Photography contest continues

All Baltimore photography buffs are being urged to submit their works to "Neighborhood Focus," a photograph contest being sponsored by the recently-opened Home Ownership Development Program.

The contest is open to all residents of Baltimore and pictures submitted must be of city neighborhoods.

Emphasis will be put on the diversity of architecture and styles of life in Baltimore neighborhoods.

Deadline for entries, which should be mailed or delivered to 401 N. Charles Street, is March 31 and all entries will become the property of the Program and will be used by the new office in their efforts to promote home ownership.

The top three entries will be treated to a luncheon date with Mayor William Donald Schaefer and all the former mayors of Baltimore: Thomas J. D'Alesandro, II; Theodore R. McKeldin; Phillip Goodman; Judge J. Harold Grady and Thomas J. D'Alesandro, Jr.

Joining the group at the luncheon will be the judges for the contest: Commissioner of Housing and Community Development Robert C. Embry, Jr., Professor of Art History Phoebe B. Stanton of Johns Hopkins University and Mrs. Naomi B. Camper, a civic activist.

The Home Ownership Development Program was opened in January by the Department of Housing and Community Development in response to 1970 census figures that indicated Baltimore's traditionally high rate of home ownership had begun a sharp decline.

Its goal is the sophistication and counselling of the public to a degree that all can intelligently wend their way through the home-buying process.

In addition to counselling, the program will also research and develop any programs that will eliminate obstacles to home ownership, assist those wishing to rehabilitate their home and generally promote the concept of home ownership.

For further information about the contest, call 685-1775.

RULES FOR PHOTO CONTEST

1. Only black and white photos will be accepted.
2. No Polaroid photos will be considered.
3. The name and address of the photographer must be attached to submittals as well as the location of the picture. A statement on whether the photographer is professional or amateur should also be attached.
4. As many entries as desired may be submitted.
5. Negatives of the winning photographs must be made available to contest officials and will be returned to the photographers.
6. All entrants must be city residents.
7. All photos must be of city neighborhoods.

Illustrious Women

MRS. ELVA EDWARDS

By PAULA M. BROOKS

Mrs. Elva J. Edwards has been associate director of Model Cities since May, 1969.

Mrs. Edwards is responsible for approximately 30 Model Cities programs being run throughout the city.

"I supervise the health, education, social security, public safety and justice, recreation, sanitation, man power and housing and economic development programs," she said.

"However," she added, "in each department, there is a program coordinator who works directly with each project."

Model Cities, an experimental program funded $10.5 million each year, started in Feb., 1968. "The program was intended to be a demonstration program, but it's done so well that it continued," Mrs. Edwards said.

Baltimore is one of 147 Model Cities in the united States. There is a branch in Prince Georges County.

Bound on the Northeast by North Ave., the Northwest by Druid Lake Dr., the west by Monroe St., the east by Broadway, the Southwest by Bush St. and the Southeast by Low St., the program includes 140,000 people.

Mrs. Edwards explained, "The downtown area is not included in the program, and there is a portion of the Harlem Park area excluded."

When asked how closely did youth work with the program, she said, "Throughout the year, youth in Model Cities neighborhoods are used as recreational aides.

"One aim in our program is to hire youths in the Model Cities Areas to give them a chance to do constructive work, while at the same time earning an income."

She said that she would like to continue to use the news media so that more people would know what Model Cities services are available to them.

A graduate of Central State University and the University of Pennsylvania, she is wed to Randolph T. Edwards an instructor at Booker T. Washington Junior High School.

The couple has two children Miss Cheryl Edwards, a graduate of the University of Maryland and a teacher at Lake Clifton High School, and Richard, 6, a pupil at Grace and St. Peter's Elementary School.

The Edwards Family attends the Holy Trinity Church.
