Economy meals for good eating

What's better than a pear?

A pair of pears, of course!

Now is a perfect time to indulge in pears in pairs — and also in triples, quadrupies, and more — because they're plentiful. The winter pear crop from the three Pacific coast states is 40 per cent larger than last year, and prices are favorable to consumers.

The main winter pear varieties are Anjou Bosc, Winter Nellis, and Comice. When shopping for pears, advises USDA's Consumer and Marketing Service, look for firm pears in all varieties.

The color depends on variety. In Anjou or Comice, look for light green to yellowish green; Bosc — greenish yellow to brownish yellow (the brown cast is caused by skin russeting, characteristic of the Bosc); Winter Nellis — Medium to light green.

Pears which are hard when you find them in the food store will probably ripen if kept at room temperature, but it is wise to select pears that have already begun to soften — to be reasonably sure that they will ripen satisfactory.

Avoid wilted or shriveled pears with dull-appearing skin and slight weakening of the flesh near the stem — which indicates immaturity. These pears will not ripen. Also avoid spots on the sides or blossom ends of the pear, which means that corky tissue may be underneath.

Serve sliced fresh pears on cooked or ready-to-eat cereal at breakfast time. For lunch, sweet, juicy pears are luscious in cottage cheese or gelatin salads.

Dinner uses include pear halves as hot garnishes for pork or poultry roasts, or delectable desserts of ice cream or cake (or both!) topped with pear slices and chocolate or fruit sauce.

This menu provides a day's nutritious meals, using fresh pears and other reasonably — priced and abundant foods:

BREAKFAST
Orange Juice
French Toast with Cinnamon and Sugar
Milk
Coffee or Tea

LUNCH
Split Pea Soup
Sliced Egg Sandwich
Baked Apple
Milk
Coffee or Tea

DINNER
Ham and Pears
Apricotine
Tossed Salad
Mashed Potatoes
Oatmeal Cookies
Milk
Coffee or Tea

Since pears and pork are both plentiful this month, why not put them together in a delicious dinner dish called Ham And Pears Apricotine:

Use one and one half pounds center-cut ham slice, cooked; Whole cloves, two fresh pears and three fourth apricot jam.

Stud edge of ham with cloves. Place in baking dish. Bake in a 375 degree oven about 20 minutes. Pare, halve and core pears. Cut lengthwise into thick slices. Place on ham and spoon jam over pears and ham. Bake 10 minutes longer. Cut into wedges to serve serve. Makes 6 servings.

A luncheon was held at the Lord Baltimore Hotel on Tuesday to discuss the role of Rapid Transit as part of the total concept of balanced transportation for the state.

Del. Howard J. Needle (D2nd Balto. county) announced the plans for individual membership and group membership to the Rapid Transit. Also announced by Del. Needle were new officers. His successor in the presidency is Thomas Toporovich.

Two of the four vice presidents elected were Kenneth O. Wilson, vice president in charge of advertising at the AFRO and State Senator Clarence Blount (D.5th).

Loucheon speaker was Harry R. Hughes, state secretary of transportation. Mr. Hughes told the 250 guest "We are not in the position today to talk about final decisions or if or when we will go the Legislature. I can tell you that a decision is near within the next 10 days or two weeks."

Hughes explained the Rapid Transity system has been in development for 10 years and over $2 million has been spent in planning.
