MUSICAL MOMENTS

Joy to the World proclaimed in traditional fetes, musicals

By ADAH K. JENKINS

"Joy to the world" was proclaimed with festive acclamation from auditoriums, sanctuaries and concert halls over the city as Yuletide approached.

At Coppin State College, in the Fullen Auditorium, a 60-voice choir, conducted by Henry Freeman and the Coppin Dancers, under the direction of Jorlyne Manuel, presented a traditional and contemporary celebration.

Coppin Instrumental Ensemble, with Ralph London on the podium, open dethe program. Vocalists featured were: Sandra Lawson, soprano; Marlowe Gares, tenor and Bernard Bragg, Bass, with Charles Austin, Jr. and Maurice Murphy, accompanists.

Christmas is not complete without Handel's "Messiah," with its glorious Part I and the "Hallelujah Chorus."

True to its annual tradition the Baltimore Grest Hymns Choir, under the direction of Dr. Daniel Ridout, was heard at Sharp St. Mem. Church.

Solo roles were sung by: Gloria Jones, Celestine Hammond a d Gwendolyn Day, sopranos; Dorothy Lofton and Charlene Moore, contralto; Howard Wright, tenor and Joseph Eubanks, baritone. Organ and piano accompanists: J. Spencer Hammond and Gwendolyn McCullem.

For over 25 years, the Music Department of Douglass High School, presented the great oratorio at a Sunday afternoon concert with S. R. O in the Gwynns Falls auditorium.

Under the direction of Thoas. DeLane the chorus of 80 was supported by soloists; Milton Cooper, Ronald Douglass, Bertram Brown, Gerril Payne, Angela Canty, Sheryl Redmond, Silene Thomas and Gretchen Stark. Guests accompanists were Patricia, Springer, pianist and Edw. Myers, organist.

At the Lyric a special holiday concert was given by the Baltimore Choral Arts Society directed by Theodore Morrison, with the Baltimore Symphony. Four nationally prominent artists were: Carole Bogard, soprano; Louise Parker, black contralto, Richard Shadley, tenor and David Clatworthy, baritone.

Miss Parker, graduate of Curtis Institute, has scored stunning success in Europe, Australia and South America, with rave notices after her concerts with the New York Philharmonic and Vienna Symphonies, in oratorio, operatic and leider concerts.

The holiday spirit prevailed happily as over 2,000 elementary school children cheered a greeting to Isaiah Jackson, the young black conductor as he strode to the Lyric podium to unofficial puoose sq .oy the new midweek youth series by the Baltimore Symphony Orchestra.

He is really an old friend of theirs, as he and Murry Sidlin, the other young concert conductor, have visited a number of the schools to discuss the programs with the students.

Entitled "The Anatomy of an Orchestra" the four sections of the orchestra were introduced, with each playing a composition. Britten's "A Young Person's guide to the orchestra," with Murry Sidlin narrator, offered a summation.

The performance of Mai Cho, the young winner of the Baltimore Symphony's 1971 Instrumentalist's Competition, in a movement from Mendelssohn's "Violin Concerto" afforded a glimpse of what can be ahead for the talented.

Handling his forces with competent authority Jackson held the interest of the youngsters in an hour of genuine listening and learning.

Pupils from grades three thru six are bused to and from the Lyric for the concert series which closes in January with "The American West" featuring Copland's "Billy the Kid" and "Rodeo," conducted by Murry Sidlin, with the Maryland Balle Company performing.

The free series is sponsored by the Orchestra in cooperation with the Baltimore City Schools.

CALENDAR: Wed. and Thurs. Dec. 29 and 30 at 8:30 at Lyric, Baltimore Symphony in "Carmina Burana;" Commissona conducting; with soloists and chorus.

Sun., Jan. 9 at 3 p.m. in Kraushaar Auditorium, Goucher College, Concert Series with Chrisopher Parkening, classic guitarist.

Wed. and Thurs. Jan. 12 and 13 at 8:30 p.m. at Lyric Baltimore Symphony; Comissiona conducting; Byron Janis, pianist.

St. James Council holds Yule Bazaar

The Women's Council of the St. James Episcopal Church, held their first Church Bazaar in the guild hall of the church last Saturday afternoon.

The bazaar, chairmed by Mrs. Edythe D. Smith and co-chared by Mrs. Loretta Valentine, is for the benefit of helping the poor and less fortunate, in addition to raising money for parish expenses.

Helping to add to the festive day was "The Rebo Zunk," a local band, which provided intermittent music throughout the afternoon.

The Women's Council hopes to make the event an annual affair.

Dr. Johnson heads cancer education

The Board of Directors of the Baltimore City Unit of the American Cancer Society have chosen Dr. Robert H. Johnson to head its Public Education Committee.

Dr. Johnson, an assistant Professor of Surgery at the University of Maryland School of Medicine, will be the overall coordinator in the Cancer Society's efforts to inform all Baltimore residents of Cancer's seven danger signals.

He stated that the committee will attempt to reach businesses and industries, religious organizations, clubs, community action groups, and schools and colleges.

The Cancer Society has also selected chairmen to direct education in each of these specific areas.

These leaders include Charles Hayes, Loretta Stokes, Charles Tildon, James Carr, M.D., Theodore Wm. von Eiff, and Richard McKinney, Ph.D.

Mrs. Johnson originated Hopkins carol sing in 1926

A Christmas Eve tradition begun 45 years ago will be extended again on Dec. 24 when the Memorial Baptist Church Choir sings Christmas carols at The Johns Hopkins Hospital.

The choir, which has not missed a Christmas Eve at Hopkins since 1926, will begin caroling at 7 p.m. around the statue of Christ the Consoler in the rotunda of the Administration Building.

Many of the Hospital's doctors, nurses, employees and their families, by custom, will gather on the first floor and the balconies of the rotunda to hear the choir before it begins its singing tour of patient units.

* * *

According to Augusta Tucker, in her book, "It Happened At Hopkins," the tradition originated as a thank offering of one of the choir members, Mrs. Kate Johnson.

Her 18-year-old son, Abraham Lincoln Johnson, had been seriously burned in an accident at the gasoline station where he worked.

After months of treatment at Hopkins and his successful recovery, Mrs. Johnson persuaded the choir to sing Christmas carols as her thank offering.

Man, 19, may face homicide charge here

Baltimore homicide police may issue an arrest warrant if a man being held by the New York police turns out to be the suspect they want.

The man, James Louis Brown, 19, of Baltimore, is wanted by the police on homicide charges.

Brown was arrested in a subway station in New York early Sunday for allegedly trying to shoot a transit patrolman.

Baltimore homicide police say finger prints of the wanted James Brown of Baltimore have been sent to the New York police. If they agree with that of their suspect Brown would be sent to the Baltimore police to face homicide charges.
