Child to get unique care at new center

When the Children's Community Services, Inc. day care program at the Uplands development on Edmondson Avenue opens it will utilize some unique day care facilities.

Funded by a grant from the Maryland Department of Health and Mental Hygiene and by the Uplands' development management, the center will open with 45 children aged 3 to 12 years.

One teaching professional will be employed for every six children, and a physical therapist and consultant will be available to parents to help them follow their child's progress.

The center will have a "normalization" program for its retarded children, and will utilize foster grandparents, a program that serves the children and golden agers as well.

Assistance to participants in the program, which is open to all Maryland children, is based on family size and income.

Application for assistance for a child to enroll in the program can be made at Children's Community Services at the Uplands Development on Edmondson Avenue. Information can be obtained by calling 233-2318.

Morgan head inducted into honor society

Black colleges have a cial and unique mission to help America become the America it was intended to be.

Dr. King V. Cheek, Morgan State College president, said in his address to the spring meeting of the Eta Omega Chapter of Phi Alpha Theta International History Honor Society at Morgan State College.

Cheek said that black colleges and universities ... have represented the one vehicle of hope for black Americans. They have helped to give this nation vitality and strength, Dr. Cheek said. "History has amply demonstrated their worth."

One undergraduate and two graduate students were among the five persons inducted into the scholarly history organization following President Cheek's address.

Mrs. Annette Huff, a junior history major from Columbia, Md.; Nathaniel McFadden and Samuel J. DeCrispino, both graduate history students from Balto., were inducted into Eta Omega.

Kwang Timothy Kim, who has been on the Morgan history faculty since 1967, was also inducted into Phi Alpha Theta.

An assistant professor of history, he was elected to the international history group because of his work research in the field in the last few years.

According to Dr. Howard H. Bell, the chapter's adviser, the three new inductees have cumulative 3 plus academic averages.

The highlight of the meeting was the induction of Dr. Cheek, who is concluding his first full year as Morgan president, into honorary membership in Phi Alpha Theta.

He was selected for this honor because of his numerous and significant contributions to the academic world.

"More specifically," Dr. Bell stated, "the Eta Omega Chapter has selected President Cheek for this honor because of his encouragement of research, writing and teaching in history and related fields through his increasing efforts to make these endeavors more meaningful for those who participate."

MISSES DELORES REID and Paulette C. Johnson (l-r) both of Baltimore, have "won their wings" and are now stewardesses with Delta Air Lines. They were graduates of Edmondson High School and Carver Vocational Technical High Schools, respectively. Both completed training courses at the Atlantic Airport, and are based at New Orleans, La.

EEO counselor now on Aberdeen job

MRS. CHARLENE WOODSON
One of 40 EEO counselors at Aberdeen.

Mrs. Charlene Woodson is one of the more than 40 Equal Employment Opportunity counselors at Aberdeen Proving Ground who attempt to arrive at informal settlements of complaints by employees who believe they have been discriminated against.

A mathematician for over 15 years with the Analytical Branch, Mrs. Woodson is a native of Knoxville, Tenn.

She earned a B.S. degree in mathematics at Knoxville and taught elementary school in Philadelphia and Madisonville, Tenn., for two years.

She then attended the Tenn. Agricultural and Industrial State University in Nashville, where she received her permanent professional elementary education certificate.

The following four years Mrs. Woodson taught math at Northside High in Gretna, Va.

Enjoying hobbies like horse racing, reading, and astrology, Mrs. Woodson likes to talk with young people and says, with her the "generation gap doesn't exist."

Married to Fred Woodson, former Aberdeen Proving Ground post office employee, the couple has a daughter, Patricia, a junior at Hampton Institute.

(CUFF NOTE): Mrs. Woodson attributes her luck somewhat to her birthday, Christmas.
