When the thought is genuine, the gift should be.

Dewar's "White Label"

They say there are a thousand ways to make Scotch whisky. They say.

There's a little corner of the world that doesn't agree. It's the town of Perth, on the banks of Scotland's River Tay. That's where they make Dewar's "White Label."

The men of Perth will tell you that authentic Scotch whisky has to be made where the air is chill and pure, and the water is cold. And that is the air and water of Perth.

They will tell you that authentic Scotch whisky comes only when fine single whiskies are brought from the hills and glens of Scotland and allowed to sleep like bairns in their own snug vats to the day of full maturity. And that is the way of Dewar's.

They will tell you how each whisky, in its own good time, is brought to the Master Blender himself, who swirls it in his glass... "noses" it ... sniffs it again ... and takes a long deep breath to compare its bouquet with thousands he has known before.

Gift wrapped at no extra cost.

Does he remember them all? It is said that he does.

Small wonder then that the good red-bearded Scots of Perth show a bit of honest wrath when somebody tries to tell them there are a thousand ways to make authentic Scotch whisky.

Small wonder they consider their Dewar's "White Label" the authentic Scotch of today. And want you to know it.

Bob Queen's Review

NEW JERSEY

Deadly merchant — They say that the dope pusher operating in the Orange St. area, who peddles his wares like an on-the-spot sale, applies the shot himself, collects and doesn't bother to clean the needle . . . His patrons have been found both dead and near dead from causes other than an overdose . . .

The next most serious risk affecting Newarkers to crime, is the reckless auto problem . . . But they are both related . . . The cops are too busy chasing crime-related issues that there is hardly any time left for traffic violations such as speeding, wrong turns and jumping red lights . . . The number of taxicab accidents are appalling . . .

The drivers claim that they are obliged to make time in order to make the next dollar, since the dough they must turn over to the owners requires most of the working day to earn. . . .

Thanks to the writer of the letter, "Sick and Tired of Radicals" . . . it would have been nice to sign the name . . . It's hard to figure out after over 30 years in the black press, why most of our readers either write some very fine letters anonymously, or call on the phone incognito . . . It's a pleasure to hear or read a name whether they're balling us out or offering a few kind words . . . Remember too, anonymous letters are not printed . . .

Out at the Bishop Walsh Homes, McCarter Highway last Monday evening thieves were observed lifting the loot out of one apartment by rope to quarters up above. . . . Lots of material is rolling in on the forthcoming Dr. Martin Luther King birthday celebrations and the drive to have it declared a national holiday . . .

I heartily agree with the N.Y. Amsterdam News' Les Matthews, who stated in a column last year that the blacks who were shouting King's name in such endearing words, were among the same who in his last Harlem appearance, caused the great leader to leave by a rear exit under police protection . . . It's all a part of the inconsistency of black thinking and planning that must be very much improved . . .

One of the New York critics writing on the play "El Haj Malik" at the Martinque Theatre on Broadway, The Life of Malcolm X, said that the sequence made in a Boston set in a Boston nightclub "was irrelevant" to the life of Malcolm X . . . If he had read the fallen leader's book, he would have learned that the Boston experience had a profound impact upon the direction he would one day take . . .

20 YEARS OF SERVICE—Elmer Hamilton is shown being honored with a certificate and a pin for 20 years of federal service. Presenting the awards were Colonel Jack V. Dunham, commanding officer at Ft. Meade's recruiting office. Mr. Hamilton resides in Gambrills, Md., with his mother, Mrs. Hamilton resides in Gambrills, Md., with his moth- Caroline Hamilton.
