the past.

"Use as an example the George B. Murphy Homes. George B. Murphy Homes is one of the great projects in the city, yet it's now in a very short while of existence — a scene of great slums."

Mr. Jude's appointment to chair the nine-member commission marks the first time Mayor Schaefer has selected a black person to head a major city body.

Two other black persons serve on the commission, John L. Berry, retired insurance executive and veteran civic leader; and City Councilman Robert L. Douglass (D-2nd). Mr. Jude succeeds David Barton, who resigned earlier this year.

Other commissioners are: Roy Dragone, Charles S. Garland Jr., Mrs. Barr Harris, Mayor Schaefer and Pierce Linaweaver, director of the Department of Public Works. Executive director is Larry Reich.

In addition to his commitment to improve cultural outlook of citizens and restore their confidence in city government, Mr. Jude is on record as approving Mayor Schaefer's 3A Expressway System. The commission he heads has unanimously approved it.

In a special article written for the AFRO in March, 1972, Mr. Jude explained in depth what he called 'the people's stake in the city's 3A expressway system.'

The 3A system would complete the expressway route into the city from the Leakin Park on the west through the Franklin-Mulberry Corridor and southwest Baltimore, around exiting at key points on through to the northeast section of the city connecting with the Kennedy Expressway. It would connect with the Jones Falls Expressway system taking travellers into the heartland of Pennsylvania.

As to changes which would come in neighborhoods, Mr. Jude said: 'Baltimore city cannot survive as a viable, sound, healthy city without adequate highways that will enable raw materials of all kinds finished products of many thousand varieties to enter the city.

'Conversely, the city cannot survive if there are not adequate means of transportation to ship its products all around the nation and the world . . . .'

Mr. Jude who is advertising manager of the Baltimore AFRO-AMERICAN, has a long record of service in business and community affairs.

A member of the AFRO staff for the past 15 years, he was promoted to his present position last year.

Before joining the newspaper, he was a salesman and credit manager with three business firms, and a branch and district manager with N.C. Mutual Life Insurance Co.

A native of Richmond, Va., he attended Va. Union University and has done additional study at McCoy College, Johns Hopkins University.

He is a member of St. James Episcopal Church, where he has served as vestryman, junior warden, chairman of the finance and capital funds committees.

He is a former member of the Diocesan Interracial Commission.

He is president of the Greater Druid Hill Neighborhood Council, chairman of the Westside Coordinating Committee, composed of neighborhood action groups (NAG), Greater Druid Hill Neighborhood Council, Lower Park Heights Coordinating Council, Northwest Baltimore Corporation.

In addition, he is vice president of the St. James Terrace Apartments Inc., the 150-unit non-profit development operated by St. James Church.

He is active in the YMCA, NAACP, PALNA, Md. State Youth Board and has served as president of PTA Associations, the Underwriters' Association and the Whittier Ave. Neighborhood Association.

He is married to the former Vashti Minor, a specialist for federal projects in the Baltimore city schools.

They have two daughters, Mrs. Laura Gardner, an IBM systems engineer; and Mrs. Elise Mason, a senior law student at the University of Baltimore and wife of Fred Mason Jr., sales representative for Pet Milk Co.

There is one grandchild, Fred Mason 3rd. — I increased 0.9 per cent.

The index stood at 125.5, meaning that goods and services worth $10 in 1967 cost $12.55 last month.

BLS also reported that average wages of workers increased enough to cover the higher cost of living and to improve workers' purchasing power 0.4 per cent in July.

Assistant Treasury Secretary Edgar R. Fiedler said the reports were a "mixed bag" of good and bad news. But he added, "We expect to see further signs of a cutback in the pace of inflation before the end of the year."

The BLS survey was made during the first week in July, in which wholesale beef hit its 1972 record peak before turning into a decline.

Wholesale prices of steer carcasses in the week ending last Saturday dipped to 85.05 cents a pound, down 9.1 per cent from the 60.56 cents for the week ending July 8.

"We should be seeing this at retail," an Agriculture Department economist said.

How much of the wholesale decline will be passed on to consumers remains to be seen, Labor and Agriculture officials said. (UPI) black persons or of other minorities.

The next highest ranking black supervisors, Mr. Waters reported, are two ranks below him.

He explained "several" of his 25 group supervisors, who command staffs of 15 to 20 workers, are black people.

Mr. Waters commented, his district with headquarters in Baltimore and D.C. annually hires "technical people" (due to turnover) and these people have been 20 to 30 per cent black persons.

The Maryland District chief began his career as a deputy collector in Camden. After taking the executive development course, Mr. Waters was assigned assistant district director in Milwaukee, then promoted in 1970 to assistant director in Baltimore.

Mr. Waters is married to the former Miss Viva Edwards of Bridgeton, N.J. They have no children.
