THE TEMPTATIONS

From five unknown and inexperienced young Detroiters who wanted only to sing,The Temptations, compounding success after success to evolve from talented amateurs to stars to superstars, achieved and maintain their current status as the world's top male vocal group.

They are coming to the Lyric, for twoshows, Fri. Feb. 4th.

Melvin Franklin, Otis Williams, Dennis Edwards, Richard Street and Damon Harris are The Temptations combining experience and maturity with youth, enthusiasm and talent to sustain their unqualified success without compromise.

The story of the group's beginning as The Primes, with its sister group The Primettes (now The Supremes), is familiar to fans around the world. Their struggle for recognition and acceptance, the almost thankless early efforts and the slow but solid rewards have standardized the show business formula of paying one's dues.

Working with vitually every top record producer at Motown, The Temptations have generated a non-stop succession of hit tunes. As a result they have amassed a collection of platinum and gold discs that reflects many millions in sales during the years The Temptations have recorded at the studios of Hitsville, U.S.A. Yet Motown's skillful producers can capture on record only the exceptional sound, which is but a portion of the total impact of The Temptations live.

Put The Temptations on stage, give them an audience to entertain and watch them go. Breath-taking costumes, razor-sharp choreography and split-second lighting effects all add a powerful visual dimension to the flawless harmony and driving rhythm of their distinctive sound. Like five sticks of dynamite, The Temptations explode on stage with enormous energy, overwhelming the senses with sigot and sound that rocketed them to the top.

Musical Moments

By ADAH K. JENKINS

A teacher as well as a concert pianist, Roosevelt Newsome Jr. wisely arranged his program for the concert sponsored by the Piano Teachers Activities Group in a recent Sunday in Chambers Auditorium at Provident Hospital.

He offered the capacity audience of students, parents and teachers a broad aspect of piano music.

Included were the Fifteen Variations and Fugue by Beethoven; Four Bagatelles by Bartok; Schumann's "Carnival," a Debussy "Danse" and "Fig Leaf" by the black ragtime king, Scott Joplin.

It was not a recital to dazzle and possibly frighten the young musicians with technical power, but an occasion that inspired them with the beauty and communication possible with piano music.

Although the piano did not afford him the best instrument, Newman performed with admirable skill, demonstrating his flexible technic, sensitive phrasing and well contrasted expression.

Throughout there was preserved an atmosphere of intimacy that is most valuable for young listeners.

The event was dedicated to the memory of the late Mrs. Gwendolyn Lassiter, the active president of the Piano Teachers Activities.

For over ten years the organization has presented students of its members 76 monthly recitals as well as annual student auditions and parent-teacher meetings.

Annually demonstration lectures are given by leading piano instructors.

Following the Sunday recital a coffee-dessert hour was given for the pianist at the home of Mrs. Katrine White.

Members are: Mesdames Florence Carter, pres., Mildred Bryant, Lantha Clark, Miss Bernadine Howard, Mesdames Adajh Jenkins, Norma Robinson, Nellie Parker and Katrine White.

Young offenders report released

The Commission on Young Offenders has submitted its report to Governor Marvin Mandel, outlining major recommendations for handling individuals arrested and being processed in Maryland's Criminal Justice System beyond the State's Juvenile Court Jurisdiction (18 years of age), and not yet 25 years of age.

The 19-member Commission was chaired by Judge George B. Rasin, Administrative Judge of the Second Judicial Circuit, Chestertown, Maryland, and was made up of legislators and interested citizens.

The Commission on Young Offenders recommended against a special "youth authority" and instead suggested the following seven major improvements in Maryland's correctional system:

(1) Pre-trial diversionary programs should be utilized for the purpose of removing non-dangerous, amenable youthful offenders from the criminal justice system. These programs should provide the offender with vocational, educational, and follow-up services for the purpose of enabling the offender to demonstrate over a period of time his adjustment in the community.

(2) The State should begin to implement community-based correctional facilities and programs.

(3) The Division of Parole and Probation and the Division of Correction, should be given resources necessary to "purchase services" from private or public community-based programs providing employment, educational, counseling services, and other appropriate programs available to the offender in the community.

(4a) The Division of Correction should continue intensifying its efforts to obtain the cooperation of labor unions and employers in vocational training and job placement programs.

(4b) The Department of Public Safety and Correctional Services should initiate a review with appropriate State boards and agencies and associations, including the State Bar Associations, for the purpose of reducing barriers to employment posed by discrimination against ex-offenders and the unnecessary restrictions on the hiring and licensing of ex-offenders.

(5) In those subdivisions in the State where the criminal caseload has large numbers of young or youthful offenders, a youth court should be considered, with assigned judges aware of the purpose, objectives, and results of established pre-trial diversionary projects and community treatment programs.

(6) The Division of Correction of the Department of Public Safety and Correctional Services should have the capability to expand its social services to aid in the development of comprehensive pre-parole reports and community placement services.

24 million have tried pot, but use diminishes

WASHINGTON — An estimated 24 million Americans have tried marijuana but use decreases rapidly after age 25 indicating that people "outgrow it."

The National Commission on Marijuana and Drug Abuse gave the use figure and drew the conclusion in a preliminary report on its investigations issued last week.

Former Pennsylvania Gov. Raymond P. Shafer, the study commission chairman, presented the preliminary findings, which were based on a survey of 3,100 individuals.

The Shafer Commission was created by Congress in 1970, and it will make its final report March 22. The final report will discuss the medical effects of marijuana and make recommendations for its status under the law.

The preliminary survey showed marijuana smoking is heaviest among Americans aged 18 to 25 (15 per cent). Among those aged 12 to 17, an estimated 14 per cent have smoked marijuana. However, Shafer said, use falls off rapidly past the age of 25.

"One possible explanation seems to be that people outgrow it," Shafer said.

The survey estimated that of the 24 million Americans who have tried marijuana, 8,340,000 are still smoking. But Shafer said use is "more likely to be occasional than steady and infrequent rather than frequent."

Shafer said the study showed the largest part of the American population now believes that marijuana is not for them even if it were to become legal and available.

• • •

He said 81 per cent of adults and 73 per cent of youths who had never used marijuana said they would never use it in the future.

Shafer described as "remarkable" the "unsettled state of the public feeling about marijuana." He said the most confusion and misconceptions were evident in the 12-17 age group.

"Many (in this group) believe marijuana causes death," Shafer said. "Others believe it is physically addicting."

Calvert Education Center welding training course

The need for many trained welders in the Baltimore area has prompted the Adult Division of the Baltimore City Public Schools to establish a new Combination Welding shop containing 32 booths at the Calvert Education Center, 200 E. North Ave., according to Stanley J. McConner, Director of Adult Education.

The welding training center, largest in the state, is scheduled to open on Tuesday.

Classes will be held from 8 a.m. to 2:30 p.m. and 7 to 10 p.m., Monday through Friday.

The course has been planned to allow the maximum of time to actual welding under the supervision of specially trained welding instructors.

Training covers flat, vertical, overhead, and pipe welding according to existing standards.

Use of standard testing equipment is stressed and each trainee's job is rigidly inspected.

• • •

Related theory and special demonstrations will augument the practical work including reading shop drawings, study of special metal characteristics and welding symbols. Training will also be given in the adjustment of the flame, preliminary torch practice, welding angles, butt and vertical lap, and horizontal seam butt selding.

In the burning and cutting, the student will become familiar with the cutting torch, tips and attachments, cutting oxygen pressure, cutting speed, by hand and machine.

Mr. McConner states he hopes the many veterans discharged since Jan. 31, 1955 will avail themselves of this service under their veteran's benefits since there is an excellent job market for graduates.

A placement service is maintained for the graduate.

All adults interested in welding should contact Mr. Murray Faupel in Room 128 at the Calvert Center or call 467-4000, Ext. 2116 for additional details.

Mt. Royal x-ray center closes

The chest x-ray Screening Center at 11 East Mt. Royal Avenue, established in 1941 to examine military inductees into World War II, will be phased out at the end of March, 1972.

The center has had an interesting and continuous history over the years. About 1946, the x-ray equipment was modified to use the "small" film, making mass exposures practical.

Later, the program was broadened and opened to the public. In 1960 a tuberculin testing program was incorporated into the free services provided by the center.

In recent years, there have been some 25,000 persons tested annually. However, this stationary unit is no longer serving the community's need. In fact, there are no longer enough new active cases detected to warrant the costs.

Provisions have been made to contribute the x-ray equipment to the Baltimore City Health Department where it will see continued use. It was also pointed out that the city currently operates clinics throughout the area, as well as two state-provided mobile vans.

The decision by the state board of directors comes on a recommendation by the Baltimore City Tuberculosis Committee to support an earlier position stated by the National Tuberculosis and Respiratory Disease Association.

'The Mirror Man' has talking doll, witch

A toymaker, his mirrored image, a talking doll, and a witch will appear at The Baltimore Museum of Art in a program for young people Feb. 5th.

Sponsored by the museum's women's committee, the play "The Mirror Man" will be produced by the Children's Theatre Association of Baltimore under direction of Carl Pistilli.

The essence of the production is audience participation — the play's characters ask their young audience to make magic signs to release the Mirror Man into the real world and remove the witch's spell.

Brian Way, author, is a leader in theater for youth and has been honored by the American Education Theatre Association in Washington.

Performances are at 1 and 3 p.m., admission free to children of Museum members (one per membership card) or 50 cents on a first-come first served basis. Mrs. Robert Berney is chairman of the women's committee.

HOUSTON — The Preventive Law Center of Texas Southern University's School of Law received a grant of $125,000 from the City of Houston Model Cities Department. The money will be used to set up a center near the university campus, staffed by four attorneys and 25 law students.

Internal Revenue answers questions on raises in rent

The local office of the U.S. Internal Revenue Service answers questions most frequently asked about wages and prices.

Q. Are there controls on how much my landlord can raise my rent.

A. Yes New Price Commission regulations provide that a 2½ per cent annual rent increment may be added to the base rent to cover the landlord's operating costs, such as labor, electricity, gas, fuel, interest, etc. The increment must not be higher than 2½ per cent even if these costs are greater. This increment may be applied to month-to-month, week-to-week, and yearly leases. In addition, if there are increases in state or local real estate taxes, state and local fees and levies, or increases in charges for municipal services (exclusive of gas and electricity), these may be added onto the base rent and the increment increase.

Q. What information must a landlord include in a letter sent to a tenant notifying him of a proposed increase.

A. The letter must contain the following information: (1) the amount of monthly rent before and after the proposed increase; (2) the percentage increase and dollar amount of the proposed increase; (3) the effective date of the proposed increase; (4) the amount of the proposed increase which is attributable to capital improvements, state and local real estate taxes, and state and local fees, levies and charges for municipal services, and any increase allowed under the 2½ per cent rule; (5) the base rent and an explanation of the manner in which it was determined, including identification of units involved and dates and amounts of transactions where applicable; and (6) the method of computation of the proposed increase.

In addition, the letter must include statements approved by the Price Commission on the right of the tenant to examine the landlord's records documenting the increase and to meet with the landlord to discuss it, as well as a declaration by the lessor that the facts in the letter are true and that the increase is not in violation of Economic Stabilization regulations. The exact contents of these statements appear in the rent regulations.

Q. Does a landlord have to justify a rent increase of 2½ per cent.

A. No. However, he must notify a tenant in writing at least 30 days before a rent increase goes into effect.

Q. Can retailer satisfy obtain access to base price information only by asking the retailer for it?

A. No Prices are not considered to be displayed "prominently" if a shopper can obtain access only through requesting base price information from the retailer or one of his employees.

Q. I'm taking out a new life insurance policy. Will my insurance premiums be subject to price controls.

A. No. Fees charged for all new life insurance and annuities, with the exception of credit-life insurance, are exempt from Phase II price controls.

Q. Rent controls do not apply to commercial, non-resident property, but in general they do apply to existing residential property. How is property which is used both for commercial and residential purposes treated — for example, a building which is rented for office space and apartments.

A. The portion used for commercial purposes is exempt, but the portion used for residential purposes is subject to rent control.

Q. Can an auto dealer try to charge for equipment on a car that was previously handled as standard.

A. No. This would be a violation of the price controls.

Welfare reform forces to meet in Annapolis

The Maryland Task Force for Welfare Reform will conduct a legislative workshop (Operation Follow-thru), Thursday, Feb. 3, in the 1st Presbyterian Church, 144 Conduit St. in Annapolis, 9 a.m. to 4 p.m.

The purpose is to bring together statewide groups interested and involved in all aspects of the welfare situation with a view to educating the legislature and the general public on the needs, aspects and problems of the welfare client.

The first session of workshop deals with budget requests. Another session features speakers on any proposed legislation related to welfare.

Another session will educate and inform those attending as to the best means of approaching their representatives in the General Assembly and explaining their views and wishes.

The Legislative Workshop is sponsored by the Maryland Task, a statewide organization of some 125 organizations and county representatives, concerned with improving the lot of the 224,000 Marylanders dependent in whole or in part on public support.

Appointments are being made by Brock Hansen, Family and Children's Society, Annapolis, for a delegation from each county to meet with the legislators from that county in the afternoon. At that time each group will discuss its views and opinions with elected representatives.

Marion Williams appears at Albany State

ALBANY, Ga.—The Albany State College Education Achievement Project (CEAP) will present Marion Williams, one of America's great gospel voices, in a concert, Monday, Feb. 7, in the Sanford Hall Auditorium at 8:00 p.m.

Miss Williams has delighted audiences all over the world, from Alabama to Amsterdam to Africa, with her joyous gospel and folk songs.

Born in Miami of a West Indian father and South Carolinian mother, she was immediately exposed to various musical influences: gospel, jazz, blues, country and western, and calypso.

Perhaps most rewaring for Miss Williams have been her appearances in American colleges. She has sung at Harvard three times, and recently sang at many other colleges including Yale, Western Reserve, and the University of Massachusetts, among others.

KKK denied permit to hold parade

MONROE, N.C. — Police Chief Al Mauney revealed that he had refused a parade permit for a "Ku Klux Klan Parade" here by Klansmen who wanted to see black separatist Robert F. Williams brought here for "trial and hanging."

Williams, a former black leader here, fled in 1961 after being charged with kidnaping a white couple during a time of racial turmoil.

He lived for years in Cuba and later in Red China before returning to the United States.

He was currently living in Detroit, fighting extradition on the old kidnap charge.

Mauney said two residents of other North Carolina towns had requested a parade permit "supporting a move to bring black militant Robert Williams back to Monroe for trial and hanging."

Pam Fields and Bob Cole co-host this significant series of programs about black people, written and produced by black people —for the enlightenment of all people.
