Bowie State begins $10 million program

A $10 million building program, that will almost double the size of Bowie State College campus and facilities by the fall of 1973, is now in process.

The program includes: a communication arts center, $3,000,000; physical education facility, $2,621,400; residence hall, $1,307,000; extension of the electrical distribution System, $[illegible];

Plus new physical education fields, $143,480; parking lot, $150,700; and part of the Campus Loop Rd. 499,000, for a total of $,9-540,632.

The Communication Arts Center will house the newly established division of humanities.

It will provide modern facilities for four major academic disciplines: art, English and modern languages, music, and theatre.

A special place for little people

There's a special place at University of Maryland Hospital, just for little people, called the Toddler Room. Drawings and bright posters with children's faces and sayings line the walls, and tall windows let in outdoor light.

Each weekday, child life teacher Lucille Glee makes the rounds of cribs and beds to gather up the under-4 set for a morning of romping and socializing in the Toddler Room. There each child can pick out his own toy or swoop down the plastic slide, listen to records, or be cuddled by Vanessa, the Neighborhod Youth Corps worker who assists Lucille.

Pediatric staffers agree that without Lucille's unique program the toddlers would face a pretty lonely, confined existence. "These kids would get very little stimulation otherwise," says nurse Linda Levin. Although their medical needs would be met, they would not receive the large amounts of individual attention a young child, especially one with social or psychological problems, thrives on.

Parents as well as older patients on the floor are encouraged to participate in the morning toddler club. Working with the young children is often good therapy for teen-aged female patients who have had difficulty becoming involved in activities on the ward.

Rally set to protest budget cuts

A rally will be held in the War Memorial Compex on Friday, Feb. 16 at 7:30 p.m., as a part of a nationwide effort to preserve anti-poverty and social action programs.

The purpose of the rally sponsored by the Citizens Concerned for People Committee, is to demonstrate that all facets and sectors of the Baltimore Community are concerned about effects that proposed terminations of such programs as the Community Action and Model Cities Agencies will have upon everyone in the city.

Cong Parren J. Mitchell has niedeed the full support of his office to this effort and will call upon Sen. Edward Kennedy to join him as a sneaker at the event. Other invitations have been extended to Senators J. Glenn Beall and Charles McC. Mathias, Cong. Paul Sarbanes and Clarence Long, Mayor William D. Schaefer and State Senator Clarence Blount.

Persons wishing to lend their support to this effort or needing additional information about the rally should contact Lalit Gadhia, Associate Director of CAA, at 752-8911.
