Light Housekeeping

If you are totally depressed over your food budget, stop, take a good look at what you are buying, and maybe you'll shed a little light on the situation. In the first place, homemakers are buying more foods that are pre-washed, pre-peeled, pre-cooked, pre-mixed and pre-packaged No wonder, since 44 per cent of American women now have jobs outside the home. This means there is less time to spend in the kitchen. But you pay for these pre-doings. Therefore your food dollar isn't going for food, it's going for labor. In a single year, consumers may have as many as 1,500 new food items to choose from, although only 500 or more generally survive for more than a year. Convenience and hte cost of development, testing and advertising new products and considerably to the food bill.

Then again almost a fourth of what is spent in supermarkets is not for things to eat, but for something to wear, listen to clean with or play with. For every 77 cents of groceries that go into shopping carts, 23 cents worth of hose, cosmetics, tooth pedias and cookbotks go in pedias and cookbooks go in too.

What's new? A doublebareled approach aproach to the art of timekeepings by a contemporary-styled perpetual perpetual calendar and battery-operated clocu.

This clock operated up to 20 months on a single 1.5 volt flashlight battery.

It all comes in a one-piece molded plastic case with the names of the months and numbers from one to 31 and the names of the days of the weeks protruding like so many little knobs. Red and black rings snap on and off the knobs to indicate month, day of week and date.

Recipe of the week: Punch is making a comeback. More often than not these days you'll find a punch bowl perching regally on somebody's buffet, waiting to dispense good cheer. Particularly so, now that the holidays are practically here.

The prime advantage of a punch is the convenience of the drink. You mix up a batch of 50 servings before the guests arrive and free yourself and your friends from the tedium and chaos of ice cubes, mixers bottle opening and remembering whether Aunt Prue takes her nip with ginger ale or club soda. As any expert in these affairs will tell you, the "esprit" of a fine punch is champagne from France, with cognac as its soul. Other ingredients should be considered, of course, but we are talking about equaite punches, the kind that buble with the gaiety of champagne and breathe the mellow fire of cognac.

Here's what I mean:

What cheer punch Is made with 2 cucumbers, 8 tablespoons sugar, grated rinds of 4 lemons, 2 cups Cointreau, 2 cups orange juice, 2 fifths cognac, ½ cup lemon juice, and 4 bottles dry French champagne.

Slice cucumbers, without peeling, into a punch bowl. Add sugar, grated lemon rinds, orange juice, lemon juice and cognac. Stand away for an hour. When ready to serve, add a large chunk of ice, Cointreau and champagne.

Serves 40.

Punch O' The Indies requires: 1 fifth cognac, 1 fifth sherry, ¼ pint cherry liqueur, ½ pint Grand Marnier, 4 bottles French champagne, and 2 quarts club soda.

Please be gentle with the stirring, lest you bruise the bubbles. Surround the punch bowl up to the edge with cracked ice, then pour in the punch. Don't put ice in the punch or you'll weaken the potion and spoil part of the fun.

Serves 60.

By the way...

by Joe Black

"Hey, Baby, let it all hang out!"

"Tell it like it is."

"Don't blow your cool."

"Heavy, Baby."

"Do your own thing, Dude."

"Crazy, Dad."

Two black cats rapping? Wrong. That conversation is from the Sunday comics. I reprint it here to prove a point: There is no Black language. There are the African languages, of course. But I'm referring to the communication tool of the Black people born in the United States.

This is 1971. And never before has it been so important for Black youth to master the English language. Our young people don't have to sound like Rhodes scholars, but they must be able to communicate with citizens of the Black or white community. That is the only way they can reach their fullest potential as wage-earners or producers.

There are better job opportunities available for minority group citizens today. And those jobs are not going to the guys who apply for employment by saying: "Dig, man, I need a gig."

More important, when we don't learn English, we give credence to the stereotype that Blacks are mentally inferior to whites. White immigrants come to this country and master English—but we Black people, who are born here, act like we don't have the ability to do so.

If we do nothing to destroy this false image of inferiority, then we too are telling ourselves and our Black brothers and sisters that "you are less than, you are not equal to other American citizens."
