—Dr. Higgins

MRS. ARRINGTON

Mrs. Alice Arrington, who was executive secretary of the Madison Ave. YWCA when it moved to its present site and worked with Dr. Higgins when he conducted the largest fund-raising campaign in the United Fund as well as in the campaign to raise funds for the YW, came from her home in New York, where she is now retired to say:

"I vividly remember the outstanding contribution that Dr. Higgins made when he served as Chairman of District 5 in the Community Chest Campaign in Baltimore.

"In spite of his busy and heavy scheduled as he followed his professional career, he spent countless hours giving leadership to this civic project. Baltimore is a better place because Dr. Higgins believed and continued to believe in assuming his share of his civic responsibility."

PATIENT SPEAKS

Mrs. Edith Scott, 81, longtime patient of Dr. Higgins, said Dr. Higgins had attended four generations of us, my mother, myself, my children, Beatrice and Beulah who are twins, and my only grandchild, Kit.

"Because of his great skill and ability, when I had an operation, I am here and I feel wonderful. We thank you, Dr. Higgins, my whole family thanks you for your care and your friendship through the years."

CLASSMATE

Dr. John Maxwell, a classmate at Meharry came from Milwaukee, Wisconsin, to hail Dr. Higgins as a humanitarian.

Dr. John Braxton saluted him for his friendship and work with the Me-De-So Club.

Others who spoke, included Dr. George Finney, Jr., grandson of the Hopkins doctor who invited Dr. Higgins to Baltimore after he finished Meharry; and physician associate, Dr. Richard TeLinde, Dr. Bernard Harris, Jr. and Dr. Louise Young, and Mrs. Elizabeth Murphy Moss, Vice-President - Treasurer of the AFRO-AMERICAN and a long time friend.

All told of his devotion to duty, his excellence in the field of medicine and his work in improving race relations and providing opportunities for those less fortunate.

HIGHLIGHTS

Highlights of the evening were acceptance remarks by the honoree and his wife, Hilda.

Mrs. Higgins, who declared she was not a public speaker, turned out to be one anyhow. In accepting the flowers from committee representatives, she said, "This has been a beautiful evening for me and my beloved husband. We are greatly indebted to you, our dear and close friends for having made it so.

"Ivan has made numerous sacrifices during his lifetime. I have seen him make these sacrifices and I have made them along with him and willingly, because I felt that whatever he was doing for others, he was happy and I was always glad to see him happy.

"You have made my husband, my family and me so very happy this evening."

DR. HIGGINS

In accepting words of praise, Dr. Higgins credited his father's legacy, "If I can leave you with an honest ambition and a Christian, I will have given you the best." By which he said his father meant, go as far and as high as you can, but honestly and do do others as you would have them do to you.

During his remarks Dr. Higgins credited physician friend whom he had met in his native, Kingston, Jamaica for charting his course in life.

He revealed, however, that when he came to Baltimore he had thought that he was coming to the Hopkins Hospital, and only after he had arrived in Baltimore did he learn that he was going to be assigned at Provident Hospital, then located in one building on Biddle St.

But of this, he said, when he wrote his father he recalled that his dad wrote back and said, "My dear chap, stone walls do not a prison make, nor iron bars a cage, minds diligent and quiet take, this for heritage. Signed Dad."

Dr. Higgins credited the community, the speakers, patients and friends, "innumerable and generous and in some instances fatherly," for whatever success he has achieved in his adopted community.

He said, "I hope I can say that my conduct among you has not been unworthy of my father's legacy."

He paid a special tribute to his wife for her understanding and love and indicated that he has experienced joy and happiness in his service to others.

The crowded testimonial banquet room was hushed as he concluded by saying," "It your love, the kind of people you are, the kind of community this is, that this occasion demonstrates, I am fortunate, grateful and happy to be specimen of your choice. I was a stranger and you took me in and I thank you."

"Right now, you are only interested in shorter hours, more pay, more vacation and all of those kinds of things and you fail to address yourself to the main things. And I think the first time the women of America say we are going to do something to pull up the quality of the public schools. . ."

Politics: —"All we are trying to do to you and saying that since the Greek word "polis" means the problems of people living together, everything is political and that some of the things outside of campaigning and politics are also political and that some of those have to do with what will be the status of women in the year 2000 and after that.

"Some of the problems will become soluble and adjustable through politics, and you can only do it by being involved in politics.

"Perhaps one of the things we also ought to do is to start thinking big and to say that since men have made such a mess of the world that perhaps it's time for women to take over the big things of the world. . ."

Donald Millard certified as recreation professional

By GEORGIANNA MOODY

Donald Millard has returned from a 3 day Governor's Conference on Recreation and Parks held in New Carrolton, Md. where he was certified by Maryland Recreation and Parks Society, as a Recreation Professional in the field of Recreation and Parks. Donald is a member of the Society.

Millard lives at 3400 Essex Road with his wife Thelma and daughter Wanda. He is deeply devoted to recreation and physical fitness and feels that physical fitness is good for body as well as the mind. He feels that recreation is not the highest kind of enjoyment but in its time and place is quite as proper as prayer.

Donald justly deserves his certification. Through devotion and hard work he has devoted 16 years working with the Bureau of Recreation. He received a degree in Physical Education from Morgan State College and began working with Dept. of Recreation as a Leader in 1957.

Later he became a Center Director, and for the last six years he has held the position of District Supervisor in the Northwest district of Baltimore. Donald is a qualified applicant for Assistant Superintendent of the Dept. Bureau of Recreation.

Congratulations from his many friends who feel that Certification from the Maryland Recreation and Parks Society is well deserved.
