Eighth birthday for Pamela Price

It was a birthday party, "Gino's style," for little Miss Pamela S. Price. Daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Price Jr. of Flannery Lane, she celebrated her eighth birthday last Sunday.

For the party, the young honoree wore an orchid and wine-colored dress. The bodice of the dress was made in the latest style "popcorn" fabric.

Her skirt, of crushed velvet, was highlighted with a satin belt, accented with an orchid-colored carnation.

Miss Price's grandparents are Mr. and Mrs. John Price, Chester, S.C. and Millard Ragin and the late Mrs. Lucille Ragin, Sumter, S.C.

Guests at the party were Davonne Spann, Latonia Johnson, Dorothy O'Bannon, Janell Watkins, Michele Gise, Laura Orandle, Brenda Miller, Patricia McRae, Kim Heath and Michele Brown.

MISS PAMELA PRICE

MISS JANICE ELAINE BLACKWELL will be married to Eddie M. West in May. The engagement was announced, this week by her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph S. Blackwell of Carlisle Ave. The bride-elect, a graduate of Forest Park High School, with a B.S. degree in education from Coppin State College, is with the Housing Authority. Mr. West graduated from the Luther B. Jackson High School in Cumberland, Va., and the R.E.T.S. Electronics School in New Jersey. He is currently with the transportation division of Baltimore Public Schools. Mr. West is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Edward West of Cumberland, Va.

Hints For Homemakers

INEZ KAISER

Well, the hustle and bustle of the busy holiday season is over. Although I complain about the demands on my time and energy, like everyone else, I secretly love it.

As most of my readers know by now, I love to cook and entertain. This past season was no exception, as I found myself setting many holiday tables.

Naturally, this meant doing many washloads of table linens, including my special holiday tablecloths, napkins and, of course, guest towels by the dozens. But, with CONCENTRATED "all" detergent as my confidence booster to help me, everything came out fine.

As a year-round user, I am well aware of the marvelous "3-B" combination of bleach, borax and brighteners in "all," but I was especially grateful for the safeness of its oxygen bleach. The reds and greens in my colorful linens came out just as bright last Christmas as they did the year before, and they will do just the same next year.

And since I had to spend no extra time worrying about which type of laundry detergent to use for each washload, you can imagine how happy I was with CONCENTRATED "all," which is safe for the entire family wash.

It works just as efficiently on my husband's shirts as on my fine lingerie. Believe me, "all" was in constant demand this holiday season.

MRS. BUTTERWORTH'S, TOO

But that isn't all that has been in constant demand these chilly wintry mornings.

Last week my two nieces came over to join us for Sunday morning breakfast before church. My son Ricky was home from college, so it very quickly turned into a real family affair with two sets of menus.

Ricky, my husband and Pat, the younger of my two nieces, wanted waffles, while my niece Joyce and I wanted sticky buns. The only thing everyone wanted was MRS. BUTTERWORTH'S Syrup!

So the two men and Pat had pecan waffles with MRS. BUTTERWORTH'S Syrup, while Joyce and I had delicious "Sticky Buns a la Inez."

They're simple to make. You just combine 2 tablespoons of MRS. BUTTERWORTH'S thick, rich mapley syrup with 1 teaspoon chopped nuts (I prefer pecans) in the bottom of a muffin tin. Then top with one of the many refrigerated packaged rolls on the market. Pop into the oven until rolls turn golden brown.

Nothing could be easier to prepare and there's no need to add any extra like butter because it's already blended into MRS. BUTTERWORTH'S Syrup. That's really what I call a bargain.

CLOSE-UP SMILES FOR ALL

Speaking of bargains, it really doesn't pay to buy anything until you're sure it offers you and your family the very most for your dollar—and that includes such items as toothpaste.

When my niece Joyce said to Pat, "Hop to it, Sis!," we all knew she meant for Pat to reach for CLOSE-UP.

Our family believes in good dental health as well as saving money and, believe me, CLOSE-UP toothpaste offers the very best deal there is.

Because I am in constant contact with people and because I just can't afford to offend; I was quick to appreciate the great benefits of this toothpaste and mouthwash in one. Now, my entire family has hopped on the bandwagon.

My husband Richard likes CLOSE-UP because of the time and energy it saves him. He has to get up very early in the morning and any time saved is very important to him.

My son Ricky says he also likes the fact that the one dentifrice does two jobs. Like so many of the younger generation; he is really turned on by the way CLOSE-UP whitens and brightens his teeth while freshening his breath at the same time.

At 22, the age when dating is terribly important; I'm sure Ricky especially appreciates the advantages of a CLOSE-UP smile.

So you see, CLOSE-UP has become a real family friend of the Kaisers. You might say we're really going steady!

DOVE DOES IT ALL!

Of course, being the lady of the house, I reserve the right to have some personal household favorites of my own. One of the best is DOVE LIQUID.

I know that I have been singing DOVE's praises for a long time and that I have converted most of my friends to using it, but I am constantly being reminded of how completely DOVE dishwashing liquid fills my needs.

Earlier I mentioned the busy holiday season just past; but you sure couldn't tell all the dishes I washed from the way my hands look.

Last Sunday morning, for instance, we got up to a very late start for church, so we hurriedly stacked the dishes and rushed off. When we returned home the dishes were still waiting—greasy, sticky syrup and all.

Well, I just got out my faithful friend DOVE LIQUID and, in a matter of minutes, all those greasy dishes and pans had been transformed into shiny, sparkling objects worthy of any homemaker's acclaim—and at no expense to my hands.

How can you complain when you're given the opportunity to impress your family with your homemaking abilities and give your hands a beauty treatment at the same time!

So try DOVE today and see what washing dishes with it will do for your hands. You'll soon find that the more you wash dishes, the more you need DOVE LIQUID.

-Miss Pinkett, Mr. Young

lace, long fitted lace sleeves and a Pope's train had been added. Her veil was attached to a spray of flowers contoured to her face, and she carried white orchids.

Miss Pinkett was attended by Miss Brenda Rice and Mrs. Linda Young, maid and matron of honor, respectively. Bridesmaids were Misses Scherrill Spender, Sarah Foster and Linda Young.

Miss Rice and Mrs. Young wore empire gowns of gold velvet, and the bridesmaids were gowned in Tyrol dresses of the same design. All wore flirtation veils attached to Dior bows that matched their gowns, and carried bouquets of red and gold mums.

Samuel Little was best man for Mr. Young. Ushers were Rudolph Hampton, Andrew Copeland, Richard Young and Michael Smith.

About 250 guests greeted the young couple at the reception.

For the wedding and reception Mrs. Pinkett chose an ensemble of lemon yellow and white brocade, with matching hat and nose veil. Mrs. Young also wore a brocade ensemble in white and gold. Both mothers wore white orchid corsages.

Back from a wedding trip to New York City, the newlywends are at home on Chatham Road.

The new Mrs. Young graduated from Western High School. Mr. Young, son of Mr. and Mrs. George R. Young Sr., is a graduate of Douglass High School. Both he and his bride are junior music majors at Morgan State College.

JOHNSON DAVIS was the honoree at a birthday party held recently at the Carousel Lounge. HE WAS CROWNED No. 1 M.C. in the city by Miss Vonda Maria, the queen of the evening. He was robed in a red velvet cape and jeweled crown. He's wearing a grey fur jump suit. Special guests included Hot Rod, Oris Johnson, Rocking Robin and Jim Parker. The party was directed by Miss Susan Monroe.

MISS ADRIENNE BRITT

By DEBBIE DUKE

While Adrienne Britt has had extensive experience in theatre, she finds that hosting a talk show is an unusual kind of challenge.

Miss Britt hosts Black Is . . . which through interviews, songs, dances, pantomines, and other dramatic sketches explores black contributions to our culture, produced by the Maryland Center for Public Broadcasting.

Miss Britt is originally from Omaha, Neb. Her high school days were spent in Topeka, Kan. She did undergraduate study in drama at Howard University and later earned a Master of Fine Arts from Catholic University.

For two years she taught speech and was involved with the theatre group at Johnson C. Smith College in Charlotte, N.C. Later she taught speech and drama at Morgan State.

Miss Britt combined her two interests, teaching and acting while associated with Theatre U. here. There she taught an acting course in addition to acting in and directing several productions. Besides her work with Theatre U., she has appeared in a few commercials and several productions of Theatre Hopkins. She also starred as Flora in Ted Shine's "Our Street" writer) "Flora's Kisses." She has also appeared as Clara on "Our Street."

In 1969 she auditioned and was chosen as host for "Black Is . . ." She has found that there is an art to interviewing people. A host must consider many factors in conducting an interview.

While she tries to establish a dialogue she must remain in command of the discussion. However, she must hold back on her own opinions so not to inhibit the guest. True dialogue becomes a question of balance.

First, says Miss Britt, "you try to ask the kinds of questions that will evoke a real response and not just a 'yes' or 'no.'" She has discovered that many people react very differently on camera. For example, the most articulate person can "freeze" while on the air.

In preparing for an interview, she reviews background information provided by Center staff writers. During a pre-tape discussion Adrienne attempts to establish rapport with her guests. As opposed to commercial talk shows which allot only a few minutes per guest, the "Black Is . . ." format allows for more-in-depth interviews.

Model Cities unit marks anniversary

Model Cities Community Council "A" recently observed its third anniversary with an Open House at the Martin De Porres Recreational Center at Valley and Eager Sts.

Joining in the day-long activities were other Model Cities projects, the Community Action Agency, various city agencies and other community groups. Included were Operation Champ; Emergency Parents Inc.; Neighborhood Economic Development Corporation; and the Baltimore City Police Department's Community Relations Division.

The council, at 1045 Hillen Street, claims a membership exceeding 200. It was instrumental in developing the East Baltimore Comprehensive Health Clinic, whose advisory board originated there.

Lee Douglas Jr., director of the council, remarked during the celebration:

"Council "A" has been and will continue to be first in recognizing the needs of the residents . . . Our goals are aligned with the priorities of this area, which are more jobs; better housing; better health services; increased economic stability; improved educational and recreational programs; and concentration of more efforts in the elimination of drugs."

According to Stanley Santos, chairman of the council, more than 1000 persons participated in the anniversary observation, which coincided with the opening of the Martin De Porres Center.

"A" Council, organized three years ago, is one of six community councils in inner city areas funded by the Model Cities Agency. The East Baltimore area which it covers has a population of approximately 16,550.
