

The programs also provide necessary goods and services to public agencies eligible to purchase them. Each institution operates a laundry which serves both the institution and other State agencies and institutions. Prisoners' earnings are credited to their respective institutional accounts. They may make certain expenditures during their incarceration, and the balance is payable to them upon release.

The Division of Classification and Education supervises the collection and recording of all information necessary to permit the proper classification of prisoners at each institution according to their abilities and to aid in their rehabilitation. Professional staffs render medical, psychiatric and psychological services in the institutions. Educational activities include academic instruction on both the elementary and secondary school levels, varied opportunities for advanced and specialized study, and programs of vocational and on-the-job training. The institutions also have complete programs of religious activities conducted by Chaplains employed on a full-time basis. Recreational programs are conducted at all institutions.

The Department of Correction annually inspects the county jails and the Baltimore City Jail and makes recommendations for their improvement (Code 1957, Art. 27, sec. 710).
