—Marriage bill

diction in cases involving custody of children of parties to a divorce action shall not use as a determining factor for awarding custody, the sex of the respective parents claiming custody."

This would mean the time-honored custom of attempting to award the female spouse custody of children involved in divorce would be dropped.

Both men and women, under Mrs. Lee's companion bill, would be equal in the eyes of the courts as to possibilities to receive custody of contested childres.

Both of the gentle motions, upon passage, would become effective July 1.

Stipulations of the marriage-contractual bill are:

"Any marriage performed in this State from and after July 1, 1972, may be a contract of marriage for the term of three (3) years. The contract at the end of that period of time shall be subject to renewal for an additional three (3) year period upon the mutual agreement of both parties thereto.

The renewal option shall be available at the end of the original three (3) year period and each and every three (3) year period thereafter.

If either party to the original marriage contract at the end of the original term or any extension thereof does not agree to an additional three (3) year optional extension to renew, and if the other agreeable party so requests, the Circuit Court of the county or Baltimore City, as the case may be, where either of the parties resides or works or maintains a principal place of business shall have jurisdiction to determine:

(1) alimony or maintenance, other support, if any, payable by the spouse not renewing the marriage contract to the person wishing to continue the marriage;

(2) child support, if any, for issue born as a result of the initial marriage contract or adopted by the parties thereto during the original term or any renewal thereof;

(3) property settlement between the parties to the initial marriage contract or any renewal hereof;

(4) any and all other questions which would be within the jurisdiction of the appropriate court under the existing divorce and/or annulment laws of the State; and

(5) attorney's fees of the party applying for relief hereunder.

The court shall have the same powers under this section as it would have under the laws of this State concerning divorce and annulment in regard to enforcement of court orders issued under any application for relief brought hereunder or by right under the divorce and annulment laws of this State.

In the event that the parties to the contract, or either of them, shall not wish to continue the marriage for the original three year period, or any extension thereof, then the party seeking relief, or the other party to the contract, may request the Circuit Court of the county or of Baltimore City, as the case may be, to proceed under the terms of the contract or under the existing laws pertaining to divorce.

Any agreement signed by the parties to the original marriage contract, with regard to alimony, maintenance, and support, or any of them, and child support, property settlement, attorney fees, and other questions properly before the court or within its jurisdiction, or any of them, shall be incorporated in a decree or order of the court.

Mrs. Lee, who has high hopes of passage of the bill, was a school principal before entering politics. She is a longtime practicing lawyer and affiliate of many legal associations and local and national bar groups.

Mrs. Lee, who has been a member of the House of Delegates since 1967, explained:

"This bill gives all people the right to come out of marriage without being ruined."

Mrs. Lee explained that the Supreme Courtruled indigents are entitled to free legal services in divorce matters.

"If they have to fight through expensived ivorce cases they will be financially ruined. So many people have said to me their don't want 'some person sitting on a bench (a judge)' to determine their future."

Mrs. Lee felt citizens should not have to undergo "the stigma and embarrassment which are attached to divorce proceedings in the state."

She listed the grounds recognized by Maryland courts for divorce as: desertion; fraud in the inception of the marriage; impotence; adultery; abandonment; voluntary separation; conviction of a felony; and absent of the spouse for a period of seven years.

The lady delegate feels that the "whole gamut" of family and domestic relations and laws need to be reviewed.

She disavowed the law which requires a 18-year-old male to seek the consent of his parents before he may marry in the case of pregnancy.

The bill proposed would, says Mrs. Lee, "take away the necessity of getting a vorce under impossible situations. Every year we attempt to update the family laws, and each year we pick away, but we don't give relief."

Although the legislator, expressed a belief in "marriage as an institution" she feels "the imposition of society forces people to live together.

She contended "living together is not restricted to the young" and noted many elderly persons to co-habitate "to stretch their limited incomes."

Mrs. Lee has received large volumes of mail since her television appearances. "Many persons," she said, "have come to me in Annapolis and thinked me for having the courage to put my bill forward."

Mrs. Lee's bill has received quiet support from some of her fellow legislators, and she is optimistic about its passage.

Many have deemed the bill as "revolutionary."

An analyst by a legislative reference employee states:

"Marriage is generally recognized as the civil status of one man and one woman, capable of contracting, united by contract and mutual consent for life."

"Through the years, marriage has become a recognized social institution and has become the concern of public policy and within the jurisdiction of the government.

"House Bill 633 (Mrs. Lee's) is, therefore, not a totally new concept. It merely re-enforces the basic principle that marriage is a contract and from there says that the marriage contract not be different from any other agreement between two parties that it cannot be terminated upon mutual agreement of the contracting parties. The bill also provides for recourse for the person to the contract who does not want to terminate the relationship.

"Since marriage is a legally recognized status or relationship which is founded upon a contract or mutual agreement and the mutually of the parties is essential to the formation of the contract for a valid marriage, it is just a short, natural step to reach the point marriage should be terminable when the parties are no longer mutually agreeable to continue in that relationship.

"To be valid, a marriage must be based upon mutual agreement, therefore, when either of the parties is not agreeable, there is no longer a valid marriage contract and the relationship is, or should be, at an end.

"H.B. 63 (Mrs. Lee's) is merely recognizing the mutual agreement aspect of the relationship and advancing to saying out loud that there can be no marriage when the agreement of the parties to live together is no longer present.

"The bill is not mandatory. It would merely allow the involved parties to elect to terminate the marriage in a civilized manner. It provides an alternative to long, sometimes bitter fights in the courts."

Mrs. Lee was a teacher and administrator in the Baltimore schools from 1931 to 1964. In 1964 she retired to devote full attention to her law practice.

She received the Bachelor of Science from Morgan; the A.M. from New York University and the J.D. from the University of Maryland Law School.

Ben Foreman to be sworn in as judge

Ben H. Foreman, 57-year-old East Baltimore lawyer, has been appointed to a Judgeship post in the Orphans Court.

Mr. Foreman, who is the first black person to be named to the three-member Court, will be sworn in on Monday at 10 a.m. during Courthouse ceremonies.

According to the native Texan, he was aware of his appointment only minutes before it was publically announced by Gov. Marvin Mandel last Wednesday in Annapolis.

"It sort of came fast to me, he said, I made an application for the post last year, but I didn't know, I heard rumors.

"I got the announcement the same day it was going to happen."

In the new post, Mr. Foreman will review cases pertaining to estates, such as family disputes and the contesting of wills.

Mr. Foreman has resided in Baltimore since 1937 with his wife, Mrs. Adele Foreman, a kindergarten teacher.

The Maryland Law School graduate began his full-time law practice here in 1969.

According to Mr. Foreman, he does not anticipate many major problems when he assumes the new post because "The bulk of my practice has always been in estate and probate work."

Pupils watch, teacher slain

By LILLIAN WIGGINS

What is considered a routine school day at the Parkview School, located at Warder and NEWTON Sts., NW exploded into bedlam Wedseday morning when a fifth grade teacher was killed.

Shot to death was Mrs. Margaret Brooks, 51, a teacher of more than 20 years. Being held for her death is her divorced husband, James Brooks.

It was reported that Mrs. Brooks, wearing a black dress, was addressing her class about the day's assignment when she looked up and spotted her ex-husband standing in the doorway.

As the police report goes, he entered the classroom from the right of the door and proceeded further into the room with the gun in his hand. Children began screaming and Mrs. Brooks ran from her room to "Fifth Grade Nesbitt's class."

Hot in chase after her, Mr. Brooks ran from the room, leaving the children crying and screaming, some falling to the floor. In Mrs. Nesbitt's room where Mrs. Brooks stood screaming with her hands reaching upwards towards her head, (one child described her to be seemingly "out of her mind" at this time), she was shot.

The bullet, according to the children, hit her "smack in the brains." She fell to the floor with blood oozing from her head.

It was said that the husband then left the room running and was subdued by three male teachers who jumped on him as he was leaving the building.

Wayne Bishop a student said that some of the children fled the building for home. His mother, Mrs. Lucille Bishop, was terribly upset on hearing the news and came to collect her children.

Dr. Hugh Scott, superintendent of D.C. Public Schools in a statement issued after the shooting called the killing a "senseless tragedy".

Dr. Scott said "we have lost a treasured staff member to an unlimely death which saddens us all."

Dr. Scott also said the administration will take all steps necessary to minimize the "traumatic effect" upon the pupils ecpecially those who witnessed the fatal shooting.

Mrs. Brooks had been teaching in District schools for 26 years, beginning her career in 1945.

When asked how she received the word so fast, her reply was that she had been called on the telephone.

While fier son, Wayne, was not in Mrs. Brooks room, this year, she had been another sons teacher several years ago. "She seem to have been a nice teacher," she said. Wayne interrupted her by saying "She was nice."

Mrs. Bishop described Mrs. Brooks as being "a little on the heavy side."

Another student Andrew Hooks, 6th grade, explaining what he saw, said "Mrs Hayes," (the principal, told everyone to get out of the room.

"From the hall I saw the man and he looked liked he had one of them big 48's. It even looked like it had a silencer on it," he concluded.

Saundra Leatherwood reported that they locked all doors.

Meanwhile parents, excited and confused, were running towards the school. Others came in cars. Whatever the mode of transportation the central aim of all was to take their children home.

One mother, dressed in a black leather coat with a close-cut good looking afro, said "I don't know about the rest of the mothers, but I am taking my child home: I might not let him come back the rest of this week."

Other parents that had crowded the sidewalk in front of the school commented that something had to be done. "Some of the teachers and parents may have their difference," said one parent, "but we can not have someone walking into the school killing them."

Many parents were concerned that the children who witnessed the killing may be permanently affected. It was rumored that most had been taken downtown by the police.

By this time the newsmen and television cameras were swarming all over the place. Once inside the building no one was permitted past the top of the stairs.

All were told that the principal was not making a statement at the moment.

Dental health week

Feb. 6-12 has been designated Children's Dental Health Week in Baltimore and throughout the nation and members of the Baltimore City Dental Society are planning a full program of activities to highlight the need for good oral hygiene habits.

The theme of this year's observance is "Happiness is a Healthy Mouth."

Features of the week in Baltimore will include a King and Queen of Smiles Contest, the third annual "Toothbrush Night" at a Baltimore Clipper's game at the Civic Center, a poster contest for school children, dental health window displays, bus and billboard posters featuring the theme of the week, public service radio and television announcements and special educational programs on area radio stations.

Also there will be the distribution of Dental Health Week flyers through the facilities of the Baltimore City Health Department, the Maryland State Pharmaceutical Association, the Baltimore City Dental Society Auxiliary and individual society members.

Hubbard is head of relocation

Robert Hubbard, assistant commissioner of the Department of Housing and Community Development, has been named chairman of a committee to play a major policy-making role on the treatment of persons displaced by federal and federally-assisted programs.

He will head the Relocation Committee of the National Association of Housing and Redevelopment Officials, and will serve on the board of governors of the 15,000 member organization.

The HCD Relocation-Division, headed by Warren W. Weaver, reports to Mr. Hubbard, who prior to his arrival in Baltimore in August, 1970, was director of the Philadelphia Centralized Relocation Agency.

The Relocation Committee will play an important role in the coming two years since the federal government is still establishing policy on the implementation of new and far-reaching relocation legislation.
