Trade for Hayes hypoed Bullets as big winners

Boston's Red Auerbach once said about Elvin Hayes, "He has that beautiful body. He's just as strong at the end of a game as he is at the beginning."

The big trade in the summer of '72 bringing Hayes to the Baltimore Bullets has become a ploy to the National Association's Central Division race in 1973.

Coach Gene Shue at the moment is shocking the rest of the league with a starting lineup of two centers, no forwards, and three guards, and getting away with because of Elvin.

Shue has Hayes at forward and five-year pro Wes Unseld at center. Mike Riordan, who starts at forward, used to be a guard and at 6-4 is the shortest cornerman in the league.

The Bullets had been winning with Phil Chenier and rookie Kevin Porter at guard. Now Archie Clark, who missed the first 45 games, looks as great as ever.

The addition of Hayes, a center until this season, has worked wonders. Unseld ranks fifth in rebounding and Hayes seventh. The Bullets, who last year yielded 108.3 points per game, are giving up just 99.7 this season. Only New York and Milaeukee are allowing fewer points.

"Elvin has helped us primarily with his defense and rebounding," said Shue. "These are the two areas I've always considered the most important in building a winning team. For the first time since I've been coaching (1966) we have a shot blocker who can intimidate the opposition.

"We haven't pressured him to score a lot of points. He is looking for the good percentage shot and fitting into the team concept of play."

Elvin, one-time NBA scoring king, is averaging 21.6 points per game, the lowest of his NBA career. He is also shooting less than ever. But it doesn't matter to him.

Why? The Bullets are winning. Only Boston, Los Angeles, New York and Milwaukee are winning more often. And the Bullets are hoping to peak by the playoffs.

Architect Bernard Madison talks to minority students

Get an education you can put to practical use.

That was the message given 16 students in the Planner Development Program by local architect Bernard Madison on Saturday.

The student program is part of the Regional Planning Council's effort to expose minority students to the field of city and community planning.

Madison spent several hours with the students at the council's 701 St. Paul St. headquarters answering and asking questions.

* * *

He offered several insights into the profession of architecture as seen through the eyes of a minority-group member.

He talked about citizen participation, how a neighborhood could choose its own architect to design low income housing rather than watch an outside group with little imagination or concern erect rows of look alike units and how urban renewal affects the black community.

The students, all black, complemented their academic instruction with practical experience by working for local planning groups and councils.

* * *

Eleven attend Morgan State College; three, the University of Maryland Baltimore County (UMBC); one, the Community College of Baltimore, and one at the University of Maryland's Social Work and Planning School.

Madison, who heads his Bernard E. Madison and Associates architectural firm at 2225 N. Charles St., said his company had a similar work-study program for four young blacks.

"Kids who are interested in doing for the community as well as doing for money is what we are looking for," he said.

The talk was part of the program's regularly scheduled seminars. More talks are planned, but no date has been set for the next one expected some time in March.

Ali vs. Bringer TV set for Mechanic

The closed-circuit telecast of the Muhammad Ali-Joe Bugner heavyweight bout is scheduled for the Morris Mechanic Theatre Wednesday night.

Announcement of the big-screen showing was made Wednesday by Herm Stevenson of Washington, representing Top Rank, Inc., worldwide TV film producers.

Ali and Bugner, of Great Britain, are booked for 12 rounds in Las Vegas.

Bears gun for biggies on weekend

This could be a make-or-break weekend for the Morgan State College basketball team.

Tonight (Friday) North Carolina Central invades the Bears' lair on Hillen Road. Tomorrow night, A and T State comes in for her first shot at Nat Frazier's team.

* * *

This means that the Bears' cockiness over Monday night's toppling of previously unbeaten Maryland, Eastern Shore could be shortlived.

Frazier and his charges have been making noises for the last two weeks, climaxing their surge with the upset of the Hawks at Princess Anne. The Bears camp feels they now have solidified and are ready to make a serious run at the title.

* * *

Following the upcoming tests, Morgan gets a brief respite Monday when a nonconference game is scheduled with visiting Detroit Tech.

However, the Bears are dumped into the acid barrel again next weekend. That's when they face the Aggies and Eagles in back-to-back encounters Friday and Saturday at Greensboro and Durham, respectively . . . SAM LACY.

Colt unit aids fibrosis fight

Colt Unit Aids 18 pt.

The Council of Colt Corrals has donated $1,000 to the Maryland Cystic Fibrosis Chapter to help find a cure for CF, a lung-damaging disease of young children with generally fatal consequences.

Harry Katz, chairman of the council, made the presentation to Lois Corbin, campaign chairman for cystic fibrosis. The donation represented a combined effort by the council, which is made up of 19-member corrals located in Maryland and Delaware.

Bob Jones drafted by Cincinnati Bengals

Virginia Union University's football captain, Bob Jones, was the only Richmond area grid player drafted in the annual National Football League draft.

He was selected in the sixth round by the Cincinnati Bengals last week.

"I figured I would be drafted," Jones said, "but not as early as the sixth round." He said that the Bengals had been watching him since his sophomore year, but he wasn't sure how serious they were.

In nine Union games this year, Jones had 32 unassisted tackles, 24 assisted tackles, intercepted six passes for returns of 187 yards, blocked two punts, had one run from scrimmage for 29 yards and had two punt returns.

He was named to the All-District and All-Conference teams in 1972.

The 200-pound, 6'4" Panther tackle from McIntosh, Fla., is a history and government major, who hopes to obtain a law degree after graduation.

Hurdles king ready for NFL

HOUSTON (UPI) — Ron Milburn, the fastest hurdler in the world, says he isn't afraid of hard-hitting contact in pro football and plans to show that to the Los Angeles Rams.

Milburn of Southern University in Baton Rouge, La., was drafted by the Rams last week.

The 6-foot, 180-pound gold medalist in the Munich Olympics returned to Southern this fall and immediately went out for football. He played three years of high school ball in Opelousas, La., but declined in his early college because he didn't want to be injured and not be able to run track.

"I don't think I can go out there and be a super star right off," Milburn admits. "I know it will take time, but I think I can make the squad the first year."

Milburn says he doesn't worry about being hit in the pros like other track stars.

"I can hit a guy just as hard as he can hit me," Milburn vows.
