stems. Add cheese, celery salt, onion, A.1. Sauce, parsley, and garlic salt. Mix well. Stuff each mushroom with hot mixture. Mix bread crumbs with melted butter; top each mushroom with buttered crumbs. Set caps on well-greased baking sheets. Broil for 3-5 minutes, or until tops are browned. Serve hot.

Pratt Library offers a week of fun films

Adventurous little boys, a field mouse, and wild chimpanzees of Tanzania star in films offered for children's entertainment at branches of the Enoch Pratt Free Library during the week of Dec. 5.

"River Boy," "The Stowaway," and "Tadpole Tale: Mike Gives Up a Friend" may be seen at the library at Hollins and Payson streets beginning at 3:30 p.m. on Monlay.

Tuesday's offering at the Patterson Park branch at 3:45 p.m. will be "A Lad in the Lamp," in which some boys discover a lamp which seems to have the magic powers of Aladdin's.

Frederick, the field mouse, who gathers colors instead of food, appears in and words and sun rays, the animated film, "Frederick," at the branch library at Broadway and Orleans streets on Welnesday at 3:30 p.m.

Also here will be "Blue Dashiki," which shows how Jeffrey, a little black boy, earns the money in neighborhood stores to buy a dashiki he longs for and, in so doing, learns about his community.

Completing the week's schedule of children's films are "Miss Goodall and the Wild Chimpanzees" at the Waverly branch on Wednesday at 3:45 p.m. and an animated version of "Dick Whittington and His Cat" at the Pimlico branch on Wednesday at 4 p.m.

Consumers warned against 'Wordcasters'

The Baltimore Better Business Bureau has issued its second consumer alert in recent weeks about work-at-home schemes. The company named in the new alert is "Wordcasters, Inc."

The BBB says that Wordcasters has advertised extensively for persons who will promise to verbally advertise messages to be provided to them by the company.

To become a wordcaster, one must first pay a $10 lifetime fee that is refundable only if no verbal advertising assignment is given by the company within 60 days of signing up.

The BBB investigations indicate that the company makes such assignments usually in the amount of $1 for the five minutes required to tell five people the advertising message provided by wordcasters.

This entire approach is regarded as an insincere and deceptive scheme by the BBB.

The Bureau notes that Wordcasters ends up with a $9 profit after paying the first $1 to fulfill its contract obligation. These ads have usually been for companies owned by the same person who owns Wordcasters, so he not only ends up with a profit from the registration fee, but he also gets inexpensive oral advertising for his own companies.

Another consumer alert about a work-at-home scheme involving the James Bliss Co., of Levittown, Pa., was issued two weeks ago. Bliss' ads in Help Wanted columns have offered a weekly salary to homeworkers.

However, BBB reports show that no employment is actually provided. Instead, those who answer the Bliss ads are encouraged to buy material from Bliss for resale.
