In 1970, the Governor by executive order established a statewide judicial nominating commission to propose nominees for appointment to the appellate courts, and eight regional trial court nominating commissions to perform the same function for trial court vacancies. The nine commissions began operation in 1971. Each judicial vacancy filled pursuant to the Governor's appointing power must be filled from a list of nominees submitted by one of these nominating commissions.

When a judicial vacancy occurs or is about to occur, the Administrative Office of the Courts notifies the appropriate commission and then solicits applications from interested persons through announcements in the press and by contacting interested bar associations. Applications received are distributed to the commission members.

After the filing deadline for the particular vacancy has passed, the commission meets and considers the applications and other relevant information, such as recommendations from bar associations or individual citizens. Each candidate is interviewed either by the full commission or by commission panels. The commission then prepares a list of those candidates deemed to be legally and professionally most fully qualified for judicial office. This list is prepared by secret written ballot, and no applicant may be included on the list unless that applicant has the affirmative vote of not less than seven members of the commission. The list is forwarded to the Governor, who must make his appointment from the commission list.

Each of the nine commissions consists of thirteen members. Six members are lawyers elected by other lawyers within designated geographical areas. Six are lay members appointed by the Governor. The chairperson, who may be either a lawyer or a lay person, also is appointed by the Governor. The Administrative Office of the Courts acts as secretariat to all commissions and provides them with staff and logistical support.

The Maryland Judicial Conference was organized in 1945, and presently operates under the provisions of Maryland Rule 1226. The Conference considers the status of judicial business in the various courts, devises means for relieving congestion of dockets, and considers improvements of practice and procedure in the courts. It also considers and recommends legislation and discusses proposals for improving the administration of justice and the judicial system in Maryland.

The Conference consists of all judges of the four Courts of Maryland. The Chief Judge of the Court of Appeals serves as chairperson, and the State Court Administrator as executive secretary. The Conference meets annually in plenary session. Between these sessions, its work is conducted by an Executive Committee and by a number of other committees, as established by the Executive Committee in consultation with the Chief Judge. The various committees receive staff support from the Administrative Office of the Courts.
