Catholic group urges boycott of table grapes, iceburg lettuce

The board of directors of Associated Catholic Charities in the Archdiocese of Baltimore has called today for a boycott of table grapes and iceberg lettuce "until and unless justice and peace is restored in the fields where these fruits and vegetables are grown."

By a unanimous vote, the directors agreed to support efforts of the United Farm Workers, AFL-CIO, to organize and bargain collectively.

They urged all Catholics and heads of Catholic institutions in the archdiocese to join in the boycott.

Earlier this year, the Archdiocesan Senate of Priests endorsed the boycotts, following their Feb. 19 meeting in a resolution that read in part, ... "we encourage religious people everywhere to participate in the lettuce boycott supporting the United Farm Workers."

The Archdiocesan Urban Commission, through two resolutions in as many years, also has consistently endorsed the grape and lettuce boycotts.

"The resolution," said Monsignor J. Francis Stafford, director of Associated Catholic Charities, "notes the right of workers to form unions and participate in union activities was called a basic human right by the Second Vatican Council.

"The ACC also does this in the spirit of the Statement on Farm Labor made by the bishops of the United States in November, 1968 and of the Pastoral Constitution of the Church in the Modern World approved by the Second Vatican Council.

"The endorsement," he concluded, "supports the basic human right to self-determination, adequate wages and decent living conditions."

DR. CALVIN B. T. LEE named to CCB Board of Trustees

Dr. Lee named to CCB Trustee Board

Mayor Schaefer, Monday, submitted to the City Council for its approval the name of Dr. Calvin B. T. Lee to fill the unexpired term of Dr. John H. Moxley as a member of the Board of Trustees of the Community College of Baltimore.

Dr. Lee, 39, is currently the chancellor of the University of Maryland, Baltimore County. He came in 1971 to UMBC from Boston University where he served as acting president.

In a recent CCB graduation address, Dr. Lee commented, "Any society which insists that higher education be tied directly only to immediate job entry is a society which is not prepared to meet the future."

In light of rapid technological developments, he suggested, "that the graduate of today will be making shifts in careers or occupations in a way that their parents and certainly their grandparents never did before.

"The community colleges, particularly, have been very responsive to developing occupationally skilled people for industry," he said.

Dr. Lee's career includes accomplishments in the fields of education, law and college administration. As dean of the College of Liberal Arts at Boston University from 1968-71, he devoted a major share of his energies to faculty development, curricular reforms and long-range planning.

He received his A.B. degree from Columbia College of Columbia University, his LL.B. degree from Columbia University School of Law and his LL.M. and J.S.D. degrees from New York University Law School.

He was admitted to the New York State Bar in 1959, and to practice before the U.S. Supreme Court in 1966.

Born in New York City, Dr. Lee is married and has two sons.

Plant worker's dismissal was racially rooted

Alfornia W. Sampson, a former supervisor at the University of Maryland physical plant, claims that his dismissal from the plant over two years ago was racially motivated.

A subsequent study of the plant's hiring practices reveals that black workers in the department are getting paid less than white workers according to a Maryland Human Relations Commission study.

The study also reveals that blacks have been hired at an annual salary which is $1,500 a year less than that of whites, and that the over-all difference in the averages is $2,374.

Additionally, of 24 persons earning over $10,000 a year, none is black.

Although the data was compiled some two years ago, one commission source noted that the data have not changed significantly since then.

State Police retire last two-tone car

The familiar sight of those two-tone brown and black painted State Police cars will be no more than memories from now on.

In use since 1935, the familiar patrol cars were officially retired recently when the last cruiser, N-18, was turned in to Lt. Vaughn G. Pepper head of the motor vehicle section.

The first black and brown camouflaged-appearing cars were pressed into service in 1935 were Ford coupes with wire wheels and rumble seats. This color combination has been replaced with the now familiar yellow painted cruisers.

The change was initiated by State Police Superintendent Thomas S. Smith in an effort to make the cars more visible and to save money.
