Dr. Phillips receives coveted rehabilitation award for 1972

By ELOISE RICHARDSON

Dr. George McK. Phillips, superintendent of Crownsville State Hospital, was the recipient of the Maryland Rehabilitation Association Award, which was presented to him at the new Vocational Rehabilitation Comprehensive Center on Friday, September 15. This award is given annually to individuals who have made significant contributions through their specialized fields towards helping the handicapped.

Dr. Phillips has been a constant supporter of the Vocational Rehabilitation Unit at Crownsville since its inception in 1963. In his acceptance he commended the comprehensive work of the unit of which Mrs. Jean Colbert is director.

Dr. Phillips recently served as a member of the Professional Advisory Group of the Hospitals Division, Alabama State Department of Mental Health.

The group reviewed and inspected the mental hospitals in Alabama as a result of a classic court decision concerning the rights of patients to humane treatment and institutionalization, handed down by Judge Franklin Johnson of the U.S. District Court.

Dr. Phillips, who was appointed superintendent of Crownsville State Hospital in 1965, held the position of clinical director prior to his appointment. Also at one time he was Chief of Services, and served for a brief time, part-time Director of Psychiatric Education and Training.

Although conceding that much progress has been made in the treatment of mental illness, Dr. Phillips takes a dim view of the popularly held attitudes regarding the sickness.

"We still regard mental illness as something to be ashamed of and hidden. Unfortunately, the families of victims are not the only ones. Doctors, legislators and the community at large are equally guilty," Dr. Phillips declared.

He stated that it is ever present in his undertakings to intensify efforts to obtain and maintain in Crownsville State Hospital, a level of functioning commensurate with the highest ideals set by the American Hospital Association and the American Psychiatric Association for hospitals accredited as training centers and employment agencies.

Del. Webster asks meet for Pimlico residents

Del. Kenneth L. Webster, 5th District (also a resident of Pimlico community), is calling a community meeting for the residents of the area. The meeting will be held today (Friday) at 7:30 p.m. in the auditorium of Pimlico Elementary School No. 223, 4949 Pimlico Rd.

Del. Webster is urging all the residents to attend this meeting because of two specific situations which are threatening the stability of the Pimlico community:

Kenneth Mumaw, Oakley Ave., is requesting a zoning change of property at 2507 Oakley Ave. from residential classification to commercial classification. Public hearing for this application will be on Oct. 10, at 1 p.m., Room 231, City Hall (Board of Estimates Room).

Willie Lee and Janet L. Major want to buy the Liquor License from 1031 Pennsylvania Ave. and transfer it to 2871 W. Garrison Ave. which only sells beer and wine, but Major wants to include a package goods section (whiskey selling).

Delegate Webster says that he hopes that any person interested in these two situations attend this meeing. Delegate Webster's home phone number is 466-3467 and his office number is 837-0331.

Del. Webster, one of fifty persons around the country, has been selected by the Joint Center for Political Studies and the National Urban Coalition to attend a Housing and Urban Development Conference for elected officials and community leaders on Oct. 12-14, in East Orange, N.J. at the Holiday Inn.

The conference will begin on Oct. 12 at 12 o'clock with a session on grants. This session will provide you with basic information, techniques and other possible sources for keeping abreast of federal funds that are available and how to obtain and keep them.

Here's why the Taylors left Atlanta in a hurry

ATLANTA (UPI) — James Taylor, who drives a cab in Baltimore for a living, volunteered to help a friend. He'll think twice about it next time after five hours on a breezy platform 100 feet over downtown Peachtree St. Tuesday night.

Taylor and his wife were visiting a friend, Gene Feist, here and Feist was scheduled to light some bulbs in a sign on a downtown building when he found his helper was unable to work. Taylor offered to help.

Feist and Taylor got on a platform, completed the job, and were ready to come down about 7 p.m. when they found the motor which raised and lowered the platform wouldn't work.

The fire department was called and arrived with an 85-foot "cherry picker." It turned out to be too short and a 100-foot aerial ladder was brought to the scene while spectators and Mrs. Taylor watched anxiously from below.

Deputy Chief Steve Campbell was reassuring. "I've done this about a dozen times," he said. "We'll have them down soon."

* * *

But when the ladder was extended to its full length, it was still 10 feet short of the dangling platform.

A new problem came when smoke boiled up from the fire truck's engine. An investigation disclosed that the clutch linking the transmission to the ladder mechanism had burned out.

The firemen decided they could do no more and departed, leaving Hy Boyar, president of the Window Cleaning Company, making phone calls in an effort to solve the problem.

Boyar finally located representatives of the company which made the motor-driven platform. They promised to bring a new motor which could be lowered by rope to the men.

During the wait, warm clothing was sent up to the stranded pair.

Taylor shouted down to his wife, "I'm scared."

"Me, too," she shouted, explaining her husband "had never been on one of those things before. He just went up to help his friend."

The motor was repaired shortly before midnight, and the two men finally got down to the sidewalk. Mrs. Taylor said she and her husband planned to leave Atlanta right away.

Church groups will meet at Y, Oct. 13
