1974 BUDGET

City tax rate goes down 3 cents

At a special session Wednesday the City Council tentatively approved the city's 1974 $1.6 billion budget after reducing 3 cents from the current property tax rate.

Council members will vote on final approval of the budget at their next Monday night session.

In a budget review, fiscal advisor Mrs. Janet L. Hoffman, devoted most of her talk on the school board.

To achieve the 3-cent cut tax decrease, the City Council cut $1.1 million from the $1.16 billion budget, cutting $150,000 from the food budget at City Jail because of decreased jail population and turning down a Supreme Court request for more security guards.

* * *

The cut also sliced $300,000 from the first year appropriation to the city's self-insurance plan and a call off of renovation of the Fish Market at $537,000.

After subjecting the police department to criticism, the Council reduced the commissioner's contingent fund from $150,000 to $100,000, recommended by the mayor.

* * *

The Council charged, "No expenditure has been made from the $100,000 appropriated this year; no reason is offered for the proposed and there is a legal question as to whether the city can increase this appropration."

The Council suggested the department consider changing the blue-and-white cruisers and vans to "single color vehicles" using smaller motors. It also advised the police department to consider switching school-crossing guards to the school system and meter maids to the Department of Transit and Traffic. The Council was critical of police officers' poor accident record.

In her annual review of the budget, Mrs. Hoffman stated as in the past the school board asked and received the largest fund than any other municipal agency. The Council approved the $217.2 million submitted by the Board of Estimates without a cut.

Complimenting the school administration for eliminating fiscal responsibility of overspending its budget in the past, the fiscal advisor expressed dissatisfaction with repeated requests for appropriation for instructional material and supplies to finance other expenses.

To stop this practice, Mrs. Hoffman stated the Council has inserted language in the Ordinance of Estimates to prohibit the use of the appropriation for other purposes.

She criticized the school system for having consistently failed to operate within the guidelines established by the state for pupil transportation adding, "The Council is expecting the Baltimore public schools to see to it that deficiencies in its special education program are remedied.

* * *

According to Mrs. Hoffman, Dr. Patterson, the school Superintendent, may have to gain Board of Estimates approval of a major aspect of his administrative reorganization.

She said the Council has been advised that any reorganization that would increase salaries of classes of educational personnel must have the approval of the Board of Estimates.

New DSS center opens at E. Oliver

Mrs. Maud S. Harvey, acting director of the Baltimore City Department of Social Services (DSS), has announced that the Collington Square Social Services Center of the department located at 1719 East Oliver St. is now open for service. The center was formerly located at 1500 Greenmount Ave.

The Collington Square Social Services Center is the eleventh localizated center to be opened by the DSS as part of its plan for decentralization of services. Eventually, 22 such centers will be located throughout Baltimore.

The Collington Square Center is open from 8:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. Monday through Friday. The telephone number for general information is 563-1563. Clients seeking information regarding financial eligibility relating to food stamps, public assistance or medical assistance should call 563-1468. The number for information regarding social services is 563-1646. The area is served by numbers 5, 13, 15 and 19 buses of the Baltimore City transit lines.

$$$ gifts to Provident Hospital

Henry J. Whyte, Administrator of Provident Hospital, Inc. accepted a check for Provident Hospital's Development Fund in the amount of $800.00.

The presentation was made by Albert Higgins, the grand deputy inspector general of the Maryland Grand Council of Deliberation at the Holiday Inn downtown.

In making the presentation, the Inspector General stated that, "Provident Hospital has been designated as the charity for the Masons this year. We want to assure the hospital through Mr. Whyte, that the Masons will have Provident in mind as it seeks to become financially solvent to enable it to be returned to the community and operated by a Board of Trustees. Provident Hospital is our Hospital."

* * *

In a related development this week, the Starlighters Pledge Club of the Tau Gamma Delta Sorority demonstrated their concern for Provident's future by also making a financial contribution to that institution to be used to purchase robes and pajamas for the Children's Ward.

POLICE MAJOR SPEAKS TO THE PEOPLE

Warns of burglar claiming to be building inspector

By Major JAMES A. WATKINS

I visited the Freedom House this past Tuesday and the people there had some bona fide complaints that could relate to a large majority of persons living in the inner-city.

I feel at this time this column should be dedicated to the AFRO Readers warning them of three major types of larcenies from shoppers and home owners. have been received that a First several complaints person is going through the Druid Hill-Pennsylvania Aves., area posing as a building inspector.

According to the complainants this person, described as a male 25-30 years of age, thin build, short bush haircut and brown complexion.

He knocked at the door, announced to the unsuspecting resident that he is a building inspector, checking on rats, roaches, etc. and once he is in the house he goes through the house on the inspection tour.

It is not the person has left the home that the complainant realizes that money is also missing.

The Community Relations Section is presently investigating to find out if there were building inspectors in the particular area at the time of the incident.

Bona fide inspectors have credentials identifying them as building inspectors. If you have any doubt of a person representing himself as a building inspector or any other type of inspector and you feel that they have not properly identified themselves, refuse them entrance to your home until you call the police for verification.

* * *

Secondly, down town shoppers ought to be aware that there are a few juveniles praying on shoppers in the area by picking their pocketbooks.

Please be very mindful and careful of the way you carry your purse. The bulk of your money should not be carried in your purse but on your person.

Do not let your pocketbook swing lose on your arm. Carry it close to your body with the catch next to you.

* * *

The third larceny problem involves the con man, who sometimes works with another person, making a team. This team may consist of two men or two women, etc. and they usually hang around banks and building and loan companys.

They are usually on the look out for the senior citizen who may readily believe the story that they have found some money and are willing to share this money with a total stranger.

This is the prime time of the year for the pickpocket, purse snatcher or house burglar; because they know it is vacation time and the pockets and houses may be loaded with extra cash.

So be extremely mindful of wallets in back pockets, pocket books swinging on arms and unprotected houses.

* * *

Going out of town? Then stop all deliveries of paper, milk, etc. and ask a neighbor to check on your house daily.

Install a timer so that a light will come on at a specified time at night. And by all means call your Police Station and let them know you will be away for sometime and would like for them to check on your house during your absence.

Just a few hints and reminders to help you have a safe and fun filled summer.

Controls urged to prevent repeat of syphilis study

An advisory panel described as "ethically unjustified" this week a government study begun in 1932 among 430 Alabamians to gauge the longterm effects of syphilis in men. They received no treatment and at least 28 apparently died as a direct result of the disease.

The nine-member panel's report, submitted to Congress with its chairman, Dr. Broadus N. Butler, among those refusing to endorse the majority conclusions, said there still is no federal program to protect such research subjects.

Medical reports on the study by the Public Health Service indicate that besides the 28 of those from the Tuskegee, Ala., area who died from untreated syphilis, others suffered severe damage to the central nervous system, heart trouble and other side effects.

The Tuskegee Syphilis Study Ad Hoc Advisory Panel recommended that a permanent national human investigation board be established with authority to regulate all federally supported research involving human subjects.

* * *

Butler, president of Dillard University in New Orleans, said that while he "specifically abstains from concurrence in this final report" he felt a responsibility to submit it to the Department of Health, Education and Welfare (HEW). He did not amplify on his objections.

Among the report's conclusions:

"In retorspect, the PHS study of untreated syphilis in the black male in Macon County, Ala., was ethically unjustified in 1932. This judgement . . . is made with the advantage of hindsight acutely sharpened over some 40 years, concerning an activity in a different age with different social stadards."

"That penicillin therapy should have been made available to the participants in this study, especially as of 1953 when penicillin became generally available. Withholding of penicillin, after it became generally available, amplified the injustice to which this group of human beings had already been subjected."

* * *

". . . No uniform federal policy exists for the protection of subjects in government-sponsored research . . . The federal government's failure to develop a uniform policy has been detrimental to the welfare of research subjects."

One member of the panel issued a concurring statement which said, however, the report did not go far enough.

Dr. Jay Katz, professor of law and psychiatry at Yale Law School, argued that the participants were "exploited, manipulated and deceived" and that the medical profession largely has ignored the study's implications.

"The real issue is that the participants in the study were never informed of the availability of treatment because the investigators were never in favor of such treatment," Katz wrote.

Dr. Vernal Cave, director of the New York City Bureau of Veneral Disease Control, was recorded as having reservations about part of the report, but they were not further explained.

* * *

In releasing the report, Charles C. Edwards, HEW assistant secretary for health, said the Tuskegee study has ended and that 112 of the known surviving participants had been contacted and offered medical exams, treatment and continuous health care.

Edwards said 81 of the men had chosen to receive the federally financed health care, 26 had declined but could reverse their decisions any time, and five were undecided. (UPI)

Milburn confesses, gets life

George L. Milburn, 23, was sentenced to life imprisonment by Judge Anselm Sodaro in Criminal Court Wednesday for the July 25, 1972 murder of Patrolman Lorenzo Gray.

Milburn was accused of shooting Patrolman Gray in the chest with a sawed-off shotgun during an attempted robbery of the Holiday Inn, 3600 Pulaski Highway.

After an hour-long discussion with his lawyer Stephen L. Miles, Milburn changed his plea to guilty of murder in the first degree.

Milburn, a medium built man wth a short Afro and small mustache, was neatly dressed in black trousers ndressed in black trousers, tie, green shirt and jacket when he took the stand.

When Miles explained that by entering a guilty plea Milburn was waiving practically all his rights, including those of a jury or a court trial, he answered, "I understand."

Milburn, a former heroin addict, testified that he was not under the influence of any drugs and was, in his lawyer's words, "freely and voluntarily" switching his plea.

He said, "I'm totally satisfied with the whole system, the judge and the prosecutor, because I was treated fair."

Before sentencing, Milburn's only question was "Is there any way possible that I can speak to my wife?"

Mrs. Milburn sat in the court crying throughout the sentencing.

Also present in court was Mrs. Bernita Jones, sister of the slain policeman. She sobbed whenever any mention of the robbery or shooting was made. — M.C.

Rights panel to get annual tenant listing

FRANKFORT, Ky. — Despite protest, the state Human Rights Commission adopted a regulation which requires that large apartment buildings submit annual reports listing the race of their tenants and applicants.

The protest came during a hearing when two white managers of local apartment complexes said the resolution would violate civil rights laws.

Notwithstanding, directly following the hearing the resolution was adopted without change.

The two objectors were Eric Karnes, president of Commonwealth Property Manaretment, Inc. and Rodney M. Brown of Lexington Apartment Association.

Jesse Crenshaw, a representative of Tenants Service and Organizational Assistance Program, stated, however that the regulation did not violate any civil rights law.

He added, "The only way we can eradicate discrimination is to get the information (that the reports would provide)."

HRC Executive Director Galen Martin stated that the reports could not be used to prove discrimination, but would function as a means of identifying trouble spots.
