movement to honor Mr. Carter, talked to Orlinsky after Monday's City Council meeting.

Black people are going to have to find another way to honor Walter Carter, Orlinsky told Conway, because Baltimore has never renamed a street after anybody.

"It is not up to the City to suggest how black people are honor Walter Carter," Conway told the AFRO.

Conway added that the only alternative would be to rename the Civic Center after "Mr. Civil Rights."

Councilwoman Adams, Mayor William Schaefer and Conway are going to discuss the renaming of North Ave. before Mrs. Adams attempts to reintroduce the bill.

the city's nine District courts, nine Courts of the Supreme Bench and seven Juvenile Courts, Murrell says he hopes to appoint 23 salaried assistant public defenders.

Additional panel attorneys will be paid not only fees, but expenses, he said, after filing itemized statements.

The City's public defender system ran out of money in August, leaving the local public defenders handling cases "without any hope of a fee unless the City Council gets generous and comes up with some money to run the program"

The program has been funded by the Legislature through July. Murrell must come to the Legislature in January to ask for more money to "run the program he said.

Under the old court-appointed system, the poor defendent did not receive legal aid until he appeared before a judge after arrest and sometimes indictment, who would appoint a lawyer, usually at about $100 per case.

Under the new system, a defendant who is unable to pay for a lawyer at the time he is arrested, is entitled to representation for investigations, pre-trial preparations, the trial and appeals that may follow.

Juvenile cases, post-conviction hearings and matters involving defective delinquents sentenced to Patuxent Institution also come undert he program.

The Legislature authorized the system under a mandate from the Courts for equal representation for all defendants, including those facing preliminary hearings.

Spruill says witness "traded" testimony

Lonnie Spruill Jr., on trial for conspiring to receive narcotics, has accused a chief government witness of trading testimony against him for a lesser prison sentence.

According to Mr. Spruill, 2 Charles Plaza, "The most important part of my defense is the fact that a government witness faced up to 40 years imprisonment until he agreed to testify against me."

These accusations were made by the 29-year-old former life insurance agent outside of a federal courtroom on Wednesday afternoon

Mr. Spruill, his uncle Robert L. Spruill Sr. and two others were found guilty by a federal court jury on Thursday, ending the four-week trial which began Nov. 11.

Others on trial were Charles K. Gray, 51, 500 block N. Mount St. and Robert L. Thomas, 45, 1700 block W. Franklin St.

The four men were charged in a six-count indictment of conspiring to receive cocaine and heroine valued at more than $100,000.

Presiding Judge Joseph H. Young granted a motion for acquittal for Lonnie Spruill on the fifth count of the indictment before the jury began its deliberation.

The interracial jury composed of four women and eigh men deliberated only seven hours before returning their verdict.

The guilty verdicts for all were on the conspiracy to receive cocaine and heroin charges.

Lonnie Spruill was found not guilty of the charges of the sale of heroin because the jury was unable to reach a decision.

Robert Louis Thomas, Charles Gray and Robert Spruill Sr. were found guilty on the sale of heroin.

During the trial, William G. Bizzarri, a chief prosecuting witness, testified he agreed to work for the government against the defendants after he was indicted on federal narcotic violations.

Evidence showed Mr. Bizzarri and a former Customs Bureau chemist, Sarkey Negosshian, were convicted of conspiring to break federal narcotic laws on Nov. 4.

Mr Bizzarri, who originally faced a possible maximum sentence of 40 years imprisonment, agreed to work undercover for the government after his arrest in January this year.

After pleading guilty to a lesser charge, Mr. Bizzarri is now facing a maximum sentence of 10 years imprisonment for his conviction.

He may be paroled after serving two years of that sentence according to evidence.

Came to kin's aid, arrested

A dispute between two young girls on the playground of School No. 13, 601 Patterson Pk. Ave. broke out into a fight, drawing a larger crowd, when the older sisters of the two youngsters joined the argument Wednesday afternoon, according to John Jones, public school information officer.

The two older girls, who were not students; one was 15 and the other 20, were arrested for disorderly conduct. One was charged with assaulting an officer.

Dr. Rebecca Carroll, assistant superintendent for elementary education, told the AFRO the younger girls and their parents arranged a meeting and agreed to stop the fighting.
