Master plan developed for state's community colleges

By Dr. SIDNEY KOBRE

A master plan being constructed now for the development of the 17 public community colleges of Maryland will have vast effects on the two-year colleges in the state.

The plan will give an orderly direction to the progress of the college preventing unnecessary duplication of educational programs, and will define more clearly the role of the two-year colleges in the the Maryland system of higher education, which includes universities, state colleges and junior/community colleges.

• • •

The plan is being worked out by various Task Forces of the Maryland State Board of Community Colleges with the cooperation of the Maryland Council on Higher Education.

Task Force No. 1, which will deal with the Commitment, Role and Scope of the Maryland community colleges, is headed by President Harry Bard of the Community College of Baltimore.

The committee has begun already to hold meetings regularly, so that the members may organize and prepare reports for action by the Maryland legislature in 1973.

In the Baltimore metropolitan area, seven community colleges are giving instruction to more than, 24,000 students — teen-agers and adults.

Besides the Baltimore Community College, others in the area include: Catonsville, Anne Arundel, Essex, Dundalk, Columbia and Harford Community Colleges.

Pointing out the importance of community colleges in the state, Dr. Bard told the college representatives and other educators at the first meeting of Task Force No. 1, that by 1980 the state's community colleges, which now have 55,000 students, will have an enrollment of more than 100,000.

"Should the community colleges follow an open door policy?" and "Who are the people we serve?" were to be investigated by this committee.

The group will also be concerned with the types of development programs, bridging the gap between high school and college, and the transferring of credits from community colleges to four-year educational institutions.

NECO gets agreement from Real Estate Board demands

The Real Estate Board of Greater Baltimore has finally answered NECO demands to eliminate the Dual Housing Market in the metropolitan Baltimore area.

The Baltimore Housing Conference, sponsored by the Northeast Community Organization (NECO), was held April 20.

At this meeting a number of community groups in Northeast Baltimore and the metropolitan area presented five proposals to eliminate the dual housing market. For 10 weeks nothing happened.

At a meeting held with community representatives July 6, the Real Estate Board agreed to consider the proposals.

Finally Sept. 13, the Real Estate Board took action.

Marilyn Jones, Vice Chairman of the NECO Real Estate Coalition, stated "In agreeing essentially to three proposals the Board has recognized the need to correct discriminatory practices in advertising and employment, and prevent abuses when contracts are presented.

"We hope the Board is sincere in their recommendations, and not just paying lip-service to look good.

"It is significant and unfortunate that the Board will do nothing to combat racial steering, the root of the dual housing market. accept the 'Truth in Buying' agreement demonstrates again the industry's unwillingness to guarantee that blacks and whites are not steered, but are, in fact, shown homes in different neighborhoods.

"The Board refuses to hold member brokers accountable for where clients end up buying property.

"We will just have to keep the battle going against the Real Estate Board to combat 'steering' because housing exploitation and neighborhood resegregation will continue as long as the dual housing market is permitted to exist."

Coppin State College starts urban program

The Housing and Community program of Coppin State College will prepare urban planners and developers to use their interest, knowledges and skills to produce well-planned housing for the poor.

Helping alleviate major problems accruing from the erection of sub-standard housing and ensuring decent homes for all citizens is another goal of the program.

Such a program will help eliminate labels such as: 'undesirable neighborhood or the poor section of town" — and will open up exciting career possibilities for all, particularly students in the arts and sciences.

The program will include technical and required courses and will be the beginning of "service careers" for students with majors in: music, art, dance, biology, psychology, literature, mathematics, urban geography and politics, social welfare, United States history, black history, and economics.

Urban planners are needed to work with the community in its redevelopment efforts to improve the urba environmen, and the physical, social, and economic condition of the human beings in that environment.

Concerned community planners would be able to expand and shift urban populations for growth and changes in educational directions necessary to cope with the totality of housing problems.

Coppin State College accepts graduates from the Community College of Baltimore seeking the bachelor of science degree in Social Science; with an emphasis in Housing and Community Planning.

Students may transfer up to 60 credits in Constructional Technology or Urban Development, provided the requirements in general education as outlined by Coppin are met.

Design honorees named

Mayor Schaefer has honored five Baltimore City School Students who were awarded top honors in the Design-A-Sign Contest.

The design competition was planned to develop signs that would be used at major entrances to the City of Baltimore and at school construction sites.

With cooperation of Dr. Roland Patterson, Superintendent of Baltimore City Schools, art majors in High Schools created models during the Spring Semester.

The program was supervised by Richard L. Micherdzinski, Director of Art Education for the Department of Education, and George F. Horn, Supervisor of Art for Secondary Schools, Department of Education.

"I need my car every day. I'm willing to pay for a quality gasoline I can depend on."
It makes good sense. That's why so many folks who can't afford to have their cars laid up, insist on buying quality products. Like Amoco Super-Premium. It's quality that you know won't let you down.
Consistent quality, day after day, from one station to the next.
What's more, Amoco Super-Premium gives you better mileage than other premiums.
So, if you depend on your car, depend on American, too.
You expect more from American and you get it.™

Register to vote drive goes ahead

The McGovern-Shriver campaign looks forward to continued success in its drive to register black voters in the Baltimore area.

During the past three weeks volunteers registered several thousand black voters in the 7th Congressional District, according to spokesmen at McGovern-Shriver headquarters.

Sixty canvassers worked each day for the past 10 days, and ranks swelled to over 100 this past weekend to reach the 60,000 to 100,000 unregistered black voters in Baltimore.

The drive here has been part of a national Democratic effort to register voters from minority groups, as well as students and other potential Democratic voters.

• • •

Seventh District Congressman Parren Mitchell was a major figure in developing the drive in Maryland, along with other black state officials.

Cong Mitchell, moreover, is a drawing card for McGovern-Shriver votes, according to William Medley, associate coordinator in the 7th district drive.

He said canvassers are emphasizing the black official's place on the November ballot.

"First is Mitchell," said Medley, "and everyone who votes for Mitchell will be a vote for McGovern-Shriver."

• • •

Medley, himself a canvasser in black neighborhoods, said that response from prospective voters has ranged from "disinterested" to "very receptive"

He pointed out that some people who have been purged from the voter's list still believe they are eligible to vote. If you are unsure, it is safer to reregister.

While the drive in the Baltimore area began slowly, it gained much strength during the third week.

About 1,400 were registered the first week, and 1,999 the second week, and 3,300 the third week.

• • •

The largest number of voters registered at Mondawmin Shopping Center and WEBB radio.

The NAACP will continue efforts to register blacks this weekend at the Baltimore City Fair where Sen. McGovern will make an appearance.

Voters may also register Sunday from noon to 3 p.m. at the following churches: Knox Presbyterian, 1214 N. Broadway; Douglass Memorial, Lafayette and Madison Sts.; Heritage of Christ Church, 2901 Liberty Heights Ave.; Union Baptist, [illegible] Ave. and Gilmor Memorial.

The drive will continue

FREDERICK A. BAILEY JR., 39, manager of the Maryland National Bank's 225 N. Calvert St. commercial bank, has been named assistant vice-president. Mr. Bailey, has been married 19 years to school teacher, Mrs. Vivian Bailey. Their three children are Kenneth, 10; A., 17, and Lydia, 16. The promotion this week marks Mr. Bailey's second milestone as a first. In 1970 when he completed the first as manager of the downtown bank, he was the only one of his race in to hold such a post in a large metropolitan area.

Mrs. Bumbray, 29; CCB student and mother of 5

A 29-year-old mother of five, Mrs. Catherine Bumbray, of 2408 Dorton Ct., died Sunday at University Hospital after a long illness.

Last rites were held Thursday at St. Veronica Church and she is buried at New Cathedral Cemetery.

Mrs. Bumbray, born in [illegible], was a member of the Washington Blvd. Community Action Agency and attended the Community College of Baltimore.

She is survived by husband John Bumbray and their five children Evelyn 9, John E. Linda 7, Jesse 6, and Marlo 4.

Other survivors are her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Cole (Louise); sisters, Mrs. Florence L. Reed, Mrs. Mary Rose, Mrs. Willie Collier; brothers, Thomas, Silas and Will Cole.

MAKING FRIENDS with an AFRO newsie are Senator McGovern and Congressman Parren Mitchell who met the youngster outside the Labor Union Hall on Monument St. Also in the crowd that assembled on the presidential hopeful's first campaign trip to Baltimore two weeks ago are (left) City Council President Walter Orlinsky and Del. Troy Brailey (behind Mr. McGovern). The outgoing newsie somehow turns up everywhere "at the right time."

Veterans get $100,000 Federal grant

By DR. SIDNEY KOBRE

Hundreds of veterans in the Baltimore metropolitan area will benefit as a result of a $100,000 federal grant to the Community College of Baltimore.

The grant provides for the recruitment and education of veterans who would not have continued with their education.

The grant was approved by the Board of Trustees at its first fall meeting this year, presided over by Dr. John Moxley III.

• • •

In another important action, the trustees approved a precedent-setting contract with Mercy Hospital by which students there would receive their educational training at the college and be awarded the Associate in Arts degrees, while doing their practical hospital work at Mercy Hospital.

McGovern starts TV 'chats' Sunday

WASHINGTON (UPI) — After weeks of hard campaigning on the road, George S. McGovern will take his case to the people through prime-time television, starting with nationwide broadcast of a half-hour film biography on Sunday night.

While McGovern rested at home Wednesday, a spokesman said the Democratic presidential nominee probably also would make a half-hour televised speech about Vietnam about Oct. 8 or 10 and a third appearance on another subject before Oct. 20.

The biography will be shown on CBS. The latter two appearances would be on the other networks. The first broadcast will cost the McGovern campaign organization about $90,000.

The programs are being made by film producer Charles Guggenheim, who won an Oscar for his documentary tribute to Robert F. Kennedy at the 1968 Democratic Convention and who has been handling McGovern's broadcast campaign since last year.

The biography, shown first during the California primary campaign in June and since updated, goes back to McGovern's roots as the son of a fundamentalist minister in South Dakota.

At first the networks, which are just beginning their highly competitive fall season, were reluctant to sell McGovern the time he wanted. But his national campaign manager, Lawrence F. O'Brien, made the arrangements through long negotiations.

Donnelly again sponsors poster contest

The Donnelly Outdoor Advertising is sponsoring a poster design project for all Baltimore City and Baltimore County high school art students, the theme for this year's contest is "Vote."

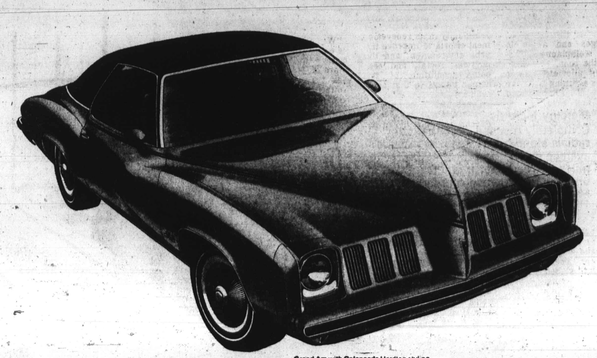
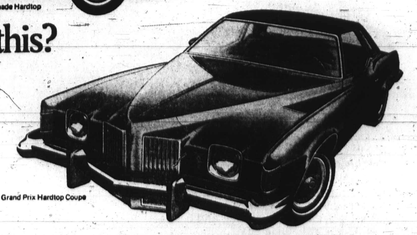
Who in America would introduce a new car like this?


Grand Am with Colonnade Hardtop styling

Luxury LeMans 4-door Colonnade Hardtop
And styling like this?


Grand Prix Hardtop Coupe
And a classic like this?
Only Pontiac would.
Pontiac introduces the first Grand Am. It has the feel of a Grand Prix. The handling of a sports car. The characteristics you've admired in fine road cars.
That can make it the newest American car ever.
The 1973 Luxury LeMans has been totally restyled. With great benefits. Improved bumpers. Excellent visibility. A strong, new roof... The classic Grand Prix is designed around a single principle. Spare nothing, compromise nothing, the driver is all-important. You'll understand when you get behind the wheel.
Pontiac has more news, too. New comfort for Catalina, Bonneville and Grand Ville. A new low-priced Ventura Hatchback. For our Firebirds, stronger bumpers, nicer interiors. Shouldn't you see a Pontiac dealer? Soon?
GM
Buckle up for safety.
Pontiac, of course.
The Wide-Track people have a way with cars.
