Caretaker is in coma, not aware it's Christmas

The man in room 508 at Mt. Wilson State Tuberculosis Hospital, Mt. Wilson, Md. has been in a coma for the better part of four months and lies in bed critically ill.

Only recently has Benjamin Watts, 58, been awake, min Watts, 58, been awake, but he still can't recognize people or communicate with his nurses, who stand by his bed night and day tending his needs.

For him, this will be a lonely Christmas, as he has only one visitor, his brother James, 63.

Both brothers reside in Severna Park, where they have lived for many years.

Benjamin Watts, single, worked as a caretaker for 22 years for the family of state Court of Appeals Judge Wilson K. Barnes.

Judge and Mrs. Barnes were preparing to leave Baltimore Sept. 26 with Mr. Watts to travel to their Shore Acres home in Arnold, Md. when the caretaker had a heart and cerebral attack in the back seat of their car.

Mrs. Barnes told the AFRO that they rushed the ailing Mr. Watts immediately to Union Memorial Hospital for emergency treatment. . . .

He was transferred Dec. 1 to Mt. Wilson's because of his serious TB condition, hospital director Joseph A. Lilly informed the AFRO.

Mr. Watts, according to Mr. Lilly has heart trouble and severe brain damage.

"He's awake but he responds poorly to stimuli," said Mr. Lilly. The hospital is located two miles north of Pikesville, on Mt. Wilson's Lane, which can be reached by beltway exit 20 to Rt. 140 (Reisterstown Rd.)

It has a total of 330 patients 162 who need maximum care; 59 in the moderate state and 130 in the minimum area.

Visiting hours, including Christmas day, are 11 a.m. to noon; 3 to 4:30 p.m.; and 6:15 to 8:15 p.m., daily.

Visitors are asked to bring toiletries, such as deodorant and tooth paste; fruit, fruit drinks for patients who can eat it; pajamas and slippers.

The hospital would prefer that no cake or candy be brought.
