Rights Commission unable to end complaint backlog

By SCOTT PONEMONE

The viability of the state Human Relations Commission (HRC) diminishes directly with the length of time it takes to settle such urgent problems like hiring and promotion discrimination.

Currently, HRC Compliance Officer Louis W. Jones reports it takes as long as four months before a complaint is even handed to one of the Commission's seven investigators.

Philip Tierney, HRC general counsel told Commissioners at their April meeting his staff "was losing ground each month" in the complaint backlog.

Once cases get to an investigator, some are settled rather quickly while some require a Commission hearing to settle. Those cases that have actually gone to the commissioners often take over a year to settle.

Such cases include Armco Steel, United Fund and Hagerstown prison employees. The complainants in the latter two cases have come to Commission meetings and berated the commissioners on their sluggishness and timidness.

During the year ending June 1971, 380 employment complaints were received: 88 cases were settled; 93 were handed over to other agencies like the Equal Employment Opportunities Commission; 110 were given to investigators; and 88 had not been assigned during that year.

Mr. Jones said in April there were still over 100 cases received in 1971 that have not been given to an investigator.

Mrs. Lane K. Berk, commissioner, responded to Mr. Jones' report by complaining about the extent of paperwork done by the Commission staff.

She said, "Writing takes up so much time that there is no time left but to write, they have no time to do anything.

"When I look at the amount of action and the amount of writing, I am horrified."

She asked Mr. Jones if there was not a new system to give immediate consideration to urgent complaints and, if so, why no complaints filed in the first quarter of 1972 had not been acted upon.

Mr. Jones said the new system will not start until May 1, and later he explained the system to the AFRO.

He said complainants will fill in a questionnaire, be interviewed and a questionnaire will sent to the respondent (defendant). Upon that information an investigator will make a written finding.

Hopefully, he said, many cases can be settled at that level. If not, at least this system will get cases to Commission hearing level sooner.

The present influx of complaints, he said, has been averaging 40 per month.

He said seven investigators definitely make the agency understaffed, but said, "I am beginning to wonder with more staff members you get more cases also."

Dr. Saul M. Purdue, assistant school superintendent, told Pressman the Department only announced the possibilities of what activities would go according to the size of the budget cut.

He said he needs final Estimates Board recommendations before any definite cutbacks are made.

Most Estimates spectators were retired or pensioned city employees, some with as many as 46 years of service to the city.

Their spokesman, William Heinekamp, told the Board many members of the City Retired Employees Association have to live on "pensions below the poverty level."

He asked how they can live with human dignity without the City Fathers doing something. Many, including widows of police and firemen, are getting between $1,200 and $1,800 a year.

He asked either those with pensions less than $5,000 a year be given a 10 per cent cost of living raise or have their pensions transferred into the state Employee Retirement System.

The Mayor said he would consider a pension increase.

Black Experience program at MSC hears keynoter Dr. Poussaint

A Harvard psychiatrist urged that steps be taken by psychiatric people to meet the needs of Blacks.

Dr. Alvin F. Poussaint, professor of psychiatry at the Harvard University Medical School, in a speech at the second annual Conference on Philosophy and Contemporary Problems at Morgan State College, also suggested that black citizens put political and social pressure on psychiatric facilities that do not serve them.

Poussaint's address keynoted the opening of the three-day conference sponsored by the Morgan State department of philosphy, mostly to expose Morgan students to the philosophic movement and to help them to see the philosophical background of the protest movement and to help them to see the philosophical perspective between the black experience and the black protest movement.

In his speech, Poussaint said, "American psychiatry, like other institutions in this country, has been guilty of racism. Most of its practitioners and patients have been white and well-to-do.

"The general assumption has been that the American system is working in their favor and that it's up to the individual to adjust. For Blacks, this is clearly not the case.

Pioneers of modern psychiatry explained emotional disorders almost exclusively in the terms of the individual," he continued. "Because most of their personal and emotional problems stem from having had to live in a racist society, black citizens find such an approach completely reprehensible. We know too well that slum conditions, poverty and racial discrimination can outweigh the good effects of a healthy family on their personality development."

The black Harvard psychiatrist criticized white psychiatrists for not being trained to treat blacks. He said whites in the mental care field go through specialized training without seeing Blacks. "As a result, they've (whites) not had to openly confront their own prejudices," he noted.

The author of a book soon to be released, entitled, "Why Blacks Kill Blacks," Poussaint said that homicide is the second leading cause of death among young black males.

"The idea in this country," Poussaint declared, "is that violence is a way of problem solving."

Addressing themselves to the conference theme, "A New Look at the Black Experience," a number of persons appeared on the Murphy Auditorium Stage during the three days of sessions.

Among them were Imamu Baraka, Leroi Jones, Dr. Samuel D. Proctor, the holder of the Martin Luther King Memorial Chair at Rutgers University; J. Saunders Redding, noted author and literary critic and the Ernest L. White, professor of American Studies and Humane letters at Cornell University; Dr. C. L. R. James of Federal City College; and Dr. Jesse McDade, chairman of Afro-American Studies at Brown University.

Plans for city shutdown scrapped

In a complete turnabout of a former decision, Mayor Schaefer announced this week there will be no two-day city layoffs without pay.

This means plans for mass shutdown of the city government scheduled for Monday, May 1 and Tuesday, May 30 have been scrapped.

Instead of receiving a retroactive pay increase, city workers will get personal days leave of absence, over an eight month period.

By the city labor unions giving up their retroactive pay, Baltimore saves $1.5 million, the same amount it would have saved had the shutdowns taken place.

As a result of a ruling by the federal commission set up to deal with retroactive pay during the "freeze," the city was authorized to make good its promises of $1.5 million in increased pay to city workers.

The number of days off will be equivalent to the amount of back pay owed to an employee.

The Mayor said in a statement Tuesday afternoon:

"Our city employee unions have to come to me and asked me to reconsider an alternative, that they had previously rejected, which gives employees paid personal leave days in place of retroactive pay.

"These days would be staggered over the next eight months, but the cash savings would be immediate.

"There would be no interruption of services, garbage will be collected, schools will stay open."

This new plan has no effect on city workers as policemen and firemen, who would have gotten paid and been on the job, despite plans for a shutdown.

fight for the restoration of funds to the Baltimore School System."

Similar letters to other Board members (the Mayor, Board President Walter Orlinski, Public Works Director F. Pierce Linaweaver and Comptroller Hyman Pressman) asked them to restore the school budget.

On a Department of Education request to contract the Maryland Ballet Company for school performances, Coppin Professor Omenta Owens asked why have ballet if the schools can not afford music appreciation.

Orlinski said, "If Dr. Patterson (school superintendent) decides to cut music appreciation, it is not a decision of the Board of Estimates."

Comptroller Pressman then complained about Department of Education practices like prematurely spreading the word that budgets are tight.

He said it is a play by the Department to stir up students to oppose cuts in the school budget.

He added, "I want it known that this Board has not the intention to cut sports."

Angela jury out while diary argued

SAN JOSE, Calif. (UPI) — The Angela Davis jury was dismissed for the week Wednesday after the prosecution attempted to place in evidence an edited version of a previously rejected 18-page "diary" found in the cell of Soledad Brother" George Jackson.

Prosecutor Albert W. Harris Jr. said the document was of "critical importance" to the state's case that Miss Davis was so in love with the slain convict she plotted the Marin County kidnappings to gain his release.

Harris indicated previously that it contained references to a passionate "physical involvement" between the former UCLA philosophy instructor and the black revolutionary-author.

The pair had only one meeting, with their attorneys present, in a Marin County holding cell a year after the Aug. 7, 1970 kidnapings and shootings in which a judge and four others died.

Judge Richard E. Arnason earlier in the week ruled admissible as evidence three so-called love letters from 28-year-old Miss Davis to Jackson, but said the lengthy diary-type document was "immaterial" to the case. At the time, he said he might entertain a motion by Harris to present an edited version.

"I believe we now have an admissible document," Harris said, Wednesday. The defense objected strenuously.

Judge Arnason held a closed-door conference on the potential evidence, Thursday.

The contents of the document, presumably written by Miss Davis have never been made public. It was found in Jackson's San Quentin prison cell last August after he was killed in an alleged escape attempt in which three guards and two prison trustees died.

The state is attempting to prove that Miss Davis supplied the guns that Jackson's brother, Jonathan, took into the courtroom of Judge Harold Haley to free

A homicide squad spokesman told the AFRO five charges against McCaine were abated by his death during a hearing of the case at a Central District Criminal Court Thursday morning.

The spokesman also said a homicide charge against a policeman, Sgt. Richard Busey, of Baltimore County police department was dismissed.

Police records show the dead gunman was an escapee from Patuxent Institution where, since 1963, he had been serving an indetermined sentence for robbery and assault with intent to kill.

Police said he escaped from a Patuxent work release truck in downtown Baltimore on April 4.

The Lord is my shepherd; I shall not want.
He maketh me to lie down in green pastures; he leadeth me beside the still waters.
He restoreth my soul; he leadeth me in the paths of righteousness for his name's sake.
Yea, though I walk through the valley of the shadow of death, I will fear no evil; for thou art with me; thy rod and thy staff they comfort me.
Thou preparest a table before me in the presence of mine enemies; thou annointest my head with oil; my cup runneth over.
Surely goodness and mercy shall follow me all the days of my life; and I will dwell in the house of the Lord for ever.

MINOR — A Birthday tribute to the memory of our dear sister EVELYN MINOR, on her birthday April 27th, who departed this life August 9th, 1967.
No gift, no kiss on you to bestow.
Only a wish, a wish that is true;
Eternal peace, dear, just for you.
We'll always remember as time goes by,
And in our hearts you'll never die.
BROTHER, SISTER-IN-LAW and SISTERS

ROBINSON — A Birthday Tribute to the memory of my dear husband and our father BERNARD ROBINSON SR., on his birthday, April 30th, who passed away July 17th, 1971:
If I could have my fondest wish
The most wonderful in the world today
I would wrap it up in loving words
And send it on its way
And when the birthday morn, will dawn
I'll whisper soft and low:
"Please, God, let me have my loved one Back, because I miss him so."
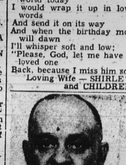
Loving Wife — SHIRLEY and CHILDREN



TABB — A Birthday Tribute to the memory of my husband, WILLIAM H. TABB, on his birthday, April 29th, who passed away October 11, 1968:
Memories are treasures,
No one can steal, death is a heartache
No one can heal.
Though others may forget you
Now that you are gone,
I shall always remember you,
No matter how long.
Loving Wife — VIRGINIA
