African festival on Howard campus

The African Studies and Research Program of Howard University is continuing its efforts to "light a candle" within the African Community.

It is in this spirit that the entire community is invited to share in an "African Affair" on April 27 and April 28, on campus, at Howard University. The theme of this affair is "Life in the African Community."

The program will consist of a presentation for school children within the University vicinity; an African market; a festival; African food, and dialogue.

Launching the festivities, Thursday evening April 27, at 7:00 will be the "Contact Africa Dancers."

APRIL 10

Work, play and physical therapy methods of keeping the retarded child occupied while developing him to his full potential will be discussed in a panel on Monday, April 10, at 8 p.m. The program is free, and the public is cordially invited to attend the continuing series of understanding the mentally retarded sponsored by the Pre-School Services Committee of the Baltimore Association for Retarded Children, Inc., at the Association's Sheltered Workshop at 4321 Old York Road.

C.C.B. board has important role in the development of the college

By Dr. SIDNEY KOBRE

The eight-member independent Board of Trustees of CCB plays an influential role in furthering the progress of the college and shaping its development.

The members represent business and professional occupations and ethnic groups and areas of the city.

The Student Government Association is represented by a student member who can present studentviewpoints and suggest plans and projects for student welfare. According to the college's charter, however, the student representative cannot vote.

When the college first began in 1947, it had no board of trustees. Baltimore Junior College was part of the city school system. The principal (he was not even a dean or president) reported to the assistant superintendent of education, who reported to the Board of School Commissioners.

PAUL BECKHAM is director of off-campus centers at the Community College of Baltimore.

Opportunity to provide leadership for the young educational institution was limited.

Later, in 1961, the college obtained a semi-independent board, but it was still composed ofmmembers of the City Board of School Commissioners. Mrs. Elizabeth Murphy Moss, a present member, served on the city board of school commissioners as well as on the new college board.

It was not until 1968 that a separate Community College Board of Trustees was authorized by law.

The board now could the concentrate exclusively on the college's problems and advancement.

The president of the college could exercise full leadership, had more authority and reported only to the institution's own trustees.

Of course, they were appointed by the mayor and confirmed by the City Council, hence accountable to the residents of the city.

The board now could monthly at the college, determises general policies under which the college operates and confirms key meetings, Board members appear before the City Council and state and federal agencies to get college budgets approved and to secure new building projects, such as the Harbor Campus.

Dr. John H. Moxley, III, serves as president, the other board members being Samuel Nocella, James Dorsey, Charles Tildon, Louis Doering, Mrs. Elizabeth Murphy Moss, and Mrs. Maurice Preelander. Dr. Harry Bard serves as secretary of the board.

Menefee Keynote speaker for CCB Citizens Day

By DR. SIDNEY KOBRE

A national authority on junior/community colleges, Selden Menefee will be the keynote speaker at Citizens' Day at the Community College of Baltimore on April 13, in connection with the Silver Anniversary of the college. The public is invited.

Mr. Menefee, a director of the American Association of Junior Colleges, with headquarters in Washington, will speak on "The Role of the Community College in Improving Urban Environments."

Discussing the economic, social, educational and cultural impact of the two-year institution on city life, Mr. Menefee will speak at 2 p.m. in the Campus Theatre of the college on Liberty Heights Ave.

* * *

During Citizens' Day, tours of the college buildings and campus will be conducted for visitors from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m.

Students may be observed at work in science laboratories, art and music studios, data processing workshops and allied health areas. Radio and television broadcasts will be demonstrated.

A pictorial exhibit of the college's growth since 1947 will be shown, and the CCB News Bureau will present a display of news, stories, feature articles and photos which the AFRO-AMERICAN has published during the past few years, contributing to the growth of the college.

A special exhibit of the Harbor Campus will be presented.

* * *

"We have invited civic leaders, educators, businessmen and representatives of the Model Cities Agency for this event, and we hope others who are interested will come and share with us our anniversary celebration," Dean Leona S. Morris, chairman of the anniversary celebration, said in an interview.

Parking is available at the Mondawmin Shopping Plaza, where a shuttle bus on a regular schedule will transfer visitors to the Liberty Campus.

Dean Morris will open the afternoon session, which begins at 2 p.m., and President Harry Bard, who will tell briefly about the factors causing the growth of the college, will introduce the speaker.

* * *

Mr. Menefee has a background in psychology, sociology and economics as well as in journalism. During World War II, following his teaching of sociology at the University of Washington, he was attracted to journalism.

After working for several daily papers he purchased a weekly newspaper in Fair Oaks, Calif., and ended up owning a chain of five papers. He sold the business in 1960.

Becoming interested in the junior college movement, he was appointed Government and Public Affairs Officer for the Los Rios Junior College District of California.

After serving with the United Nations Economic, Social and Cultural Organization (UNESCO) in India, he returned to the United States, being appointed to the staff of the American Association of Junior Colleges.

He has written books, monographs and numerous magazine articles on social problems.

One of his volumes is "Urban Youth: Their Characteristics and Economic Problems."

Another is, "The Pecan Shellers of San Antonio: the Problem of Underpaid and Unemployed Mexican Labor."

Mr. Menefee also wrote, "The Social Aspects of Housing," and a number of articles on junior colleges.

African potters to demonstrate hand pottery

Two young African potters will demonstrate hand-building pottery at the Morgan State College May 1 and at the Baltimore Museum of Arts on May 2.

'African Craftsmen in America," sponsored by the National Arts Council and the US section of the World Crafts Coundil, will feature Kofi Athey of Ghana and Ladi Kwali of Nigerial.

There purpose is to stimulate interest of America's black communities and colleges in little known, but still flourishing, art in Africa.

Michael Cardow, a British potter, responsible for the tour will also participate in the program.
