Drug abuse politicking no help—Dr. Manley

The best way the ordinary person can contribute to the combat of narcotic problems is to "vote for candidates who do things as opposed to talking," says Dr. Keith A. Manley, medical director of the Drug Abuse Clinic at Johns Hopkins Hospital.

He advises that the ordinary person in the community should be skeptical of all candidates until some proof of genuine concern is offered for solving the problem.

Dr. Manley points out that as election time draws near and drug abuse is now big news "there is much flexing of political muscle" as some politicians did in 1970.

On how to cure the problem he suggests the use of methadone treatment which, he says, has proved to be more effective even though not the most thorough.

"Recovering from heroin addiction is not much fun and is also very difficult. Methadone will take care of the physical dependence but this is just the beginning. The real cure is to change the previous way of life and resume education or work, find new friends, and fulfilment."

He called for public sympathy and understanding at this stage in the life of the recuperating addict.

Dr. Manley added the public should learn to get over the idea that it is risky to hire a former addict.

"The best way the 'straight' world can show its appreciation is by offering work, not praise, and at this point there is no legislation that can interfer with this privilege."

Festivities to welcome the Circus

Circus performers and animals from the Greatest Show on Earth will appear at Hopkins Plaza downtown on Monday, March 6, with Mayor William Donald Schaefer in ceremonies honoring the Ringling Bros. and Barnum and Bailey Circus.

Clowns, elephants and other circus acts will be on hand at the noontime ceremonies when Mayor Schaefer proclaims 'Circus Week in Baltimore" and presents representatives of the Ringling Circus with a key to the city.

The tribute is in honor of the Ringling Circus, which has established itself as one of the most popular of family entertainment events held annually downtown.

In the ten years it has been playing at the Civic Center, the circus has attracted almost 2,000,000 people to Baltimore's sports and entertainment area.

The Hopkins Plaza ceremony of them have created a tie in a Committee for Downtown, in cooperation with the First National Bank of Maryland, and is part of a week-long program of circus oriented activities being planned by the downtown business community.

Downtown stores, banks, and other businesses are using banners and posters saluting the circus and many of them have created special window displays incorporating the circus theme.

One hundred lamp posts in the downtown area are also being decorated with two-color banners saluting the circus which continues at the Civic Center through March 13.

Court finds two guilty of possession of drugs

A documented film of a scene of crime by the Police Department was part of evidence produced in Criminal Court Thursday which found two young men guilty of possession of illegal syringes for the purpose of illegally administering controlled substances.

However, the whole plan suffered somewhat when the silent film could not project its objects clearly.

The situation necessitated a second showing of the film and commentary run alongside it by Officer Thomas Smith, of the Department of Community Relations, a prosecution witness.

Judge David Ross handed down the guilty verdict as to Neil Allen Biven, 26, 200 block N. Fremont Ave., and Elmer Fisher, 23, 1800 block Chilon Rd.

Sentences were however withheld pending investigations by the Division of Probation and the Court as to whether the two men are drug addicts. Both men gave notice of appeal.

According to Jerry Richmond, state's attorney, on June 10, 1971 the two men engaged in illegal sale transaction of the syringe in the 800 block George St.

He said by special instruction, Officers Vernion May, Roger Nolan, Thomas Smith and Edward Block Jr., were detailed to watch the men and arrest them. It was during the watch that Officer Smith documented the film.

Biven's counsel, Gerald Kroop and Fisher's Allen Bloom, called on the court to dismiss the case because the prosecution had failed to proved its case.

They both contended that mere possession of the syringes does not prove that the defendants were addicts.

Choice of fish for Lenten meals

Now that all the Lenten season is in full sway, you may find ways to break the usualness of meals with meat alternates.

Whether or not you observe the Lenten season dietary regulations the markets offer many fine buys in fish and seafood. There is a choice of whole fish, fillets, steaks and shellfish.

When you buy a whole fish look for flesh that is firm yet elastic, bright clear full eyes and tightly adhering scales. Allow one pound of whole fish per serving.

Suggested buys in whole fish from the Chesapeake are Rockfish and white perch. Rockfish is particularly nice baked. White perch is best pan fried. Other fish suggestions are Hake, Mullet and Shad from the south. Shellfish is high in cost but the best shrimp buy is the medium sized shrimp. A good supply of oysters is available.

By using fish as the protein or meat alternate you can have more interesting meals. Fish is easy and quickly cooked. Overcooking toughens and causes fish to be dry and tasteless.

It will pay you to make your beef and pork selections from featured sale cuts. Wholesale prices of both beef and pork have increased and will be reflected in higher retail cost to the consumer. Forequarter cuts of beef with bone-in or boneless are suggested economies.

There is an ample supply of fresh vegetables to put variety in your meals. You make the selection on price ranges you can afford. Select economically priced old or new green cabbage, onions, carrots, white potatoes, kale or collard greens.

Supplement these with canned frozen vegetables. It is near the time when fresh mushroom season peaks. Nothing adds a gourmet touch like mushrooms. Vine ripened tomatoes from Florida and Mexico, asparagus from California are luxury items at present.

The fruit counter best buys are in citrus, grapefruit and temple oranges. Look for well formed thin skinned fruit heavy for its size for quality grapefruit. Temple oranges have a spicy flavor and are ideal for out of hand eating. Bananas are on the best buy list. For baked apples the best variety to select is Rome Beauty, and they are available.

At higher price ranges look for hothouse rhubarb, strawberries, watermelon and pineapples. Supplement these fresh fruits with the ample supplies of canned fruit cocktail and cling peaches. Grape juice is in heavy supply.

Hasty Haddock requires 2 pounds haddock fillets or other fish fillets, fresh or frozen; ½ teaspoon garlic salt, ½ cup instant mashed potato flakes, 1 cup chicken broth, 1 tablespoon chopped green onion, 1 tablespoons instant mashed potato flakes, and fat for frying. Thaw frozen fillets. Cut fillets into 6 portions. Sprinkle fish with salt and roll in potato flakes. Place fish in a single layer in hot fat in a 10 inch fry pan. Fry at moderate heat for 4 to 5 minutes or until brown. Turn carefully. Fry 4 to 5 minutes longer or until fish are brown and flake easily when tested with a fork. Drain on absorbent paper. Keep warm.

When all fish have been fried, add remaining ingredients. Simmer 1 to 2 minutes or until thick, stirring constantly. Pour sauce over fish. Makes 6 servings.

CCB sophomore wins CEEB scholarship

Miss Mary Moses, a sophomore at the Community College of Baltimore has been named by the College Entrance Examination Board as the recipient of an Upper Division Scholarship.

Miss Moses, who is completing her studies in law enforcement at the Community College of Baltimore, will be enrolled at the University of Maryland, College Park, in February.

According to Dr. Stephen J. Wright, Director of the Upper Division Scholarship Program, Miss Moses' award will cover part of the cost of tuition and fees, room and board, books, travel, and personal expenses during her junior year at the University of Maryland.

It is renewable for the senior year, depending upon the student's academic progress. The scholarship program is designed to aid minority students transferring from two-year colleges to four-year, degree-granting institutions to complete their studies for the baccalaureate degree.

Miss Moses is the daughter of Mrs. Lucy Moses of 851 George Street.

In addition to her high academic achievement, she has participated in numerous co-curricular activities. During Homecoming Day, 1970-71, she was selected by the Community College of Baltimore student body to reign as "Miss CCB."

Her sister, Gail, currently enrolled at the College, was elected "Miss CCB" for 1971-72.

Mary is interested in becoming a researcher in criminology and she anticipates pursuing graduate studies in this field, following completion of the baccalaureate degree.

tion, the program will "involve a massive effort to permit all children (prekindergarten through grade twelve) the right-to-read."

The new program, among a number initiated under Dr. Patterson which has come to light, consists of three facets:

1. emphasis on student improvement
2. organization of teacher retraining and
3. use of volunteers for reading improvement

Schools to be directly affected by the new program are: No. 32 Guilford Ave. Elementary School, 1634 Guilford Ave, No. 64 Liberty Elementary School, 3301 Maine Ave.; No. 24 Thomas Johnson Elementary School, 1610 Johnson St.; No. 100 Joseph Harrison Lockerman Elementaryary School; No. 216 Frankford Elementary School; Falls-taff Elementary School; No. 91 Gwynns Falls Park Junior High School; No. 239 Benjamin Franklin Junior High School; No. 40 Edmondson Senior High School and Northwestern Senior High School.

After a conference on the Impact of the Right-to-Read Program, two staff members. Mrs. Dorothy Clayborne, a senior teacher of the elementary remedial reading program and Mrs. Marie Francis, a department head at Harlem Park Junior High School were selected to head the program.

The plan of procedure and action for the project is:

1. Ten schools have been selected to become "Impact Schools."

2. Teams of teachers (supervisors, specialists, librarians) will be selected from the ten schools.

3. The teams will develop cooperatively a model for distribution based on successful strategies in the development of a rading program.

4. The model for distribution will be used to make the school from which each team comes an Impact School.

5. Each Impact school will be responsible for the distribution of the model in two other schools.

6. As a result of the pyramiding effort, all schools in the entire system will eventually be affected.

7. Each right-to-read school will have a Unit Task Force composed of parent representatives, students, teachers, administrators to oversee the implementation of the Right-to-read model in their school.

8. The distribution models for elementary and secondary schools will embody the following:

a. emphasis on diagnostic and prescriptive reading

b. emphasis on individualized instruction.

c. stress on successful practices in beginning reading

d. attention to development of reading skills in all the content areas.

e. focus on reading enjoyment and use of reading for self-development.

9. A Technical Assistance team supplied by the Office of Education will assist in planning of the model and dissemination of the above.

10. The first step toward unifying thinking and retraining in the teaching of reading is the conducting of two Saturday workshops at the Johns Hopkins University.

These will be held at Shriver Hall on March 11 and March 18 from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m.

11. Involved in the workshops, and the Right-to-read program will be teachers, students, administrators, aides, parents and interested, trained volunteers.

Dr. Carroll said, "The emphasis will be on the fact that we believe deeply that all children (borrowing the extremely atypical) can learn to read. After careful needs assessment, our system will demonstrate how a massive cooperative effort

Because Rosemont is a federally-assisted code enforcement area, loans are available to all qualified property owners at 3 per cent, and grants up to $3,500 are available to residents with income below $8,000 annually or whose housing cost exceeds one-fourth of their income.

Rosemont extends generally from Franklin St. to North Ave., and from Monroe St., to Gwynns Falls Park. Parts of it are as far south as Vine St., however.

Housing inspectors are visiting each of the more than 9,000 residences in the area, and seeing that every structure is brought into compliance with the Housing Code.

The city is also making improvements such as street lighting, planting street trees, and installing new traffic lights and signs.

"The Inner City Mother Goose" was removed from Model Cities' libraries throughout the city. Meanwhile, bookstores have reported the book is sold out and branch libraries reported a waiting list.

The Trustee Board met Monday and unanimously approved the library's book selection process as administered by Pratt Director Edwin Castagna.

Wilson remarked, "This book is selected on the same basis as all other books. I would support the staff's judgment and their decision to have the book available in our library."

One of Miss Merriam's poems reads as follows:

Other poems representative of "the Inner City Mother Goose" are:

My hair grow full.

At this Wednesday's Board of Estimates meeting, a provision was passed over the Comptroller's move to give $34,000 in supplementary funding to the Enoch Pratt Free Library.

Presxman did remark he was disappointed with the Library's trustees for approving the use of the book.

He said it teaches knifing and stealing, disrespect for the police and disrespect for the courts.

Mayor William Donald Schaefer told Pressman, "You want to penalize the Enoch Pratt system because of one book?"

The Mayor remarked the library has performed an outstanding service to the city of Baltimore.

The controversial verse in the book is entitled, "Boys and Girls Come Out to Play,' and goes like this:—

Boys and girls come out to play,
The moon doth shine as bright as day.
Leave your supper and leave your sleep,
And join your playfellows in the street.
Come with a whoop and come with a call:
Up, M—r f—s, against the wall.

Typical of other verses are the following:

"Hickety, Pickety, My Black Hen",
Hickety, pickety, my black hen,
Eggs for ladies and gentlemen,
Breakfast service graciously laid.
Gone with the wind: the sleep-in maid.
Another is entitled, "Little Jack Horner",
Little Jack Horner

Thumbing his first-grade book.
Look, Jack,
Look at blonde Jane and blue-eyedDick
And their nice white house
And their nice green lawn
And their nice clean town
And their dog that is brown.
Little Jack Horner,
Dumb in the corner,
Why don't you learn to read?

ee said a petition with 1,800 signatures (or 10 percent of the population) is desired.

Mrs. Morris said they have gotten about 400 signatures so far. Friday, March 3, DOCC members started a door-to-door campaign for signatures.

Once the requirements are met, Duprese said, funding will start retroactively from March 1, the beginning of a Model Cities fiscal year.

Area "D" center is at 1542 Clifton Ave. It serves the residents of the North Ave., Druid Hill Park, Monroe St. area.

Officers of DOCC are Mrs. Roberta Gaines, president; Mrs. Morris, vice president; Mrs. Waltyn Prettyman, secretary; Mrs. Ellen Gonzales, treasurer; and Mrs. Gladys Tyler, parliamentarian.

Officer Thomas Solomon trailed the bandits and with the help of other patrolmen closed on the suspects. Police report the men sensing the danger, abandoned the car and fled in different directions.

Police said one of them; later identified as Westmore, jumped out of the car with a paper bag in hand. The suspect is said to have ran into an alley and dumped the paper bag containing $2,400 into a trash can.

He was arrestted, police say, while trying to jumped over a fence in the rear of the 700 block Reservior St.

Police report the other suspect eluded them and managed to escape.

The cap, SEE 49, was later towed to the Western district police station.

Morgan. UMES 5's in tourney semis

DURHAM, N.C. Maryland entries advanced to the semi-finals of the Mid-Eastern Athletic Conference tournament Thursday, only to discover that both are underdogs for this evening's (Friday) contests at Duke University's Indoor Stadium.

Morgan State College whipped North Carolina Central, 51-46, and Maryland, Eastern Shore (formerly Maryland State) captured an exciting battle with South Carolina State, 80-77.

But there could be some debate between as to which gained the more dubious honor. The victories meant that Maryland must now go against the No. 1 team in the new conference, and Morgan awaits the tapoff against the No. 2 aggregation.

The Eastern Shore Hawks meet visitation champion A and T, and the Bears from Baltimore clash with runner-up in the regular season, Howard University.

It could be that coach Nat Frazier considers his task a difficult one, but easier than that facing Maryland. In their two games during the regular season, they split with the Bisons: The Aggies, on the other hand, are veterans of conference tournament victories, having won five titles in their last ten years, when all the MEAC teams except S.C. State were members of the Central Intercollegiate Athletic Association (CIAA).

Howard, incidentally, took the measure of last finisher Delaware State, 67-A 57, in the third game of the opening program. A and T, as champion of the seven-team league, drew a first-day bye.

In her game, Morgan was in control most of the way, holding a 30-22 lead at the intermission. However, the Eagles threw a genuine scare into the contest when Lewelyn Wood hit a jump-per from the corner that pulled within three points with only 27 seconds left!

Howard's Robert Jarvis led all first-day scorers with a 32-point output against the Hornets.

Winners of the two games tonight (Friday) meet in Saturday's finale for the title.

sonnel for extending themselves to accommodate the increases workload. He said, "The cooperation among all the branches of the system is most encouraging and gives added impetus for continued effort."

Allen noted the postponement rate for trials has increased over the last two years from 36.5 percent in 1970 to 23.2 per cent in 1971.

He said, "These signs point to a reasonable conclusion that the Criminal Justice System is improving despite the heinous crimes we read about almost daily in the newspapers, especially the staggering number of murders over the past year or so."

When one you care for has departed,
And you sit alone and broken hearted,
There's something in a kindred mind
