MUSICAL MOMENTS

Miss Caldwell married to Charles Harriford

By ADAH K. JENKINS

A combination of a solemnity and festivity accompanied the music for the marriage of Hansonia Caldwell and Charles Harriford, performed last Sunday at Knox Presbyterian Church.

Singing was the Etude Octet, a choral group, many members of which had known the bride from the days when she was a piano prodigy, playing concerts at 8 years of age at Morgan College, Park and Friends Schools.

Their offerings were an anthem by Purcell, two marriage hymns and the motet from "Jesu Priceless Treasure" by J. S. Bach; all sung a cappella, except "Ave Maria" by Rachmaninoff, after which Shirley Pinkett, soprano, was heard in two solos.

• • •

At the console was Ray Knight, minister of music at Knox Presbyterian Church while J. Spencer Hammond accompanied at the piano.

An instrumental ensemble played at the reception, with William Hathcock and Matthew Frailing, violinists; Henry Mays, cellist and James Williams, pianist.

A favorite native daughter, Hansonia began her career as a piano prodigy, appearing in concerts on television, radio and in schools and churches of Baltimore, Washington, Easton and New Jersey.

• • •

She was the first black musician in Baltimore to play a pinao concerto with an orchestra, the occasion being the Haydn Concerto in D major, with a community orchestra conducted by Chester Rowlett.

Several years later she played the Mozart Piano Concerto K. 488 and the Grieg A major with a community orchestra directed by Irving Wildhorn.

Hansonia was one of the three first black auditioned and accepted in the Baltimore Music Teachers Association and was the first black diploma winner in the National Piano Guild Auditorium.

• • •

During her career at Eastern High School she was a Deutsches Scholarship winner, being a student with your reviewer.

An honor student she led her graduating class at Boston University, majoring in piano and music history. Her masters achieved at University of Southern California she now received a $3000 award for her doctorate, which she is pursuing.

Mrs. Harriford is a member of the faculty at California State College, Dominiquez Hills.

Her husband is on the staff of the IBM in Los Angeles.
