600 at Hooper reunion held lakeside on their 300-acre Carolina farm

Over 600 relatives of Otis B. and Mrs. Bera M. Hooper of Baltimore were in attendance at a dedication ceremony Aug. 5, at the lake side of Mr. Hooper's uncle's farm in York, S.C.

Mr. Hooper says his uncle (Willie L. Davis), who is a very spry 79 and his wife (Amanda), 77, who is equally as spry, owners of the 300-acre farm, donated the area surrounding a fishing lake with swans gracefully swimming across the water.

The lake side was the scene of last year's family reunion where more than 800 relatives gathered.

Hugh McCorkle, president of the Bank of York, delivered the dedication address and said in his 10-minute speech that the members of this family should be extremely proud to be a descendant of the late Alex Davis and his two oldest survivors, W. L. Davis, 79, and David Davis, 75.

* * *

The dedication was in memory of Mr. Hooper's grandfather, the late Alex Davis, who died in 1947 at the age of 94, an ex-slave and father of 13 children.

Mr. McCorkle, who is a very handsome and spry 79 himself, remarked that W. L. Davis was a man of sincerity, humility and austere mannerism when it came to business, and the family should be very pleased to follow in his footsteps.

W. L. Davis has lived all his life on the farm with the exception of duty in France during World War I.

He is known for his knack for growing watermelons and also has a high regard for education.

He has great pride in his son, Herbert of Shelby, North Carolina; a graduate of Hampton Institute and a professional furniture maker; his daughter, Thelma, a school teacher in Rock Hill; and his other son, Carl, who is a very successful lawyer in Los Angeles, Calif.

* * *

The combination of a dedication program and a family reunion was organized by Otis B. Hooper of Baltimore, but a committee chaired by Mr. Hooper's Aunt Beliza Davis of Gastonia, and her co-workers, Romen Catheart, Gastonia; Mrs. Willie Beatty, Detroit; and Mrs. Nelsie Davis, York, were responsible for the unveiling of the monument that was inscribed "Alex Davis Park."

Also on the monument were the Founders — W. L. Davis, York; Amanda Davis, York; David Davis, Gastonia; Beliza Davis, Gastonia; Aurelia Davis, Clover; Dora Dixon, York; Otis Hooper, Baltimore; Bera Hooper, Baltimore.

Executive Committee — Nathaniel Davis Jr. — Chairman, Lawyer, Carl Davis — Co-Chairman, Mr. James Roger Davis — Treasurer; Mrs. Lee Esther Barber — Secretary, Reverend Robert Davis — Chaplin, Nathaniel Davis Sr. — Engineer;

Arrangement Committee — Mrs. Thelma Paden, Mrs. Theresa Massey, Mrs. Beatrice Davis, Miss Phyllis Paden, Mrs. Sarah Graham, Mrs. Reba Davis.

Charter Members — Catherine Adams, Cornell Adams, Benjamin Adams, Ernest Barnette, Geraldine Byous, George Cathcart, Beatrice Davis, Elaine Davis, Elmer Davis, Brenda Davis, Harper Davis Jr., Harper Davis Sr., Herbert Davis, O. D. Davis, Otis M. and Deadre Hooper, Willie M. Beatty, and Eddie Hooper.

Also, Willie Carl Davis, Olivia Dixon, Sarah Graham, Bessie Hairston and Daughters, Alexander B. Hooper, Dwight and Dwayne Hooper, Beryl Hooper Johnson, Theresa Massey, Johnnie Mary McCullen, Mattie Bell McCurley, Phyllis Paden, John E. Pressley, Lewis Pressley, James Tate, William Tate and Ella Pressley.

* * *

Mr. and Mrs. Thurmond Rhodes of Baltimore were honored guests of Mr. Hooper who was the organizer of the dedication program.

Mrs. Bera Hooper and Mrs. Thelma Paden pinned a flower on the honored guest while Miss Phyllis Paden sang "Give Me My Flowers While I Yet Live."

Fine Wright, local funeral director, contributed gracionsly to the occasion and also gave high tributes to the Davis family.

Theodore Meeks, who is an engineer at Boys Village, Cheltenham, Md., Lyn Wiley of York and Rev. A. O. Gwinn, pastor of the nearby New Home AME Church whose name was given by the late Alex Davis also gave remarkable tributes to the occasion.

Food was brought in picnic baskets by many members of the family and vegetable soup was prepared on the grounds by Mrs. Catherine Adams, Mrs. Myrtle Davis, and Mrs. Ella Pressley.

The ceremony was concluded by both white and black citizens standing, holding hands, and singing "Lift Every Voice And Sing."

Sort linens and keep them in neat piles in the linen closet.

40 off-campus centers take CCB courses to the students

By Dr. SIDNEY KOBRE

This is the first of a series of articles on educational opportunities at the 40 off-campus centers conducted by the Community College of Baltimore.

Because of the increased demand of residents, the Community College of Baltimore will expand its off-campus college centers in all sections of the city this fall, doubling the number of business and general education courses.

The courses, sponsored by the Division of Continuing Education, are located in high schools, Pratt library branches and other places.

The programs are designed for young people just out of high schools and for mature adults employed in manufacturing plants, wholesale concerns, department stores and specialty shops in downtown and neighborhood shopping centers.

"We are more than pleased with the response of area residents to these centers," explained Paul Beckham, director of the centers for CCB, in an interview for the AFRO-AMERICAN.

"We have expanded the number and types of courses, following our surveys of the wishes of last year's students and inquiries from other residents who wish to enroll."

CCB operates these centers in addition to the day and evening classes on the Liberty Campus.

At all locations, a student may work for the Associate in Arts degree, or a certificate, or just study the subjects to improve his business and professional position or to acquire wider educational background.

"Residents are responding not only because of the variety of courses being offered at the centers, but also because of the convenience of the centers' locations in the heart of the areas where they live," Mr. Beckham pointed out.

"People can reach the centers quickly, either by foot or by car, and once there, they can find plenty of parking space. The CCB educational centers are almost in the residents' backyard."

NORTHWESTERN CENTER

Many persons will take advantage of the business courses at the Northwestern Center, located in the Northwestern High School, Park Heights avenue and Fallstaff Road.

Students may study accounting principles and real estate brokerage.

Others may enroll in the English writing and mathematics classes — algebra and differential equations.

An introduction to social work will prepare many Northwesterners to enter this profession.

The course in the principles of early childhood education will help those working with small children.

Mr. Beckham pointed out that those interested in the background of one of the most acute contemporary problems — Crime—may study introduction, to law envorcement and corrections or police administration.

For general background and understanding of the world in which we live, Northwest Baltimore residents may enroll in the history of western civilization. Others may desire to learn more about American government, or state and local government.

The educator added that those who wish to explore psychology to learn more about human beings, and what causes them to do the things they do, may study a variety of courses, including introductory psychology, developmental psychology, or the early childhood education course.

Those interested in understanding people in their group relations, will study introductory sociology, the community and its organization, and race relations. A human relations workshop also will be conducted at Northwestern Center this fall.

PATTERSON CENTER

At the Patterson Center, located in the Patterson Park High School, 100 Kane Street, persons can study introduction to business for general background and then accounting principles, fundamentals of data processing, public speaking and English writing.

In addition to the introduction to psychology course, one in applied psychology will be found particularly useful. A physical science course will prove liable for those working in hospitals, clinics and research departments of companies as well as for those who want to learn more about the physical world around them.

Some East Baltimoreans prefer to learn more about literature, hence two courses in this subject will be given at the Patterson Center. In addition to introductory sociology course, one in social problems, and another in marriage and the family will be offered so that residents will get a better understanding of this important subject.

Registration by the Division Continuing Education is now being held on the Liberty Campus, Aug. 24-30, from 6:30 to 9 p.m., and on Aug. 25, from 4 to 8 p.m.

At the off-campus centers registration will be conducted Aug. 30 and 31, from 6:30 to 9 p.m. For further information, write Mr. Beckham, CCB, 2901 Liberty Heights (21215) or call 462-5800.

Baltimore City building schools costing $52,760,900

By BLAINE TAYLOR

Baltimore City Public Schools, under the leadership of Dr. Roland N. Patterson, school superintendent, is completing an ambitious school construction campaign, one very springing up all over the city, the majority of them black schools in the inner city.

* * *

When Baltimore City Public Schools open on Wed., Sept. 6, at least two nearly unique in the nation at this time, and one that was begun under the administration of former Mayor Thomas J. D'Alesandro III.

Just look around you! New buildings seem to be new facilities will be in operation.

Both of these are additions to existing elementary schools: new buildings at School No. 2, David E. Weglein, 200 S. Central Ave. and School No. 139, Charles Carroll of Carrollton, 22 N. Central Ave.

The addition at School No. 2 consists of five classrooms, a cafeteria, a kitchen and a gymnasium, at a contract cost of $1,173,000.

* * *

The cost at School No. 139 was $2,675,000, and this figure includes both the new school and the renovation of an older building, all of which mean 24 classrooms and two kindergarten rooms.

* * *

In all, there are thirteen such new projects now under construction, all slated for opening between Oct. 1972 and Sept. 1974, at a grand total cost of about $52,760,900.

* * *

They are the following, with projected contract cost, student capacity and opening date included:

Elementary schools: Nos. 122, Samuel Coleridge-Taylor, 507 W. Preston, $1,600,000, gymnasium, opening Oct. 1972; 254, Dr. Martin Luther King Jr., 3750 Greenspring, $3,100,000, opening Nov. 1972, student capacity 1,200; and 24, West Side, 2235 N. Fulton, $2,500,000, Nov. 1972, 850 capacity.

Also, Nos. 63, Rosemont, Pressman and Ashburton, $2,200,000, 850 students, March, 1973; 81, North Bend, 5201 N. Bend Rd., 850 students, $2,300,000, Sept. 1973; 28, William Pinderhughes, Fremont and Lauraens, 600 capacity, $1,030,000, Sept. 1973; and 36, Harford Heights, North and Broadway, $6,900,000, Sept. 1974, student capacity 2,550.

In addition, there are elementary school Nos. 157, George C. Kelson, Carey, near Pennsylvania, 850 students, $1,050,000, Oct. 1973; and 125, Furman Templeton, Pennsylvania Ave., $3,100,000, 850, Oct. 1973.

* * *

The other schools still under construction are: No. 451, Joseph C. Briscoe Special Education, W. Preston, $2,700,000, 400 capacity, Nov. 1972; 414, Dunbar Senior High School, 500 N. Caroline, (rebuilding), $11,300,000, Sept. 1974, 1,600; No. 82, Greenspring Junior High, 4701 Greenspring, $9,400,000, Feb. 1973, 2,000 student capacity; and No. 40, Lake Clifton Senior High, 2801 St. Lo Dr. (stadium to hold 2,000), $3,830,900, opening Dec.
