Reception for King Award authoress

A reception will be held to meet Baltimore author Miss Lillie Griselda Patterson, Friday, 1 p.m. in the special lounge of the College Center at Towson State College.

A former elementary school teacher, Miss Patterson is presently serving as Specialist in Library Services in local schools. She also helps coordinate two radio programs "Poetry Parade" and "Let's Tell a Story."

Both programs are sponsored by the public schools and are designed to interest both teachers and children in good literature.

She has received several awards for her writing including the Living Maker of Negro History Award, The Professional Award for creative and professional service to the city schools, and the first Coretta Scott King Award designed to commemorate the life, work and dreams of Dr. Martin Luther King, Jr.

The reception is being sponsored by the Children's Literature Committee at Towson State College.

Mrs. Nixon to be honorary chairman

Mrs. Richard Nixon has accepted the invitation of the National Children's Choir and the D.C. Youth Orchestra to act as honorary chairman of a benefit concert at the Concert Hall of Kennedy Center. The concert will be on May 10 at 8:30 p.m. with 225 children participating.

Early Childhood Centers Open House next week

Want to see Baltimore city public schools' prize-winning educational program in action?

Here is your chance! — The Model Early Childhood Learning Program, (MECLP), will hold open house May 1-5 now in its second year. MECLP was designed by Dr. Percy V. Williams, assistant superintendent of education for the State Department of Education.

Director of the program is Miss Betty Showell.

The program for preschoolers, ages 3-5, has been praised as an innovative, individualized, academic program designed to promote self-esteem and competence in learning.

It has received several citations for outstanding achievement in meeting the critical need existing for the development of learning sequences which develops basic skills, foster curiosity and maintain a desire among children to learn.

Outstanding award is the citations from the Educational Pacesetter Award, which was presented last month in Washington, by the President's National Advisory Council on further recognition for contributions to experimentation, creativity, and innovation in education, Mayor William Donald Schafer has proclaimed May 1-5 as "Model Early Childhood Learning Program Week".

In addition, the AFRO 1971 Honor Roll published two weeks ago cited the program's designer, Dr. Williams.

African art show at Towson

An outstanding exhibit of West African Tribal Art is currently on display at Towson State College in the main lobby, third floor lobby and board room of the new Administration Building.

The collection, on loan from the Phoenix Chase Galleries, is open for viewing from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. Monday through Friday.

The exhibit ranges from large masks used by dancers who performed ceremonies to drive away evil spirits to headdrases which were featured in agricultural rites to funerary figures which were at the family shrine.

To the African tribesmen who made them, the objects were not only art but also tools and utensils for daily use, clothing and jewelry for personal adornment, or representations of spiritual forces and things of great magical powers. In this form, art served to bridge the gap between the physical world and the supernatural.

Many West African tribes are included in the exhibit ranging from the Yoruba, one of the largest African tribes, numbering more than five million, and the Bambara, one of the leading tribes of the Sudan to several smaller groups.

Among the tribes represented in the exhibit are the Marka, Bambara, Bobo, Kurumba, Mossi, Baga, Guerze, Mende, Dan, Gio, Bassa, Krahn, Senufo, Guro, Baule, Lobi, Fon, Sao, Yoruba, Ibo, Ogoni, Bafo, Bakota and Dogon.

The loan of the exhibit was made possible through the efforts of Mr. Frank G. Roberts, Towson, whose large gift of his Oriental served as the catalyst to Ivory collection last year served as the catalyst to establish the fine Asian Arts Center at Towson State College.

Roberts is currently attempting to find donors to purchase this exhibit from its owners and present it to Towson State as a gift.

PTA schedules fashion show

The Parent-Teachers Association of Northwood School will have a fashion show, Wednesday, May 3, at the Fontaine Bleu.
