—Admits lie

cinity of Memorial Stadium when he was held up by an older boy.

However, no other newspaper, except this story in the AFRO, has revealed that the sobbing youth sent police on a hunt for an assailant whom he described as an older black youth

Police reports show that the 70-pounder had them searching for a "male, Negro, 18, 5 ft. 4 inches, weighing 140 pounds, medium complexion, black hair, wearing a blue shirt, blue tennis shoes."

Further, police report Strickland told them, "He came up behind me and said, 'boy, give me that dollar,' and when John refused, the suspect hit him in the stomach with his fist and then took a lighted cigarette from his mouth and stuck it in John's right eye."

The report adds, 'Suspect then grabbed the dollar out of his hand and ran north toward 900 block E. 36th St. John was transported to Maryland General Hospital and treated for eye injuries. Possible that he might lose sight in his right eye."

Meantime, after a resident in the area reported the complainant was seen smoking a cigarette and observed trying to dispose of it before he was noticed, there was no need to look for a suspect.

The injured youth had hurt his own eye to avoid punishment at home

Asked why his son lied and gave a detailed description of a black assailant, his father told the AFRO: 'I have no idea why. When you hear so much about crime, you might think about colored people, but he didn't mean it to be discriminating.'

His mother, Mrs. Kathleen Strickland, revealed her son had been warned about cigarettes before. She said the incident has embarrassed the family, and added, "He faces prosecution by police." It's been pretty rough over a lie."

Dr. Frank Bennett, Director of Safety Education, has been overseeing the role of the school system in response to this tragic incident and is taking steps to prevent its reoccurence.

"I offer my own personal regrets to the Carr family and pray that Tavon will have a full and speedy recovery.

"I have asked for a full report of this incident. Our preliminary findings have been that this was an unfortunate accident since the grating that had been placed over the hole into which Tavon fell had been damaged by vandals but was to be replaced shortly by the school maintenance people.

"I am, however, asking our maintenance people to survey immediately all such gratings and take appropriate actions to prevent these areas from becoming a hazard to our children."

you can do it. I have great faith in the American people. I call upon you to help me bring the prisoners home."

However, the other two pilots freed, Navy Lt. Markham L. Gartley of Dunedin, Fla., and Air Force Major Edward K. Elias of Valdosta, Ga., spoke cautiously about the war during a stopover here.

The three men, whose trip had taken them from Hanoi to Peking and Moscow, escorted by anti-war activitists, expressed hopes that an end to the war might free other U.S. prisoners.

"It's a great feeling to be free," Gartley said. "But I would be happier if the other men were free too."

Charles chain-smoked filter tipped Russian cigarettes with a shaking hand. Both he and Elias looked like they craved sleep and peace. Charles' wife, Olga, wearing a multicolored dress, sat next to her husband and sipped orange juice.

All three men said they had been generally well treated by the North Vietnamese in captivity.

The largest group I lived with consisted of 26 men, although over the years I lived with many more than that," Gartley said. "Psychologically speaking you become adapted to it over the first six months."

"After that," he said in a firm voice, "time begins to go faster. Instead of living hour by hour you begin living day by day, then week by week and month by month."

"It becomes an endless chain of nothing," the young flier said. He laughed gently, looked down at the table and stopped talking.

Secretary of State Melvin R. Laird was asked whether the men would be court-martialed in view of statements by administration officials that they had allowed Hanoi to use them for propaganda purposes.

Laird said that if charges are filed, "justice will be done" and that "justice, as far as I'm concerned, is long as I'm here, will be tempered with a great, great deal of mercy."

Later, during an Oklahoma City news conference, Laird said: "They will face no charges as far as the Department of Defense is concerned. I can assure you of that."

will remain on three years probation, Judge Miller said.

Judge Miller also stated that he and prosecuting attorney Michael E. Marr and Wynn's lawyer, Alan I. Baron, will make arrangements for the imprisonment between now and 8:30 a.m. Oct. 11.

In his final statement to the court, Defense Attorney Baron asked Judge Miller to consider Wynn's cooperation with the court and give him an 18-month probation period. He described Wynns cooperation as being extraordinary but admitted the sentence was lenient.

Wynn pleaded guilty to charges last Feb. 8.

When asked if he had any last statements, Wynn told the court "What I have experienced has taught me a lesson and I do realize the seriousness of my offense."

He further stated that he thought the penal system does have its faults and putting him in jail will not improve him.

After Judge Miller listened and weighed the statements, he told the defendant that he should give him the maximum sentence of five years because he feels that the crime he has committed is very low and he is not for people that throw away other peoples lives.

In view of Wynn's cooperation and because he had no former convictions, the jurist told him he would impose a light sentence.

With the sentencing Judge Miller warned Wynn that he should not violate any federal, state or local laws dealing with drugs of any kind and if he did he would be in jail "for sure."

Court records show, from May, 1970 until and including April 30, 1971 he and co-conspirators made plans to violate drug laws.

Wynn met with co-conspirators at Friendship International Airport, arriving from the La Guardia Airport, on several occasions, according to court records.

Court records also show, he would take the conspirators to a beach in Anne Arundel County.

Court records also show, that parts of the conspiracy charged that Wynn would deliver quantities of cocaine and heroin from time to time and would also arrange for the resale.

Wearing a grey plaid suit, pink shirt and a multicolored tie, Wynn sat nervously, but in a calm manner.

His eyes seemed to hold a look of regret.

During the sentencing his wife Mrs. Conchita Wynn, sat almost directly behind him, in red trench-coat.

With her hair pulled away from her face, she held a notebook pad and pen as if prepared to take notes.

She seemed rather confident, in a calm way, but also rather anxious for the ordeal to conclude.

Jail Board decision reviewed

From all indications made public in Tuesday's meeting of the City Council's Executive Nominations Committee, the "Schoonfield Affair" is headed for a departmental hearing before the Civil Service Commission.

Warden Schoonfield's firing last Friday had come in the wake of charges of 'conduct unbecoming an employee of the city.'

Allen Spector (D-8), head of the City Council committee, stated during Monday's regular council meeting that his committee would meet on Tuesday to discuss with the four newly appointed Jail Board members: a. their qualifications and b. their reasonins in the Schoonfield decision, exclusive of the facts of the case.

First called to speak was H. Mebane Turner, newly appointed president of the Board.

Mr. Turner stated, "The city should not be in the jail business. A coordinated system of courts, jails, and penitentiaries should be instituted at the state level."

Concerning the Schoonfield decision, Mr. Turner declared that the board" had little choice given the alternatives made available to them. He said the board is a policy making body, that does not run 'nil on a day to day basis.

Councilman Joseph Gallagher (D-3rd) charged that the board had rendered what he termed "a bad judgement, perhaps under bad advice received from the City Solicitor."

Mr. Turner responded that the board decided by a vote of 5 to 2 that the appropriate thingto do was to fire the warden, the allegations being of such nature as to preclude suspension.

Suspension, Mr. Turner pointed out, would not necessary require a hearing. The warden could simply sit out his suspension and the matter would go unresolved.
