"highest and best use" of a property, not necessarily the current use.

As an appraiser informed the Board on Wednesday, the buildings in the Inner Harbor West Project area generally were depreciating in value until the original Inner Harbor Project was approved.

They claimed they would make the same appraisals even if the Inner Harbor West Project was not planned.

In short, they insisted they followed state law and did not consider the Inner Harbor West Project in making their appraisals.

The Mayor was not satisfied to learn from Mr. Hentschel that he does not reexamine the appraisals for urban renewal acquisitions that come to his office from the Department of Housing and Community Development.

Mr. Hentschel said he only negotiates appraisals for schools, recreation and parks, and land disposals while he has "nothing to do" with urban renewal properties.

commemorated the first Sunday in January.

The theme of the Sullivan address will be "emancipation through economic development," and will precede the film "10-36: A Piece of the Action," which details how the program operates.

The rest of the program, which is free to the public, includes the following: hymn; invocation by the Rev. Marion C. Bascom, pastor of Douglas Memorial Community Church, Madison and Lafayette;

This will be followed by the introduction of the master of ceremonies by the Rev. Joseph L. Hinton, state director of the "10-36 program;" the MC (Mr. Daniels) will recognize the guests and then the Rev. Hinton will provide inspirational remarks.

Immediately preceding the film and the Rev. Sullivan's speech will be some songs from famed gospel singer Miss Katie Jackson.

A prospectus interpretation will be delivered by the Rev. Harold Blount, regional director of the "10-36 program," and a benediction will close the day's events.

"We're using this event as an attempt to get more involved in the economic life of our folk," Grand Master Daniels said.

"The significance of what we're about can be illustrated by the fact that, eight years ago, we as an organization committed ourselves to give $100,000 to build the new Provident Hospital.

"This was the first $100,000 pledge that was made, and it put us in league with several big business firms, which then kicked in large contributions."

Mr. Daniels, by this new financial donation, is attempting to score another "first."

"It is our hope that we will point the way to others by our example," he stated.

He is impressed with the accomplishments of the "10-36 program" in Philadelphia, which he cites as "items like a shopping center and an industrial park."

He would like to see these things duplicated in the Baltimore area.

"The justification for our existence must be rooted in the community," the Masonic leader asserted.

As proof of Prince Hall's identification with the community, Mr. Daniels mentioned the various segments of the population that made up the membership of the organization.

"The male and female branches contain about 6,000 people: most of them are domestic workers, and industrial laborers, while there are a few professionals among us.

"All are in the low to moderate income range bracket."

Besides being grand master of the Masons, Mr. Daniels is the director of the Baltimore Council on Equal Business Opportunity (CEBO), North Ave. and Eutaw St.

The Rev. Sullivan is the pastor of Zion Baptist Church, 1401 W. Venango St., Philadelphia, and is a longtime civic activist.

He is married to the former Miss Grace Banks, and they have three children: Howard, Julie and Hope.

involved in politics in the near future."

In 1964, he wrote the AFRO concerning his job at Sparrows Point:

"I am the first of my race to do book and paper work and supervising over men and thousands of couplings.

"I am a straw boss in the pipe mill.

"There are over a thousand men in my mill, and with the help of God, I have succeeded in getting many interested in religion, politics, union and other Negro causes."

In another letter, he told the AFRO of his early political involvement:

"I became interested in the Negro cause in 1961.

"I enjoyed the political in-fighting and helping in the political victories of Sen. Verda F. Welcome, Gov. J. Millard Tawes, Councilman Henry G. Parks, and Sen. Clarence M. Mitchell, III.

"In February, 1962, I organized the Verda F. Welcome Democratic Club of Baltimore, which is now known as the City-Wide Democratic Club."

The Rev. Mr. McGuire was also an evening student at Morgan State College for some years, and he explained the reason:

"I am studying political science under Professor James G. Fleming which I know will strengthen me as president of a Democratic club."

In his last letter to the paper, the minister wrote:

"Sometimes the STUPIDITY and IGNORANCE of the politicians, from President Nixon on down, vex my living soul to the point that I lose some needed sleep and rest.

"What can or will be done about welfare fraud?

"What can or will be done about crime?"

Surviving the minister are his wife, the former Rosetta D. Johnson; a daughter, Miss Girtland R. McGuire, and seven sons.

They are: Gerald D.; Garland K.; Glenn W.; Gilland L.; Glord M.; and Gilvand D. McGuire.

In addition, there is a brother, Nathaniel G. McGuire, Jr., of New York, and 10 grandchildren.

(R., Allegheny) wouldn't withhold an award from a student on the basis of his exam score if he had been accepted into college already.

Critics of the SAT—both student and educator alike—have long maintained that it is an inadequate means of choosing deserving students for college entrance, as it cannot measure the worth of a student's work in high school or predict what degree of success the same student will have in college once admitted.

A student who does well on the SAT may then flunk out of college for non-academic reasons, while one who fails it may later gain admission on a probationary basis or as a returning veteran, as many have done, and go on to win honors in college.

In addition, many nationally-prominent educators and black community leaders have charged that the SAT is culturally biased towards middle class whites, leading the University of Maryland last year to discontinue its usage as a major factor in admissions.

At this time, most schools and colleges across the nation are giving equal consideration to a student's SAT scores, his high school average and his rank within his class in determining if that student will be admitted.

Still, not all abide by this, and the result is that qualified, college-material students can be denied a chance to further their education.

Consider these two actual, "real life" examples:

A female black student, who gets A's and B's in all her subjects, scored only 10 points above the passing 820.

She was also ranked in the second fifth of her class in school, and works 6 to 10 hours each week, is in student government, five community and church groups and actively participates in a sport.

In addition, she belongs to two other school organizations and has won scholastic honors.

This reporter—a white, 1972 graduate of Towson State College — holds a bachelor of arts degree in history and is qualified history teacher.

Is career at Towson as a student was noteworthy in several respects.

The student maintained a B average throughout all four years, while holding a full-time night job.

In addition, he was the only student in TSC's history department ever to pass a course without going to class, through a specially-designed examination and term paper testing process.

Now consider the previous scholastic background of this same student.

He failed algebra in high school (a subject never subsequently passed) and flunked out of Calvert Hall in his junior year.

His attendance record at Towson Senior High was terrible in his last year of school and he dropped out before graduation to join the Army, never formally graduating.

He failed the SAT with a mediocre grade in 1964 but passed it as a veteran with virtually the same grade four years later—but this time with a good service record from Vietnam.

Given these examples, and the near-certainty that these cases have been duplicated with countless others of all races, it will be a relief for many to know that legislative help is finally on the way.

The Rev. and Mrs. Clayton Hammond (Anna) hosted a dinner party Saturday evening at their spacious Green Mountain Circle home.

The blanketing fog and misty rain did not deter the many guests from coming to express their wishes for a successful and prosperous year. Prior to partaking the delicious dinner, the Rev. and Mrs. Hammond welcomed their many friends and expressed their appreciation for their love and and friendship to his family and his desire that each and every friend represented would likewise continue to love one another.

Not only is Mrs. Hammond a superb cook, but artistically talented as well. She designed for her dining room table an unusual centerpiece made of pine cones with candles in the center of each tiny cone; and most of all she made and arranged flowers throughout her house made of bread dough.

The lovely Mrs. Hammond made her guests (over 50) very comfortable in a long gold and black empire waist hostess gown designed by her sister, the well-known Catherine Miles, who was stunning in a multi-circle print metallic fitted gown.

Mrs. Hammond is vice principal of St. Johns Lane Elementary School; the Rev. Hammond is the Associate Director of the Commission on Race Relations for the United Methodist Church, Washington, D. C.

More party news in next week's column.

MLK BREAKFAST

The Martin Luther King Mini Breakfast will be held January 15 at 9 a.m. at the Slayton House, Wilde Lake Village Green. Guest speaker will be the Congressman Parren J. Mitchell, (D-7th). Proceeds from the affair will be used to finance scholarships for children to attend summer camp, and help finance bus trips for the teen group; also a donation will be made to the Sickle Cell Anemia Foundation.

THOUGHT FOR TODAY:

"I expect to pass through life but once. If therefore, there be any kindness I can show, or any good thing I can do to any fellow being, let me do it now, and not defer or neglect it, as I shall not pass this way again." William Penn.

Dr. Roland Williams pulls a surprise; 600 at Lt. Carolyn Robinson affair

Surprise, surprise, surprise . . . that's what friends and relatives received when they arrived at the Dorchester Rd. home of our town's new young physician, Dr. Roland B. Williams. The invitation had read: "come to open house and house lbessing," but when guests arrived they found young Roland and beauteous June Harris had other plans.

Father Donald O. Wilson of St. James Episcopal Church was there, guests thoughtto bless the house. Then all of a sudden he turned to reunite the couple in marriage. Guests, especially the bridegroom's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Roland B. Williams (Anethia) were breathless during the double ring ceremony.

The bride, a doctoral student at the University of Maryland, is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Harris of Elizabeth City, N.C.

Matron of honor who stood with her for the renewal of vows was Mrs. John (Barbara) Harrison and Mrs. Nancy McAllister, sister, both from Washington, D.C. Capt. Henry Collins, a fellow St. James member and John Harrison stood with Dr. Williams.

For the New Year day event, the new Mrs. Williams wore a white and silver frock with silver accessories.

The Dorchester Road home of the Williams' was purchased two months ago from Mrs. Carl Murphy (Lillian).

The couple left town yesterday, Thursday, for a short trip. Protecting her from blusterywin ds was a full-length Oleg Cassini mink coat, a Christmas present from hubby.

(CUFF NOTE: No one knows exactly when the couple exchanged vows the first time and it seems no one will know anytime soon. It is known, however, that the lovebirds eloped at some little lovenest sometime ago.

Dr. Williams is a graduate of Howard University and Howard's School of Medicine and is currently working in a fellowship program, which enables him to vist many of the city's hospitals.

LT. ROBINSON AFFAIR

The program read: "Women have come into their own as pioneers on the frontiers of human experience. Today it is fashionable to say, "you've come a long way baby," and to applaud the new freedom and self-reliance of women. But long before it became fashionable — when women police met with grudging acceptance rather than enthusiastic approval.

"Three black women decided to change the role of women in the police department. Violet Hill Whyte, Carolyn M. Robinson and Cornelius Lake Smith, laid the ground work for the future black police woman.

"On the celebrating of Lt. Carolyn Robinson's retirement, we can look back to a history replete with accomplishments and rich with the rewards that come from people working together to create a force for good. The future promises greater challenges and tougher obstacles as awareness of the needs increases.

"We call upon the people of Baltimore to join with them in keeping alive this one spark of hope, of dedication, of concern, and committment that is so vital to the continuing progress of our community."

This was the highlight of the holiday season, a testimonial dinner honoring Lt. Robinson last week at Martin's West.

Nearly 600 guests were about that evening. They curtailed their festive activities to pay tribute to the honoree who recently retired after 30 years service on the police force.

The affair was sponsored by a group which calls itself "A Coalition of Friends," headed by none only than Mrs. Catherine "Kitty" Mueller.

Elegant in pink raw silk, absolutely fitting for her big night, a corsage of orchids complimented her outfit.

Accolades and more accolades were paid to Mrs. Robinson, who began her duties as a policewoman in September, 1942 at the old Northwestern district on Pennsylvania Ave. She retired recently from the Community Relations Division.

GUESTS

Honored guests for the evening were her husband, Carroll Robinson; Mayor Schaefer, Police Commissioner Donald D. Pomerleau, State's Attorney Milton B. Allen, the Rev. Vernon Dobson, Mrs. Patelle Harris, basileus, Sigma Gamma Rho Sorority; Col. William A. "Box" Harris, Dr. Haywood Harrison, Morgan State College; David Mason, new secretary of Employment and Social Services; State Senator Verda F. Welcome, Arthur G. Murphy Sr., Esq., special assistant to Governor Mandel and Judge Robert B. Watts.

Also, Major James Watkins, director of Police Community Relations; Donald J. Zeman, president of the Leukemia Society of Md.

All cited the retiree on the outstanding job she did while on the force.

MAYOR SPEAKS

The mayor cited her on the founding of the Officer Friendly program and presented her an official proclamation naming that day as Lt. Carolyn Robinson Day.

Citations, plaques, tributes and greetings came from many of those listed above. Also from the Elks, Vulcan Blazers, Vanguard Justice Society and Morgan Varsity Club.

Presiding at the 7 p.m. affair was Coach Earl C. Banks, professor of physical education and head coach at Morgan State. Witty as ever, the toastmaster carried out the program with his usual humor and efficiency.

Guests were entertained throughout the evening by Jimmy Smith's Rockets of Rhythm. There was dancing and chit-chatting before and after the program.

Highlight was the presentation of the Woman of the Year Award to Mrs. Robinson by the Democratic Ladies Guild. In the group's history, only two have received the distinguished award. They were Congresswoman Shirley Chisholm and Mrs. Mueller.

During the presentation of the award, the audience sat in darkness while 30 ladies, many of whom were members of the Ladies Guild, carried lighted candles, commemorating Mrs. Robinson's years of service. Mrs. Mueller read from the beautifully engraved plaque as talented Mrs. Cornelia Lake Smith sang "Have a Good Time."

Probably the happiest guests present were the honoree's mother, Mrs. Cora L. Harris; her son, Charles Fletcher Jr. and his wife, pretty Mrs. Sylvia Fletcher. Also, her grandchildren, Charles Fletcher III and Mrs. Saundra Miles and her great-grandson, Marvin Miles Jr., 18 months.

And, her aunt, Mrs. Laura Butler, cousins, Mrs. Beatrice Payne and Mr. and Mrs. Prentis Nolan (Elaine).

In conclusion, the overjoyed Mrs. Robinson remarked, "My heart is full. I never realized I had so many friends. And I didn't work these long years for a tribute. All I can say is thank you, thank you, thank you."

She also gave special thanks to her husband for being "so tolerant, patient and understanding," and to the Ebony Youth Group, a group of youngsters who work in the community under her direction and to the Douglass High School Class of '26, headed by Mrs. Evelyn Addison, a longtime friend.

Cuff Note: Hats off to Mrs. Mueller who is always doing something for others and worked 15 hours a day to organize the testimonial. Also to the committee members, Sgt. Marian L. Crawford, Mesdames Marguerite Campbell, Mary Clayburn, Madelyne Hammond, Evelyn Addison, Emily Bryant, Gladys Brown, Gladys Brockington, Beverly Smith, Phyllis Keyser and Suzie Walker. Also, Alonzo Kelly, Lt. Dave Echols.

CONTINENTALS AFFAIR

High-fashioned and fast-stepping party-goers were at Martin's West Friday night for the annual benefit dance sponsored by the Baltimore Continentals.

The group entertained 1,000 guests in the spacious ballroom. There was chit-chatting, finger-snapping and dancing throughout the evening. Club members made sure there was never a dull moment. They even left their guests momentarily to form a circle and sing the club's theme song to the tune of "Let Me Call You Sweetheart."

The group always draws the city's fashionables at their affairs. Men in classic black tuxedoes, rich brocades and velvets, velours and silk, while the women abounded in luxurious minks, foxes, sables and chinchillas worn over stunning designer creations.

The group is one of the city's foremost organizations, consisting of girls who are known for their contributions to the community.

Proceeds garnered from the fund-raiser will be used to provide scholarships, campersships, shoes, clothing and services to the less fortunate.

Mrs. LaFrance Muldrow heads the group. Mesdames Frances Branch and Odessa W. Dyson were the dance chairmen.

Sickle Cell Club party at University

Some 50 children and their parents recently gathered at University of Maryland Hospital for the third annual Sickle Cell Club Party.

The Christmas party climaxed a year of monthly meetings at which the members gathered to discuss topics of particular concern to children and teen-agers with sickle cell anemia. An extention of the hospital's pediatric hematology clinic, the club is open to sickle cell patients, aged six months to 20 years, and their families.

During question-and-answer session at this year's meeting doctors have primarily discussed the genetic facts of sickle cell anemia and the special problems encountered by teen-agers with disease.

Entertainment for the party was provided by Douglas Dixon, director of the hospital's Child Life Program, and gifts were donated by the School of Nursing Alumni Association, the Student Dental Association, the Rouse Company, and an anonymous donor.
