Mrs. Tolbert buried in Va.

Funeral rites were held Thursday at Ebenezer Baptist Church in Virginia for Mrs. Louise Tolbert, 80, 200 block N. Monford Ave. Burial followed at the church's adjoining cemetery.

Mrs. Tolbert died Monday of a heart attack, suffered on the way to the hospital. She was born in Middle Land, Va.

Mrs. Tolbert is survived by one daughter, Miss Hilda Tolbert; two sons, John and Robert Tolbert; one sister, Mrs. Jennie Gibson; seven grandchildren, seven great grandchildren, and one great-great-grandchild, all of Middle Land, Va.

Arna Bontemps, noted author, 70

NASHVILE, Tenn. — A memorial service will be held June 20 at New York's Riverside Church for Arna Bontemps, 70, one of the last survivors of the Harlem Renaissance.

Mr. Bontemps, author of more than 25 novels, anthologies, children's books and histories, was buried here Thursday.

When he and Countee Cullen collaborated on the stage adaptation of "God Sends Sunday," his first novel, it provided Pearl Bailey her first starring role. "St. Louis Woman" had music by Johnny Mercer and lyrics by Harold Arlen.

He has been writer in residence at Fisk University since 1970, where he returned after a year as curator of the James Weldon Johnson Collection at Yale University and four years teaching literature at the Chicago Circle Campus of the University of Illinois.

Mr. Bontemps was librarian at Fisk from 1944 to 1965.

Shortly after Arna Bontemps was born, on Oct. 13, 1902, in Alexandria, La., his father, a brick mason, and his mother, a teacher, moved to Los Angeles. He was graduated from San Fernando Academy in 1920 and went to Pacific Union College in Angwin.

While at the small denomisational school, he read Paul McKay's "Harlem Shadows" and began to write.

On earning his 1923 degree, Mr. Bontemps headed for New York, to learn his craft in the company of such young writers as Cullen, Langston Hughes, Jean Toomer, Aaron Douglas and Claude McKay.

He wrote of that period when the group gathered at the home of a wealthy patron on West 135th Street. "There was a happening in black America in those days . . . Suddenly stars began to fall on a part of Manhattan that white residents had begun abandoning."

"God Sends Sunday," published in 1931, was built around the short-lived luck of Little Augie, a jockey of the nineties.

He collaborated on other plays, including "Creole" with Schuyler Watts and "Careless Love" with Hughes, but the bulk of his work was novels. Among these were "Black Thunder" and "Drums at Dusk" in 1939, about a Haitian revolt during the French Revolution.

By 1934, Mr. Bontemps was writing and teaching at Oakwood Junior College in Huntsville, Ala.

"The golden days were gone," he wrote of his departure from Harlem. "Or was it just the blows of youth that had been lost?"

He is survived by his wife Alberta, whom he married in 1926, four daughters, Camille and Mesdames Joan Williams, Constance Thomas and Poppy Booker; two sons, Paul and Arna; a sister, Mrs. Ruby Troy, and 10 grandchildren.

Last rites held Thursday for Louis Belcher

Funeral services for Louis Belcher, 46, 2800 block Boarman Ave. were held Thursday at Holy Temple Pentecostal Church.

Mr. Belcher died Sunday at Sinai Hospital after a brief illness. Born in Plymouth, N.C. he participated in many activities at his church.

He is survived by his wife, Mrs. Mary Belcher; two daughters, Misses Beverly and Benita Belcher; two sons Timothy and Phillip Belcher; five sisters, Mrs. Bessie Blount, Michigan; Mrs. Rose Carrington, Mrs. Helen Owens, Mrs. Bertha Skinner and Mrs. Ellen Wilson, two brothers, James Jr. and Pinell Belcher of Delaware; his parents, Mr. and Mrs. James Belcher of North Carolina.

Last rites today for Mrs. Hall

Mrs. Vashti Gwynn Hall, 65, 1700 block Bloomingdale Rd., a former lab technician at Johns Hopkins Hospital, died Mosday at Provident Hospital after suffering a heart attack.

Funeral services were held Thursday at a Park Heights Ave. funeral home. The Rev. Moses Lewis officiated. Burial took place today (Friday) at Asbury Methodist Church Cemetery in Lorley, Md.

Born in East Baltimore, Mrs. Hall was the daughter of the late Rev. Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Gwynn. She is survived by one daughter, Mrs. Elmerie Leola Berry; one brother, Charles E. Gwynn Sr., both of Baltimore; one son-in-law, Melvin Berry and two grandchildren, Torrence and Steven Walston.

JUNE 9

The 6th Annual Department of Recreation and Parks Bird House contest will be held at Hopkins Plaza Saturday, June 9 12:00 noon. Winning Bird Houses will be placed at the Baltimore Children's Zoo.

Longtime AFRO writer dies in California

Curtis L. Hurtt who legalized the pen name Kurtiz L. Hurtte while a promising young concert artist and feature writer of the popular "Music makers" column for the Baltimore AFRO American in the early 40's died in Los Angeles, recently after a lingering illness.

Hurtt the son of the late Rev. Taylor J. and Mrs. Nettie B. Hurtt, is survived by one daughter, Mrs. Diane Elmore; one grandson, Michael; one sister, Mrs. Elna Ross; two brothers, Jesse H. Hurtt, Baltimore and Col. Clarence M. Hurtt, currently serving in the United States army and numerous relatives and friends. He is buried in Angeles Abbey, Compton, Calif.

He left Baltimore in the late 40's to further his profession on the west coast and established residence in Los Angeles where he became an actor and appeared in many character roles in motion pictures, stage, television and radio.

He was last seen in "Lady Sings the Blues."

Hurtte after enjoying a modest degree of success in the concert field in various cities throughout the United States and Canada, became a teacher and voice coach and also returned to writing.

As a writer, he was regarded as an outstanding music critic with feature articals appearing in the Los Angeles Times, the Los Angeles Sentinel and the Baltimore AFRO AMERICAN Newspapers.

CURTIS L. HURTT
FORMER AFRO Writer

He also organized his own theatre group in which he served as producer, director, and actor in many presentations.

Hurtte put together many successful night club and hotel acts which were booked in many of the most elite clubs and hotels on the west coast.

He served as both manager and agent for most of the stars featured in these shows.

Union Square holds USA Day June 23-30

The Union Square Association will present its annual USA Day Festival at the Union Square in the 1500 block Hollins St. from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. Saturday, June 23 and 30.

Proceeds from the event to be opened by association president, Matt Esteban, will be used for further restoration of the square.

The affair will feature the works of well-known Baltimore artists as well as special student exhibition mounted by the Baltimore City School Art Department.

Also available will be pottery, stained glass, handmade jewelry, paper flowers, international food cafe, crab cakes and flowers. Items for amusement include pony rides, swing rides and ferris wheels and many rides for children.

Special attraction are folk dancers, choruses and winning raffle ticket to be drawn at 5 p.m.

Union Square was designated by Mayor Thomas D'Alesandro as the 5th Historical and Architectural Preservation District in Baltimore City.

In 1915, the division of Information in the Bureau of Immigration and Naturalization was renamed the U.S. Employment Service in response to demands made by immigrants arriving in this country for job information. This agency was separated from the Immigration division in 1918 to meet the task of recruiting workers to aid in the war effort (World War I).

School honors conductor

Second grade student John Robert Blackwell Jr. of Louisa M. Alcott Elementary School No. 59 recently presented a gift on behalf of his school to the conductor of the Baltimore Symphony Youth Concerts, Murray Sidlin.

The presentation of a picture of the school was made before a crowded Lyric Theater audience at a youth symphony concert. Young Blackwell said in his closing remakrs to Sidlin, once a student at School No. 59, "We hope you will remember us."

The idea for the award began when principal of the school, Mrs. Camilla Sherrard, discovered that Sidlin was an alumnus of the school. The conductor is leaving the Baltimore area for a position as Assistant Conductor of the National Symphony in Washington, D.C.

Blackwell's parents, Mr. and Mrs. John Robert Blackwell, were present for the gift presentation.

MCSC June committee meetings

The Maryland Conference of Social Concern (MCSC) has announced the following agenda of umbrella issue committee meetings for June.

A speaker from the Department of Corrections is scheduled to address the group's Correction's Committee Meeting, June 12, 7 p.m. at the MCSC's offices, 22 W. 25th St.

Issues to be discussed at this meeting include community based corrections facilities, the newly created joint House-Senate committee on corrections in the Maryland General Assembly, and removing victimless crimes from the criminal justice system.

The MCSC Health and Hygiene Committee is holding a luncheon meeting in the private 6th floor dining room the downtown Hochschild-Kohn store June 19 at noon.

Chief topic for the meeting is 'Critical Issues in Mental Health'. Two guest speakers are scheduled to address the meeting.

At a June 21 noon luncheon meeting at the same department store site, the MCSC committee on Employment and Social Services is planning to discuss how MCSC can "watchdog" the State Department of Employment and Social Services.

Jazz innovator dies in Harlem

NEW YORK (UPI) — Jay C. Higginbotham, jazz trombonist who learned to play without reading music and later created a forceful, flowing trombone style all his own, died last week at Harlem hospital at the age of 67. Funeral services were held Friday.

Higginbotham, who played with several top bands in the age of jazz and wrote numerous tunes of his own, died of heart failure three days after abdominal surgery.

Higginbotham developed a highly distinctive style, using blured, elongated tones. At a gathering of the Hot Jazz Society here in 1968, one critic praised Higginbotham's "familiar blurry smears."

He decided to become a musician in 1924, played in Buffalo for a time, and went to New York in 1928.

During a visit to the Savoy Ballroom, a Mecca for swing era musicians, Higginbotham caught the attention of band leader Luis Russell, with whom he played until 1931.

He later played with Chick Webb and Fletcher Henderson, and joined Louis Armstrong's band in 1937.

His recordings of tunes such as "Aunt Hagar's Blues" and "I'm Watching the Clock" indicate that he, like most musicans of the time, was deeply influenced by Armstrong.

Top Chicago Demo found dead at 69

CHICAGO — Funeral services were held Tuesday for Claude W.B. Holman, president pro tem of the Chicago City Council and dean of the city's black aldermen, at the Pilgrim Baptist Church, 3301 S. Indiana Ave.

Police said Holman, who was 69, was found dead in his southside apartment and had apparently died of a heart attack. Investigators said no marks of violence were found on his body and there was no indication of foul play.

Holman, one of the most powerful black politicians in Chicago, also was one of Mayor Richard J. Daley's staunchest supporters.

Daley in a statement eulogized Holman as "a dynamic leader . . . a man of real courage . . . a great and loyal friend." The mayor's eyes misted at a news conference as he told reporters that all Chicagoans were saddened by the Alderman's death.

Following his election as president pro tem he told the council:

"I was born B.I. — before Integration — in the front room of a three-room cottage in what was called Sandtown, Topeka, Kan., and it's a long way to assistant mayor of Chicago."

Holman, a Democrat, was elected Alderman from the Fourth Ward in 1955, became Democratic ward committeeman a year later and was elected president pro tem of the council in 1969.
