NAACP files suit against N.C. city

FAYETTEVILLE, N.C. — Charging that the Fayetteville Police Department widely discriminated against its black members and applicants, the NAACP has filed suit in the North Carolina Eastern Federal District Court calling for an injunction against local officials.

The class action suit was brought by nine black policemen and the North State Law Enforcement Officers Association, a private organization, on behalf of the 13 black members of the department.

Filed last November, the suit charged widespread violation of the 14th Amendment, guaranteeing equal protection under the law. It is similar to an action that was filed earlier in Philadelphia charging discrimination in the use of unfair tests and background investigations.

Named as the defendants are Chief of Police L. Fenton Worrell, the City's Civil Service Commission, Mayor Jackson F. Lee, the City Council and City Manager J. Guy Smith.

The suit noted that of the nearly 120 members of the police department, only 13 are black. Also, in all ranks, black police officers were under-represented. "There are only two black police officers above the rank of patrolman," the suit said.

The NAACP noted that the Police Department used a system of "illegitimate factors" in its written and oral tests to effectively block a "disproportionately high number of black applicants for employment" as compared with white."

These same factors were used to relegate the vast majority of black officers to the lowest rank in the department.

Doctor's Bizarre Death Reveals His Other Life As 'Playboy'

DOCTORS VEXED

Boy makes chairs flip, pans 'fly'

RICHMOND

What relationship does 10-year-old Jerry Eggleston have to the mysterious happenings that have been connected with his presence?

Why does furniture, including tables and church benches, flip over when he's around?

Why do dishes rattle and seemingly fly from shelves?

Why do lights flick on when the switch is "off"?

Is it a poltergeist phenomenon, or, translated a mischievous ghost that's causing all of this?

* * *

These are questions that bother Jerry Eggleston's folks.

They're also questions that two doctors at the University of Virginia are seeking answers to in their investigation of these unexplained movements.

The movements have caused quite a stir in Clayville, a rural settlement in Powhatan County just 35 miles west of Richmond.

But Jerry seems pleased at all the attention he's suddenly getting because of the strange happenings that have been associated with his new "powers."

When an AFRO news team visited him at the home of his foster parents in Clayville two weeks ago, he was getting the treatment of a young celebrity.

Dr. John Palmer of the University of Virginia was interviewing and snapping pictures of Jerry in the youngster's bedroom where many of the unexplained movements have occurred. And, in the little bungalow's living room, six curious neighbors sat around discussing what they had seen or heard in connection with the movements surrounding GUN FIRE alerts police in the hallway around the corner from Dr. Carrington's office, Monday night. The arrow points down the hallway shown in the center photo. Miss Johnnie Warren, shot three times, fell just outside his office (X). Miss Warren (R) was Carrington's receptionist for about a year.

Dapper dentist's love life bared after slayings

Russell H. Carrington Jr., known as a brilliant scholar, skilled dentist and successful businessman, was revealed in another light following his bizarre death Monday night.

Dr. Carrington, 38, copartner in the Garwyn Medical Center at Garrison Blvd. and Gwynns Falls Parkway, was shot to death by a police officer after he riddled the body of his receptionist, Miss Jonnie Warren, 23.

During the three hours before the fatal outburst of gunfire, Dr. Carrington held Miss Warren, described as "his former girlfriend," and another woman in his office despite pleas of fellow physicians and a former girlfriend rushed to the scene.

Dr. Carrington's role as a playboy came out of statements made to homicide detectives investigating Monday's tragedy

A small (just a little over 5 feet), dapper man who was well-dressed, Dr. Carrington won attention when he was awarded one of the largest grants ever given by the U.S. Public Health Service. He used the $83,000 to further his study of dental problems.

He went on after his graduation from Morgan State College to earn an M.S. and Ph.D. from the University of Kansas and a D.D.S. from Western Reserve University.

FOUNDED CENTER

Carrington was one of the original partners in the Garwyn Medical Associates, Inc., which built its medical center, completed in the Spring, 1967. The $¾ million center was the first of its kind in the city financed by black people.

His accomplishments do not tarnish with the first revelations of Dr. Carrington as a lady's man.

This side of the dentist was first hinted at in the police account of the hours Dr. Carrington spent holding his captives at gunpoint.

Police reported the doctor urged them to leave him alone, by saying, "It's only a domestic affair between me and my gir-

Hostage figure hurt in Vietnam

A spokesman at Perkins State Hospital told the AFRO on Thursday that William L. Morgan, 26, was admitted to the hospital on Jan. 11 and is now being evaluated.

Mr. Morgan was charged by police last Monday with armed robbery, kidnapping, and auto larceny. He approached Mrs. Barbara Brooks, a cashier at Sears Roebuck in Glen Burnie, stealing over $7,000 and leading her out of the building with a gun pointing at her head.

* * *

Mrs. Brooks stated "he did a lot of odd things, he drove at a moderate speed for three hours and obeyed all stop signs and traffic regulations." A procession of unmarked vehicles followed. He stopped at the corner of North and Greenmount and was persuaded to surrender.

Two policemen then crawled under the vehicle to deflate the tires. They then heard something about a trade when Morgan whispered whoever was closest to him if he got out would have to make a move to pull the hostage away for the gunman. As soon as Mrs. Brooks was pulled to safety, officer Malecki of-

Bishop Mills will retire in April

The Rt. Rev. Cedric Earl Mills, Episcopal Bishop of the Virgin Islands for the past nine years and former rector of St. James Church, Baltimore, will retire April 22 and leave the islands to live in Verdes Palos, Calif.

The new Virgin Island Bishop is the Rev. Edward Turner, white, a native of Alaska, who has lived in the islands for 13 years.

Bishop Mills and his wife, Mrs. Rebecca Mills, plan to live in California to be near their son, Mr. Damon Mills, his wife and three children, Kelly, Mark and Lisa.

During his nine years of residence in St. Thomas the Virgin Islands as the first resident Bishop Father Mills built new churches in St. John, St. Thomas and St. Croix. He saw a new parrish house and rectory built in Tortola; built a new office and apartement building in St. Thomas and erected a new school in Virgin Gorda.

"I feel firmly they need a-

Police describe dentist's murder

Here is report filed with Capt. John C. Bernold Jr. entitled, 'Double Homicide And Assault By Shooting:

"About 2015 hrs., Jan. 17, 1972, Det. David Bruce and Ronald Lamartino, responded to 2300 Garrison Blvd., the Garwyn Medical Center. On arrival, they were informed of the following incident.

"About 1741 hrs., Jan. 17, 1972, Off. Donald Loats, 612 car, N.W.D. responded to the Garwyn Medical Center to meet a nurse. On arrival, Off. Loats was met by Miss Marilyn McIvor, n/f, 20 yrs., 3908 Edgewood Rd., who was a receptionist for Dr. Russell Carrington.

* * *

"Miss McIvor informed the officer that Dr. Carrington was in his office and that he had a gun.

'DON'T KILL ME'

She stated that his secretary Johnnie Warren and another nurse were also in his office. Miss McIvor stated that they had been in his office for about twenty-five minutes and that she had heard arguing and also heard Johnnie Warren say "Please don't kill me."

Off. Loats called for assistance and Off. Louis Witte and Off. Thomas Leddon arrived at the scene.

TALKED TO HIM

"During the next couple of hours, several persons including Off. Witte, who disarmed himself and entered the room, Dr. Richard Harding, an associate of Dr. Carrington, Dr. William Hall and Mrs. Crisaundra King, former girl friend of Dr. Carrington went into Dr. Carrington's office and tried to talk him into giving up the gun, but no one was successful.

* * *

"About 2010 hrs., only Dr. Carrington, Johnnie Warren and Crisaundra King remained in the doctor's office. The door to Dr. Carrington's office opened and Mrs. King ran out of the room, then Johnnie Warren ran out of the room fol-

'Caucus 13' Director Talks About Group's Plans For Action

By HOWARD T. ROBINSON
Executive Director
Congressional Black Caucus

The constituency wants to know and we have an obligation to inform. The Congressional Black Caucus attempts to go beyond the obvious obligation, seeking every available opportunity to communicate with the black community and the public at-large.

We are grateful for this opportunity provided by the management of the AFRO-AMERICAN Newspaper to share with its readers the essentials of what we are attempting to accomplish.

Early last year when the 13 members, currently serving in the U.S. House of Representatives, took it upon themselves to unite their influence for all black Americans, a new page of black political history was written.

This group wanted to provide a united force and political coalition to develop a national agenda of priorities and to set into motion programs that demand positive awareness, ideal laws, and sensitive implementation to enhance the total quality of life for neglected Americans.

This was quite a challenge in the face of the administration's apparent unwillingness to deal with the problems of poor and black people. Someone had to be responsible for the implementation of these ideals — a Congressional Black Caucus staff of professionals.

Initially, as many readers know, the assembling of the staff of the Caucus was made possible by the successful fund-raising effort last June 18, in Washington, D.C. This event did provide money to assemble a staff, but by no means the complete professional group that our work and commitment require.

* * *

As executive director, I assumed my duties last Aug 1, and was able, with the assistance of a temporary administrative aide, Mrs. Edith Moore, to acquire some office space, some furniture, and some borrowed and rented office equipment and machines.

Two additional persons joined the team on Sept. 1, and the staff began its work toward realizing the goals set by the Congressional Black Caucus.

The question now in the minds of most readers is: What has the Caucus been doing? The anwer to this is threefold: (1) formulation of plans (2) implementation and (3) communications.

In planning we set out to identify, synthesize and, in general, to develop relationships with other black organizations and groups working in the communities. The general idea was the plan to hold public hearings and jointly-sponsored conferences with other black organizations.

Through this mechanism, it was the aim of the Congressional Black Caucus to develop a black consensus in terms of recommendations. These recommendations, hopefully, would provide much of the documentation and materials for the preparation of the National Black Agenda; with plans for completion by mid-April 1972.

We hope that the move toward unity by the Caucus will stir people to view it as a symbol of potential strength and unity.

Consequently, as demonstrated in our National Conference on the Status of Health in the Black Community at Meharry Medical College, our conferences are planned and sponsored, in many cases, with other leading black organizations and with the aid of black professionals.

As an example, the health conference was co-sponsored with the National Medical Association, the National Dental Association, Howard University, and Meharry.

In the coming months, it is our hope that the site of most of our conferences will be at black institutions. The health conference, again as exemple, was at Meharry Medical College.

Our next conference, on black enterprise, scheduled for January 27, 28, and 29, 1972, will be held at Morgan State College in Baltimore, Md.

This conference will be followed by one on education (date and place to be announced), which will be co-sponsored by a number of black organizations.

Also included in our plans is a set of public hearings on the white news media scheduled to be held in Washington in March of this year.

* * *

Following each conference and set of public hearings, the staff coordinates the compiling of the reports and recommendations. In addition to reporting this to the black community, we are adding another set of priorities to the National Black Agenda.

This leads me to our strong efforts to daily communicate with all Blacks in this country. In addition to a large volume of weekly correspondence, we have tried to widely distribute the Caucus newsletters and brochures.

Only recently, we announced increased emphasis on the analyzation of enacted legislation, and the description of the administrative guidelines.

The Caucus will then disseminate the factual information on a non-partisan basis to black elected officials, other community leaders, and the general public.

Half of our staff has been designated to work in the area of our Legislative Investigation Service. This team is committed to producing at least three analyses per month.

The summaries will study the effects of pieces of legislation, favorable or unfavorable, on the black community. We will attempt to point out what the bill really means, its relationship to other legislation, funds and their allocation, and the methods and guidelines used for administering
