AFRO Writers Tell Of Election Night

MYLES

They stayed until P. J. showed up

By M. BERNARDINE MYLES

A crowd of more than 500 persons gathered at the Parren J. Mitchell (D., 7th) and Archie Williams campaign headquarters Election night, but most were unable to fit into the small building at Ellamont St. and North Ave. They spilled out onto the streets.

Although the headquarters were for both candidates, Mitchell for Congress and Williams for Associate Supreme Bench judge, only one set of vote tallies were posted, those for the congressman.

The general enthusiasm and anticipation of the crowd was more than enough for both candidates at 8:30, when Mitchell gained a one-thousand vote lead over opponent George L. Russell, City Solicitor.

At 11:25 the spirit seemed to be "It's all over now, we've got it in the bag", as vote totals showed Mitchell: 26,667 votes, Russell: 22,667.

A few spectators began leaving the headquarters site as if they were leaving a basketball game still in progress with the winner already obvious.

A "SOLD OUT" sign was later hung over the Russell vote figures.

Councilman Emerson Julian (D. 4th) was heard commenting, "The lamp is no longer lit for them (Russell supporters), their lamp is out."

Most Mitchell supporters remained until their candidate arrived and Parren Mitchell found himself almost crushed by the overly-enthusiastic group.

He breathlessly told supporters, "Someone almost knocked the air out of my lungs", but stated it was "all right because that weight out there wasn't against us."

PONEMORE

At Russell's, chairs began to empty

By SCOTT PONEMONE

A dozen ladies wearing plastic straw "George Russell for Congress" hats, some balloons on the walls, crepe paper, men shaking hands and expressing their optimism.

This was the early night atmosphere at Russell's Primary Election night headquarters at North and Pennsylvania Aves.

But, except for news reporters milling around, asking each other questions, and their tons of cameras, TV monitors, and steaming lights, you could not really tell this was the place for election night excitement.

Even when Mr. Russell led by 2,000 votes, people were uncertain, hesitant; smiles did not spread ear-to-ear.

In part, the trouble was the headquarters faired poorly in broadcasting the news of precincts won and overall vote count.

The tele board, stapled to the wall opposite the cameras, was left mostly untouched

By 11 p.m., when Congressman Mitchell took the lead and widened it, chairs began to empty. The fried chicken was gone; so was the beer.

Many did stay to congratulate Mr. Russell. City Councilwoman Victorine Adams sat by herself, playing with numbers to see if the few remaining precincts could offer a last-gasp surge to victory.

Mrs. Ethel Rich, who steadfastly manned the telephone and gathered voting returns, was not much in the mood to talk. "The chips fell," she said.

At midnight, Mr. Russell and his wife, Marion Russell rushed in the front door. They embraced and applauded. Smiles returned. Mr. Russell said how 'beautiful' it was that his future was uncertain and soon left to Sen. Verda Welcome's headquarters to give a similar message. The place quickly emptied.

Only hard work for the counters

By PAM WIDGEON

It was a calm and peaceful evening at the War Memorial Building downtown where workers were tabulating Tuesday's primary election votes.

Results were known to the public four hours after the polls were closed because of the speedy work that was being done.

On the second floor, in the spacious room where there were rows of tables, 110 cadets from the Police Academy were diligently counting the returns as they came in from pollings places. The cadets were counting votes by precinct and wards. After they completed counting and recording the votes on the tally sheets, they would then take them to the workers who were tabulating votes for the press and electronic medias.

The AFRO had four clerks on the scene who were also talling votes from AFRO's selected precincts. Other news reporters were busy calling in the results to their offices.

Election night excitement was missing. Few words were exchanged. It was just an exhausting and lengthy session of counting.

At 10:30, when returns showed George Russell leading in the 7th Congressional District race by a small percentage, this reporter headed uptown.

At Parren Mitchell's Ellamont St. headquarters, there was excitement galore. The streets were packed with people, traffic was tied up for blocks.

Unable to get a parking space within a four-block area, I then drove to George Russell's headquarters at Pennsylvania and North where the crowd was quiet and small.

So I returned to the War Memorial Building. Workers were still drinking coffee, eating donuts and counting votes. The time was 12:15. It was a long night.

'I will never forget the night . . .'—Dean

By WALTER R. DEAN

(ED's Note: Mr. Dean is a delegate from Baltimore's 5th District.)

I will never forget that night Parren Mitchell was re-elected to Congress. It was a fabulous night — crowded, hot, full of people excitingly talking about "beating the Establishment."

We had to wait for Parren Mitchell. Tension was high. Some 600 beautiful people were milling around, waiting to catch a glimpse of their hero.

Occasionally, someone would come out of the hot headquarters, with a megaphone, and give the crowd the latest figures.

Cheers punctured the night because the news was good — Parren was in the lead.

The crowd waited restlessly for Parren — and when his car appeared, the crowd became ecstatic. It yelled P.J.! P.J.!

The winner entered triumphantly.

I was part of the mob that crushed around Parren Mitchell. A security guard escorted the newly elected Congressman to protect him from the enthusiastic supporters.

It was as if a movie star had attended a first-night affair.

The scene was perfect, bright klieg light flooded the scene. Shrieks from the women. Extended hands from the men.

The crushing crowd. Everybody tried to get a glimpse of Parren, to touch his hand!

Magical is the only way to describe that scene: the huge mash of people meshed into one loving community.

That night will never be the people was the crush of love!

It was like Christmas in May!

By MARIE P. COOKE

"I ain't got time to drink no beer. I'm gonna stand here all night if I had to Lawd knows I am. My man gonna win and if he don't . . .well I ain't gonna think thata way."

What made an elderly matron stand outside in a crowd of nearly 500 people until after 1 a.m. on Tuesday when she could have been comfortably seated at home watching television or listening to the latest election results on the radio?

This writer can't answer that question and perhaps no one else can, but this particular senior citizen leaned against a nearby lamp post and didn't leave until the weary crowd finally disbursed well after 1 a.m.

One could have easily imagined it was a Christmas in May celebration at Parren Mitchell's Ellamont St. headquarters, but, of course, that wasn't the case at all.

As the night grew older, the crowd became larger and louder and livelier.

And it wasn't until nearly midnight when pandemonium reigned.

The election officials announced the final results.

Parren, their hero, would go on to the general elections in November.

There were no violent outbursts, but Congressman Mitchell's supporters showed their meaning of victory or happiness in the rarest form. They did their thing!

EVANS

Speechless, but happy with win

By PAUL EVANS

"This people's victory will lead him to being regarded as one of the most influential men in the Congress."

In his usual affable, soft-spoken, old school gentlemanly manner, Clarence M. Mitchell Jr., spokesman for the N.A.A.C.P. in Washington, summed up the meaning of his brother, Rep. Parren J. Mitchell, and the people's campaign which virtually ensured his election for a second term.

The congressman's brother remained calm within the massive, crushing swerve of supporters who packed the Ellamont St. headquarters Tuesday night to await the outcome of the Democratic Primary and then cheer lustily as the victory, in its entire sweetness, was proclaimed by Mitchell's corps of tabulators.

Tuesday night was the people's night.

Those citizens who are not affluent, not among the select in the black community in the city were the ones who sent Parren Mitchell back to Congress. And Mr. Mitchell, often on the verge of tears and taunting that night, could only acknowledge that fact and the chronic in a throaty, hushed voice, "It's utterly fantastic!"

An ingredient most particularly noteworthy in this campaign was the degree and level of participation by those who worked for Mitchell for nothing.

The housewives, the mothers, the college students, the youngsters were determinedly interested in the outcome of the election, because as Miss Sandy Dobson, a worker told the AFRO: "We had a future in this campaign and our belief in the 'system' was aiding with this man."

From the beginning, Mitchell has run this kind of 'ham and cheese and peanut butter, bologna and dime and nickel campaign.

Rep. Mitchell has always explained to the AFRO he is but a servant of the people — the same theory espoused by his colleague in the Congress Rep. Shirley A. Chisholm.

"The people's will best back the bosses and the manipulators. They provide the energy and the willpower," the congressman has said.

Tuesday night in the intense heat of the television spotlights and the national interest in his campaign, Mitchell reaffirmed his belief in the strength of blacks to control "their own destinies through the political process."

Throughout the long evening, optimism never left Mitchell supporters, even when other media reported he was behind.

Throughout Mitchell campaign has been intensified by bitterness in the Seventh District. His supporters felt "people will eventually come 'round to seeing what he is trying to do for them."

Among the politicians on hand to salute and share in the hour of triumph were Del. Joseph A. Chester (D.-2nd); Del. Troy Brailey (D.4th), Councilman Emerson R. Julian (D.4th), Del. Walter Dean (D.5th); Del. Kenneth Webster (D.5th), Judge Joseph C. Howard, Dr. Homer E. Favor, Norman V. A. Reeves, State Senators Clarence L. Blount (D.5th) and Clarence M. Mitchell III (D.4th) and Councilman Robert Douglas (D.4th).

Members of the congressman's family including Mrs. Juanita Jackson Mitchell, Michael Mitchell and Jimmy Gittings seemed to be so overwhelmed at the outpour of sentiment and support they were rendered speechless and could but smile and give the "V" sign for peace.

It was a night to remember.

McGovern, Humphrey, Wallace see delegates as campaign key

By PAUL EVANS

Senators Hubert Humphrey and George McGovern came into the Maryland Primary acknowledging George Wallace to be the favored winner in both the Free State and in Michigan.

The Wallace victory on Tuesday — though substantial with 39 per cent of the popular vote — has not daunted the supporters of either of the two Democratic presidential front-runners.

The word from the workers and financial backers of each man as Wallace swept through Maryland and Michigan Tuesday night was: "On to California" with the winner taking all of its 271 delegates.

Whomever is selected as the Democratic presidential nominee in July at Miami Beach needs a total of 1,509 delegates to secure the nomination.

Both McGovern and Humphrey supporters indicated from their headquarters Tuesday night that the number of delegates is the most important element in the campaign in these final weeks before the convention.

Humphrey supporters working from the Hilton Hotel and McGovern people, mostly young whites, working from a Charles St. headquarters, concentrated their attention on the national political puzzle seeing Maryland and the Wallace win fitting into the broad national plan mapped out in both camps.

The key, the AFRO was told by a McGovern supporter, is to enter the convention with as much "clout as possible." Both men, who received substantial black backing in Maryland, especially from the Seventh Congressional District carried by Humphrey, need to be as strong as possible in July.

In practical terms, Maryland is not and never has been a "swing state." Having only 53 Democratic delegates and 26 Republicans, the tough hard campaigning will pick up in the West as summer comes on. Thus, the reason for the almost non-appearance of Humphrey and McGovern and Wallace until last week.

Sen. Humphrey won 27 per cent of the popular vote and the five delegates from the seventh district. Sen. McGovern captured 22 per cent of the popular vote and 17 delegates mostly from the eighth congressional district in Montgomery County. Wallace took only three delegates from the other six districts.

By Maryland law, 48 delegates come from primary and five others, totalling 53, are elected at-large by the winning 48. Forty-one are to go to Wallace on the convention's first ballot, according to state law, though legal manuvering is about to deny Wallace any Maryland delegates by passing on the first ballot or just ignoring the Maryland statute which is not enforceable in Florida.

Tuesday night at Humphrey and McGovern headquarters was a two-fold theme: one eye on the national scene and the number of delegates gained by each candidate to shore the support of both another eye on the seventh congressional race where many of the McGovern workers hoped for a Mitchell victory.

Jaycees hold annual elections

The Jessup Jaycees inc. hosted the annual elections last Tuesday night as incumbent president Ron Plummer, challenged the newly elected officers to "reach out for, and obtain even greater goals in enlarged priemeters."

Newly elected officers are: Ronnie Rawlings, president; Leroy Jackson, Internal Vice President; Henry Jones, External-Vice President; Lester Johnson, State Director; William Vance, Executive Secretary; and Donald Callen, treasurer.

Five directors elected are: James Snelling, Edward Pendleton, Gilbert Artist, Leroy Spriggs and Lewis E. Williams.

The Jessup Jaycees gained wide recognition this year through their 'W.H.Y.' Drug abuse program designed to enlighten parents, teachers and youth on the causes and effects of drug mis-use.

W.H.Y. stands for "We Help Youths." Project W.H.Y. is accepted as part of the curriculum in the Howard County school system.

In Memoriam

BOND — In loving memory of my dear husband, GEORGE BOND, who passed away May 20, 1966:
I miss you dear, my heart is sore
As time goes on, I miss you more
Your loving smile, your gentle face
No one can ever take your place.
For me, I know you did your best.
I hope you find eternal rest.
Your Loving Wife,
SYLVENIA

MEACHEM — In loving memory of our dear brother FREAMON who passed away one year ago today May 17th, 1971:
The Lord is my light and my salvation;
Whom shall I fear?
The Lord is the strength of my life;
Of whom shall I be afraid?
When the wicked, even mine enemies and
Foes, came upon me to eat up my flesh,
They stumbled and fell.
Though a host should encamp against me,
My heart shall not fear;
Though war
Should arise against me, in this will I be confident.
One thing have I desired of the Lord,
That will I seek after; That I may dwell in
The house of the Lord all the days of my life,
To behold the beauty of the Lord, and to Inquire in his temple.
There comes a time
For all of us,
But faith and hope, and love and trust
Can never, never die. Although the curtain falls at last.
Is that a cause to grieve? The future
Is fairer than the past. If only we believe. And trust in God's eternal care.
So when the master calls Let's say that
Life is still more fair. Although the Curtain falls
LOVING BROTHERS and SISTERS

PHILLIPS — In loving memory of my dear wife, COLNELIA W. PHILLIES, who passed away May 20, 1968:
Do you know that God above
Created you for me to love?
He picked you out of all the rest
Because He knew I loved you best.
I had a heart, and it was true,
Take care of it, darling, as I have done.
For you have two. . .and I have none.
Husband
ROBERT L. PHILLIPS

CLARK — In loving memory of my dear wife ETHEL D. CLARK, who departed this life on May 20th, 1971:
I do not forget you, nor do I intend
I think of you often, and will to the end.
Gone and forgotten by some you may be,
But dear to my memory you ever will be.
Devoted Husband
JOHN T. CLARK
