Mayor Schaefer, who met the congregation at the E. Preston St. building and walked with them througa East Baltimore in 85 degree weather, said he overheard one, of the deacons say, "We shouldn't be sad because we're leaving here; we should be happy: we should remember the good things that happened here but we have to move on."

• • •

The mayor told the congregation he was "honored" to be attending the service and, "On behalf of the City of Baltimore, let me salute each and every one of you."

Before the proclamation he said, "May I say in years to come, we'll look to you for help and we'll all took to the Lord for our strength."

MUSICAL MOMENTS

An Evening of the Arts remembers old Royal

By ADAH K. JENKINS

A vivid trip over memory bridge from the 1900's to 1972 with "An Evening Of the Arts;" was presented at Edmondson High School by Georganna Chester and the Music Department of the school under the sponsorship of the P.T.Student Association.

The production aimed to pay homage to the "Greats" of Baltimore who contributed to jazz, so that others "may be inspired to follow their footsteps."

With Mary West Miller narrating in her inimitable witty style the show moved, ably assisted by the stage band and a community professional group, Joe Blair Quintet.

Proceedings began in the Cotton Club of Harlem, jazz center, where Eubie Blake, Noble Sisle, Josephine Baker and many other stars of the period attracted world travellers. Judy Adams solied in the famous "St Louis Blues," with Ebony Steppers and the entire cast rocked the house with the Charleston.

Another jazz center, the Paramount Theatre in New York, was scene of the second act with Gail Smith in "A-Tisket-A-Tasket." Rodney Brown, in "Minnie the Moocher" and the dancing troup taking the stage in a jitterbug demonstration.

Then on to our own Royal Theatre in Baltimore where capacity audiences of black and white once crowded to witness star entertainers, Cab Calloway, Chick Webb, Ethel Ennis, to mention a few.

The Entones, a local group from Edmondson Village, did an admirable imitation of The Ink Spots and Delores Lynn, local professional, cleverly costumed as Billy Holiday, scored in "God Bless the Child."

In conclusion we were at Edmondson High School, in Jazz Now, led by the Edmondson Band under the direction of John Lamkin, with Supremes Plus 1, Corlina Goines and the entire cast in "Aquarius" that was a smashing success.

Old timers in the audience highly appreciated many of the numbers they had heard at the Royal, clapping enthusiastically along with the band in "Sweet Georgia Brown."

During the intermission Quentin Lawson, from City Hall, presented letters for the honored guests of the evening Eubie Blake, Chick Webb, Billie Holliday, Bill Kenny, Cab Calloway and Ethel Ennis.

Mrs. Anita Woodan, a long time friend of the Blake family and Mrs. Bessie Forester, sister of Chick Webb, received the letters. The mayor will personally award the citations at a later date.

Flowers were presented to Mrs. Chester and Miss Florence Shipman, of the music faculty, from the students.

An exciting postlude to the evening at Edmondson High School was Mrs. Chester's visit with Eubie Blake, who was in the city last week.

The 89-year old celebrity, exuberantly expressed his appreciation for Edmondson program, the recognition he has received from his home town, although his New York apartment is filled with citations and awards from communities over the country.

• • •

It's this writer's opinion that today's students are not avid readers of history, although publishers are flooding the market with material on blacks. "An Evening of the Arts" offers a delightful and authentic picture of black jazz when it struck the country and of the contributions of Baltimore's own jazz musicians.

It would be a valuable contribution for not only faculties and students but for the entire community if it could be repeated in high schools and colleges.

• • •

The Production represents a cooperative effort of the community as well as the school, spearheaded by the tireless efforts of Mrs. Chester in research, costuming and many other details of directing, with the highly competent assistant of Orville Johnson, choreographist, from Model Cities.

An art exhibition in the lobby was visited by many at the invitation of Lewis Richardson, principal.

Christian Scientists hold world meeting

Many Marylanders, who joined 7,000 other Christian Scientists from around the world at the annual meeting of their denomination in Boston, were told that the imperative of today is that each one heal one."

Arthur P. Wuth, the new chairman of The Christian Science Board of Directors, which is the denomination's top administrative body, called on people everywhere for "enlarged involvement in Christian healing."

"The first love of our church is spelled out," he said, "in its manual described purpose — 'To organize a church to commemorate the word and works of our Master, which should reinstate primitive Christianity and its lost element of healing."

Increased interest in Christian healing in overseas areas including Black Africa was reported at the meeting.

In Nigeria recently, a shipment of fifty copies of a Christian Science textbook was sold out by a single reading room in twenty-four hours — and a rush order placed for more," an official said.

"These Africans," he added, "most of whom have little English and little formal education, are not only reading the textbook; they are healing themselves and others with it."
