School Notes

Northern High School's home economic department is supporting the National Red Cross by sewing layettes and slippers for the Christmas season. Veteran" Hospitals and Old Folks' Homes will receive the slippers for Christmas gifts. Layettes are for families of low-ranking, enlisted men of Fort Meade. Miss Bronwyn Case is director of the projects.

TRAINED VOLUNTEERS—Looking for lead poisoning are Virginia Jones and Floyd Sharp. To find it, the child's finger had to be pricked with a needle, as the little boy's tears reveal.

Kuntzler tells Morganites there is no Bill of Rights

William Kunstler, the controversial civil liberties attorney, gave the 18th annual Bill of Rights Day Address to a capacity audience in the Carl Murphy Auditorium at Morgan State College Wednesday morning.

Skirting the traditional accolades honoring the original first ten amendments to the Constitution, Kunstler began his remarks with the statement, "I don't believe there is a Bill of Rights."

The tall, angular, 50 year-old defender of mostly New Left clients, cited four of the original amendments such as freedom of the press, and gave an example to show how, in his opinion, each had been perverted by the national government.

He said tactics as wire-tapping, no-knock, exorbitant bail, among others, were instrumental in making a mockery of the Bill of Rights as it is presently constituted.

• • •

Kunstler's style appeared vastly different from the kind of speaker Morgan audiences are used to hearing on such occasions.

In an unemotional stance, he seemingly stripped the Bill of Rights of its apparent judicial holiness to that which he named as "something for July orators to talk about."

Said the lawyer, "Freedom is bought with bodies. The rhetoric and the rap won't do it. Those engaged in the present day struggle must not submit . . . they must resist . . . if they don't the handwriting is on the wall."

Later, he discussed various issues of note with students at a coffee break in Center.

At a following luncheon, the real man, the core of the human being was revealed.

With a "small group of students and faculty gathered, Kunstler said he felt all white people in this country are racist. I am a racist."

He professed a belief in racial exclusion in education and housing. 'Black people just don't have a chance in integration. I don't believe in it. It takes away from their strength."

After luncheon, he quickly left the campus for another stop in the city: from here he flew to Miami.

"SOFT POWER"—Is the title of an exhibition of paintings by Robert Torrence, seen here. The exhibit recently opened at the Baltimore Museum of Art and will continue through Dec. 31. He is a photographer for Illustrative Services.

How to keep up with the Joneses and several million other Americans.

The best reasons for drinking imported Canadian Mist are its unique smoothness, its distinctive Canadian taste (born of selected whiskies) and its sensible price.

But if you are mindful of status, keep in mind that Canadian Mist has been America's fastest-growing major* whisky for the last two years.

Which means you can drink Canadian Mist just to keep up. With the Joneses. The O'Briens. The Kowalskis. The Vanderbilts. The Harrises. And a few million others whose names will not be furnished on request.

WELCOME HOME, POETS — Dunbar High School's defending MSA champions returned to their own court for the first time in more than a year Tuesday, and made the homecoming a triumphant one, defeating Douglass, 83-53, in a non-contest. The Poets were denied all home dates last year in action that was designed to punish the school for 1970 disorders. State insurance forms sickle cell tests

Provident Hospital, one of the largest employers of black people on the east coast, has announced its Sickle Cell Week campaign.

The campaign is designed to educate and test all of Provident's 1300 employees.

Sickle Cell anemia, which effects mainly black people, is an inherited disease.

A major objective of the campaign is to dispel misconceptions about the disease and to present information to the employees.
