Virgin Isle executive in line as head of Dixie governors

HILTON HEAD ISLAND, S.C. (UPI)—The first black chairman-elect of the Southern Governor's Conference says his selection marks a "maturing" of Dixie leadership.

Gov. Melvin H. Evans of the Virgin Islands was unanimously chosen vice chairman by the 17 governors Wednesday at the closing of the annual conference.

As vice chairman, Evans automatically becomes chairman in 1973, succeeding Gov. George Wallace of Alabama, who was inserted as the new chairman when South Carolina Gov. John C. West stepped aside in tribute to Wallace.

"When the southern governors elect George Wallace and a black Republican, then I think we've shown to the world an example of southern unity and progress," said West.

Wallace, who once stood in a school doorway and vowed "segregation forever," leaned from his wheelchair and clasped hands with Evans after the election as other governors stood and applauded.

Evans, smiling broadly after his selection, told friends and reporters that his election represents a "maturing of southern governors." He denied that his name was proposed to balance that of Wallace.

Wallace's political philosophy and presidential ambitions have long been a source of embarrassment to some "New South" Democratic governors. But there was no animosity in the Alabama governor's elevation Wednesday.

West said the chief executives picked Wallace "because he has shown courage in the face of extreme personal hardship." West was in line to move from vice chairman to chairman until his decision to give up the assignment and endorse Wallace.

Evans was the only governor to vote against the mildly worded resolution opposing forced busing, identical to the wording of a proposal endorsed by the southern governors in 1970.

Evans told the governors busing has been around for a long time, adding "it has provided educational opportunity for a lot of rural children they could not get in one-room schools."

Gov. Warren E. Hearnes of Missouri and several other governors expressed reservations against the resolution, but joined in voting for it. Gov. Jimmy Carter of Georgia endorsed the resolution because of the problems he said court-ordered busing has caused in places such as Augusta.

Wallace said nothing during the brief discussion, but Mississippi Gov. William Waller said the issue is a "dead horse", adding "this is not going to help the Supreme Court change its rule of law."

The governors accepted an invitation from Wallace to hold next year's conference in Alabama.

RETURNS HOME—Miss Sheila Newkirk, 16, reported missing since Aug. 18 by her mother, has returned home safely, the family reports.

ACLU blasts Gov. Mandel for school Board stand

The American Civil Liberties Union of Maryland, Prince Georges County chapter, has asked Gov. Mandel to fill a county school board vacancy with someone "who will reject the policy of resistance to desegregation which you enunciated last weekend."

Ailen Lenchek, Prince Georges ACLU chairman, said in a telegram to the governor:

"Your remarks about community fighting community, parents fighting parents and children fighting children' were an incitement to violence.

"Your charge that 'the courts have lost focus' represents a failure of leadership,' the telegram continued.

"Instead of encouraging resistance to court orders, you should be leading the public in respect for the law," Lenchek said.

"The appointee must be to complete peaceful desegregation and who will uphold the law and encourage parents and pupils to cooperate rather than fight," the message concluded.

The school board vacancy occurred with the death of Mrs. Phyllis Williams.

HCD relocation promises cost family $300 so far

By SCOTT PONEMONE

EDITOR'S NOTE. — According to the Department of Housing and Community Development, some 900 displacees (homeowners and tenants moved from areas where federal housing projects are to go) are due for a total of $2 million in supplemental payments (as much as $15,000 for homeowners) processed by HCD.

The AFRO has received numerous accounts of how displacees have been handled by HCD's relocation office. Reports are sometimes unfavorable, with stories of how people have been mislead, inconvenienced and underpaid by HCD.

The following article is an account of one families' experience with the relocation office.

Back in February, influenced by a promised $14,000 with which to buy a new house, John Bailey, 66, sold his 8-bedroom house in the 600 block Franklin St. to the city for $4,525.

Mr. Bailey's still lives on Franklin St. His attempt to buy a house back in March fell through because the city did not have the $14,000 and because, at 66, he was too old to take out a mortgage.

Now their Franklin St. home has been condemned by the city because the adjacent vacant house may collapse and structurally endanger the Bailey's home.

* * *

The Baileys including his wife, seven children and a daughter-in-law are forced to move, (hopefully, he said) temporarily into a 3-bedroom apartment house (without heat) in the 600 block N. Freemont Ave.

In three weeks, Mr. Bailey told the AFRO, he expects to buy a new home because, as announced in the AFRO, the Department of Housing and Community Development (HCD) finally received $2 million in federal funds.

As in Mr. Bailey's case, the federal funds are to be used to help place families, both home-owners and tenants, in new homes or new apartments after being displaced from federally funded housing project areas.

* * *

The Bailey home is on Lot 3 of the Orchard-Biddle Neighborhood Development Program area.

Mr. Bailey, a retired longshoreman, declared he was "not satisfied" with his 8-month acquaintance with HCD's relocation office.

He explained, according to the terms of the sale of his house, he could still live in the house for 90 days without having to pay the city rent, those 90 days have expired 4½ mos. ago and Mr. Bailey has paid the city $60 rent for those months or $300.

* * *

If the Baileys were not encouraged to sell their house until the city was in a position to immediately foward the $14,000 supplementary payment, i.e. within the past few weeks, the Baileys would not have had to pay the city rent.

Mr. Bailey is also disturbed about his house being condemned.

He said he thought the city wreckers were going to leave two vacant houses standing beside his home so his home would not be endangered if the end house collapse.

But city-contracted wreckers left only one house with wall — weakened by large hole at the basement level.

Why neighboring houses had to be torn down while people still lived on the block is not known.

William Perkins, president of the Oxford St. Improvement Association (the group that has vanguarded the effort to revitalize the Orchard-Biddle Corridor), has told the AFRO the plans are not even set for Orchard-Biddle lot 3 and the city will not need the land cleare until sometime next year.

When the AFRO talke to Mr. Bailey on Tuesday, he remarked HCD has promised to give him written assurance that HCD will present $14,000 for him to buy a new house when settlement of the purchase occurs.

'Operation Fort Meade' ends for city kids

By CHARLOTTE DIXON

"Operation Fort Meade" came to a close last Saturday after nine weeks of recreation and fun for approximately 2,500 underprivileged youngsters, ages 10 to 16 years, from Baltimore City.

For the second consecutive year, this installation has conducted "Operation Fort Meade," in coordination with the Mayor and City Council of Baltimore City and other city agencies, as part of the city's "Project Camp Concern."

Camp Concern, founded and organized by Captain James W. Smith, special projects supervisor, Bureau of Recreation, came about as a result of the Baltimore City civil disorders in the spring of 1968.

It is a program for disadvantaged youth which provides motivation and social development experiences intended to strengthen family living.

* * *

In addition to the Baltimore City agencies, Fort Meade, Fort Holabird, and Bainbridge Naval Training Center participated in the project, which is funded by the State Department of Social Services.

Approximately 125 children were transported daily (except Sunday) to Fort Meade, where they utilized one of the post swimming pools, the Youth Activities Association (YAA) multiplay areas and the consolidated mess.

"Every week we were invited to luncheons by different organizations at Fort Meade.

"We had lunch and dinner both at the Chapel Center one day.

"It was a rewarding experience for all of us."

Discussing the program further, he said, "I have never seen such enthusiastic youngsters.

"Those who just completed their camp here are eagerly anticipating their return to Fort Meade next year."

Camper was expected to attend Operation Fort Meade for six continuous days; however, some substitutions were made and many additional campers were allowed to attend.

* * *

Accompanying the children on their daily trips were Ralph Lee, assistant camp director, and Gonzales Jacobs, programs supervisor.

Mr. Lee and Mr. Jacobs were assisted by staff members Wade Allen, Michael Crouse, Ronnie Miles, Stanley Mitchell, Donna Wright and Al Robinson, all of Baltimore City.

All staff members are college students and members of the In-School Neighborhood Youth Corps.

* * *

Activities of the campers consisted of two hours of swimming in the [illegible], hiking to the consolidated mess for their noon meal, and hiking to the Youth Activities Association recreation areas where they participated in all types of games and sports during the afternoons. At 4 p.m. they began the trek back to the consolidated mess for their evening meal, thereafter departing by bus for Baltimore.

* * *

During closing exercises last week for this year's "Operation Fort Meade," the post was awarded a large trophy by Camp Concern personnel to show their appreciation.

Twelve additional trophies were presented to various post and mess personnel and YAA assistants.

Colonel John E. Lance Jr., post commander, and George Fountain, equal employment opportunity officer, received certificates of merit.

* * *

How did the children enjoy their days at Fort Meade?

"They loved it," says Ralph Lee. "They showed so much enthusiasm and said the days went by too fast.

"They just didn't have enough time down here."

He continued, "When Operation Fort Meade started here last winter, I cam down with 60 kids every Saturday.

"That was part of the follow-up program of Camp Concern.

"The kids were given membership cards, used the teen club, attended dances free of charge, attended all kinds of civic events and used your YAA gym.

"Every week we were invited to luncheon by different organizations at Fort Meade.

"We had lunch and dinner both at the Chapel Center one day.

"It was a rewarding experience for all of us."

Discussing the program further, he said, "I have never seen such enthusiastic youngsters.

"Those who just completed their camp here are eagerly anticipating their return to Fort Meade next year."

Man pleads guilty to selling drugs

"I know I was wrong. I want another chance. I hope society understands some people do make mistakes, and I have learned this time that I was wrong. I am changing my life. I was using drugs, I've tried everyting."

The above statement was made by Earl R. Hedgepeth, 27, 2255 Cecil Ave., Tuesday in Criminal Court, when he pleaded guilty to narcotic violations and was sentence to 30 months imprisonment by Judge Marshall Levin.

States Attorney James K. Eagen told the court that on June 30, 1971, Police Officer Donald Schlines, armed with a search and seizure warrant, went to the apartment of Mr. Hedgepeth in the unit block of W. Preston St., where he was living at the time. The defendant was not home and the door was forced open.

Upon entering the apartment, the States Attorney explained, the officer found one plastic bag containing green brown substance, a glass jar with green brown substance, one manila envelope with a green brown substance, two pink and purple capsules with white powder in a plastic bag, seven plastic bags containing orange tablets, eight packs of cigarette paper, a smoking pipe with residue, 21 blank prescription pads, a copy of purchase receipt for a car and other personal papers in the name of Earl Hedgepeth.

The court was told the officer waited until 9:25 a.m. when the defendant arrived home and was placed under arrest and taken to Central District where he was arrested and released on bail.

Mr. Hedgepeth was to appear in court for trial in February, but defense attorney Michael Kaminkow told the court "He did not appear for his first trial date in February because he was too frighten to face the problem he had."

Court records show that Mr. Hedgepeth has completed high school and has had one year of college. He was previously enroled in the apprentice program at Bethlehem Steel where he was the only black person.

The defendant's attorney told the court that Mr. Hedgepeth has had heroin experience and got involved in drugs when he started smoking grass.

He revealed that he has only sold drugs for four or five months and was then arrested and released on bail.

Drug abuse chief, Green, denies attempting to sidestep mandates

A brief and to-the-point letter from Philip Green, director of the Drug Abuse Administration, answered charges that the DAA was attempting to "side step" recommendations made by the state Senate Finance Committee.

In the letter, to Sen. John J. Bishop Jr., who had levied the charges, Green said:

"Your letter states that you have information that the Drug Abuse Administration has transferred positions to local authorities; therefore, I find it necessary for me to advise you that no positions have been given to any local authorities or any other agencies.

"All have been abolished or are in the process of being abolished and the monies applied to treatment programs through the grant funds mechanism," the DAA head said.

He also said, "The Drug Abuse Administration has strictly conformed to the mandate of the Joint Committee and the direction given from Dr. Neil Solomon, both to the spirit and the letter of its mandate."

Green added, "official papers which accomplish this abolishment were abolished and not transferred or given to any of positions are in the Office of Budget and Fiscal Planning and/or the Personnel Office of the Department of Health and Mental Hygiene for anybody's inspection that wishes to verify this fact."

Forest Park neighbors asked to meet

Del. Kenneth L. Webster and Joseph Henley are jointly announcing, as co-chairmen of the program committee of the Forest Park Neighborhood Organization, a general meeting for the residents of the Forest Park Neighborhood Organization area which is bounded by Garrison Boulevard on the north, Hilton Street on the south, Springdale Avenue on the west and Liberty Heights Avenue on the east.

Del. Webster said that the meeting is being called for several reasons including:

To make the residents of the community aware of the fact that living conditions are declining and steps should be taken to improve these conditions.

To increase membership in the Forest Park Neighborhood Association, and

To provide an opportunity for the people in the community to meet their elected officials from this area and also to meet congressional candidates in the general election this year.

The meeting will be on Sunday, Sept. 10, at 5 p.m. at the St. Mark Methodist Church auditorium, located at the corner of Liberty Heights and Garrison Avenues.

Medicare records to be public

The names of providers of services, physicians, and other persons who have been found guilty by a federal court of submitting false claims in connection with the furnishing of services to Medicare beneficiaries will become available with the enactment of proposed regulations.

Elliot L. Richardson, Health, Education and Welfare secretary, who announced the proposal, stressed that the regulations would not change the confidential nature of individual Medicare-beneficiary records.

Also among the records to be made available, he said, would be survey reports of hospitals, extended care facilities, home health agencies, and independent laboratories, prepared for the Medicare program by state health agencies.

Since these reports may contain findings of deficiencies that could affect the health and safety of patients, the institution's comments on the findings and information as to corrective actions taken would also be provided along with the reports.

The proposed regulation would apply only to reports prepared on or after the regulation becomes effective.

The information about a particular institution would be available on request at the social security office serving the area in which the health facility is located.

Unordered goods are free for you, says BBB

If you get unordered goods in the mail, you don't have to pay for it.

That's the word CBBB has received from the Federal government.

July 1, a new law was enacted saying any goods, wares or merchandise not actually ordered or requested by you are deemed an unconditional gift to you.

Legally, there are only two kinds of merchandise that can be sent through the mails to you without your consent or agreement.

They are free samples clearly marked as such, and merchandise mailed by a charitable group asking for contributions.

In either case, consider the merchandise as a gift, CBBB advises.

You are not obligated to pay for or return the merchandise.

It is illegal for the person or group sending it to you to "dun" you for it or send you a bill.

If you want to send a contribution, you may, but, you don't have to.

CBBB has compiled a list of groups currently sending unordered merchandise.

If you receive unordered goods along with "dunning" letters and bills, report it to CBBB or U.S. Postal Service, someone's breaking the law.

Youth plays active role in McGovern campaign

Youth continue to play an important role in the Maryland effort to elect presidential candidate George McGovern.

The new campaign executive committee, announced this week at the campaign state headquarters official opening, include five representatives 30 or younger out of 28 members.

They are: Miss Paula Chester, 24, a delegate to the Democratic convention from Baltimore and currently working for the Department of Motor Vehicles; Thomas Finan, 27, a delegate to the convention from Cumberland and currently a publisher in Cumberland; Mrs. Kathleen O'Farrell Friedman, 30, state chairperson of the New Democratic Coalition; Nancy Rosenshine, 27, head of scheduling and advance work for the 4th Congressional District, and Mrs. Catheryn Toland, 20, a delegate to the convention from Montgomery County.

Gov. Marvin Mandel and William James, state chairman, were named co-chairmen for the campaign.

Executive committee members are expected to take an active role in the campaign. Among their duties is advising the staff at the campaign's state headquarters in Baltimore.

The campaign in Maryland is off to a rousing start, with one or more offices open in every county in the state and in Baltimore city.

New offices are being opened soon near the major schools in the state to help channel the efforts of college students.

Voter registration drives get the main attention at this stage of the campaign in order to get as many people as possible registered before the Oct. 10 deadline.

In some areas canvassers are going door to door to find potential voters, both young and old.

Also underway are fund raising activities, leafletting and planning sessions for the heart of the campaign effort, massive canvassing to bring the McGovern campaign to the people.

Black G.O.P. delegates at Miami split vote

MIAMI BEACH — Delegate Archie Jones joined six other Marylanders in opposing the majority report on party reform.

Mr. Jones, Baltimore City GOP chairman, was the only black delegate to vote against the bonus or reward system for districts that carry Republican candidates.

The other black delegate from Baltimore, Mrs. Madie Mitchell, voted for the reform plan, as did the chairman, Dr. Aris T. Allen of Annapolis, revealing that the black delegates were as divided on the issues as were the rural and suburban delegates.

The vote in favor of the rule was seen as a vote of support for Maryland's Spiro T. Agnew in 1976, because it would give extra delegate power to the smaller rural states where Agnew is strongest.

NAACP to picket Beverage Assso. meet

PITTSBURGH, Pa. — The National United Licensed Beverage Association, consisting of black tavern owners throughout the eastern U.S., may find a standing room only crowd when they convene here Oct. 1 to 4 for their convention.

However, according to Matthew Moore, Pennsylvania State Coordinator of the NAACP, it will not be a crowd they will enjoy.

Moore informed NULBA of a potential mass demonstration involving a number of consumer and civil rights organizations if the group does not schedule some of its convention events in the black community.

* * *

NULBA is scheduled to meet in a white-owned and operated hotel in Pittsburgh, and has scheduled all of its events at the hotel rather than using the social facilities of the community.

* * *

NULBA is scheduled to meet in a white-owned and operated hotel in Pittsburgh, and has scheduled all of its events at the hotel rather than using the social facilities of the community.

Moore was asked by several organizations to coordinate a demonstration against NULBA, and said support for the effort has spread nationwide.

In a wire to James Grant-NULBA president, William O. Douglas-NULBA executive secretary, and Frank Ellis-owner of the Ellis Hotel and President of the Pittsburgh NULBA Chapter, Matthew Moore said:

"Our concern is that, although you are black businesses people with the greatest number of your customers being black and much of your income derived from the black community, your convention activities do not reflect the concern and interests in our current era of black consciousness and awareness.

"We can see no evidence of your planning any activities using black community facilities, and there are a number that could be used. Monies being solicited from the white business sector for this convention could be used very profitably to help black businesses.

"There is still time to sit down and discuss this matter, and it seems that some charges might be in order if your organization is concerned about a more economically, socially, and culturally sound black community," the letter stated.

Although meetings to date with NULBA have been unproductive, negotiations are being continued stated Moore.

WHO THE HELL LENT A BUNCH OF BLACK BOYS $600,000.00 TO START A CLINIC IN NEW YORK?

SOME VERY SELFISH PEOPLE.

When a man asks you for a handout, he becomes a boy.

But when he offers you a chance to invest for profit, he becomes a businessman. And you both stand to gain. Call it a profit-sharing partnership for everyone involved. (Except us. We're strictly non-profit.)

We know the right people to talk to. In government. Labor. Business. Communities. And they're all behind us.

We also know how to unravel the red tape. How to cut through the gobbledegook. And most important of all, how to get action. So that everyone gets a fair shake.

Take the clinic in South Jamaica.

Metropolitan Life, Bankers Trust, and the Small Business Administration put up most of the money at regular interest rates.

The clinic created 60 new jobs, and fresh spending power for the community.

The manufacturers of hospital equipment and pharmaceuticals gained a new customer.

And the clinic expects to handle 120,000 patient visits a year. (Which will make South Jamaica a healthier, happier place to live.)

This same approach can solve a lot of other problems, too. Right now, The Development Council is working on $1 billion worth of local self-interest projects all over the country. And we're just scratching the surface.

There's a whole new $40 billion-a-year market out there. In home building. Manpower training. Health and social services. Education. Business development. If business and labor are willing to take advantage of the potential.

If you'd like to know what we can do for you, send 25¢ (postage and handling) for our new booklet. It's called "Self-Interest Pays Off. For Everyone." And we can prove it.
