College has special class for women

Women interested in enrolling in a continuing program for women at Essex Community College are invited to attend the first session at 9 a.m. Wed., Sept. 20, at the college campus. The program is designed to assist women to discover 'Who Am I?'

Originally organized three years ago to assist the many women who have returned to college, the program provides a series of 12 sessions in a Wednesday morning guidance class.

The group participates in a program of discussion sessions, individual counseling, guest lectures, and testing that is designed to assist women in their self-development.

Sessions will be held each Wednesday morning from 9 a.m. to 11:30 a.m. from Sept. 20 through Dec. 13. A $10 fee is charged for the non-credit program.

A series of four mini-courses has been scheduled to follow the Wednesday morning sessions. The courses are: Beginning Brjdge, Psychology of Wolmen, How to Study and Physical Education for Women.

The mini-courses meet from noon to 2 p.m. each Wednesday from Sept. 20 through Dec. 13. Each mini-course carries one credit. Tuition is $10 per credit for Baltimore County residents.

Mrs. Shirley Saxton, instructor and counselor who is heading up the program for women at Essex Community College, is available to discuss further details of the program by telephoning the counseling center at Essex Community College 682,6000.
