Poor workmanship covered by local laws, State says

Who can a homeowner turn to when a contractor does a poor job?

In a recent opinion released by Francis B. Burch, the Maryland Attorney General, the homeowner must first turn to his local government officials before taking his complaint to the state.

• • •

The ruling by Attorney General Burch came in response to a request by John R. Jewell, the state secretary of licensing and regulation.

• • •

Jewell had asked if the Maryland Home Improvement Commission could suspend or revoke the license of a private contractor for a single case of poor workmanship.

• • •

Defective workmanship, Burch said, must first be penalized by local law before the State Commission can intervene.

His ruling, however, does not affect the commission's power to act in single instances of abandonment of work, fraud, falsification of contract and other violations which are not solely 'defective workmanship'.

United Fund initiates minority, women programs

The United Fund of Central Maryland has initiated a new program for exploring avenues for utilization of manpower of minorities and women.

To this end, according the newly appointed coordinator of the Fund's newly instituted Affirmation Action Plan, Charles White, a statistical questionnaire has been sent to each participating agency of the Fund.

"We shall analyze each one to find out how to utilize women and minorities," Mr. White stated.

He said the deadline for the questionnaire is July 15. It is expected that based on information received from the questionnaire a workable affirmative plan programs will be written by September 1, he claimed.

The Affirmative Action Plan was instituted in April this year. Since then the Plan's committee has worked to formulate a feasible plan for the elimination of discriminatory practices in such areas as hiring, promotion and representation on committee for both the internal function of the United Fund and its member agencies.

There are presently eight black professionals on the staff which represents 24 per cent of the total professional personnel. In 1969, there was only one black professional staff member. The Board of Directors of the United Fund has 13 black members or 21 per cent of the 61 regular members. In addition, 2 ex-officio members are blacks.

The eight females on the staff make up 26 per cent of the professional personnel, and the Board of Directors include seven who are female and three ex-officio members.

The new coordinator for the Affirmative Plan, Mr. White was the first director for the Anne Arundel County Human Relations Commission.

A native of Ohio, he is a graduate of the Ohio State University and holds a Master's Degree in African Studies from Howard University.

A former teacher and educational consultant, he has developed human relations programs for the schools systems of Akron and Cleveland, Ohio, and the District of Columbia.

Mr. White is the founder and honorary chairman of the Poor People's Rights Organization and serves as a member of the United States Army's Equal Employment Opportunity Advisory Council and the Academy of Political Science at Columbia University.

Firecrackers can lead to tragedy

"Laceration of the lower right lid, ruptured globe of right eye and total hyphemia" are the medical terms used to describe an eye injury sustained when a silver salute was thrown into a crowd at a party.

Doctors at the hospital said, "the young man will probably lose the sight in his left eye and possibly could lose his sight altogether."

This Marylander is just one of 355 persons who suffered a firework's eye injury during 1969 4th July celebrations, according to a national survey recently released by the Fire Marshals' Association of North America, the National Fire Protective Association and the National Society for the Prevention of Blindness.

• • •

With one of every three or four of these recorded injuries affecting the eyes and caused by bootleg fireworks, the Maryland Society for the Prevention of Blindness urges observance of the federal law which prohibits the transportation of fireworks into states such as Maryland which ban their sale and use except under permit.

Senior volunteers in action

Baltimore City's Retired Senior Volunteer Program was five months old on July 1, 1973 and there were already 150 senior volunteers in action, over the age of sixty.

In May, 65 of these volunteers accumulated 1207 volunteer hours.

Senior Volunteers are now serving at the Broadway Towers, Good Samaritan Hospital, Goodwill Industries, the Jewish Community Center, John L. Deaton Medical Center, Lutheran Social Services, the Maryland Academy of Sciences, Meals-on-Wheels, St. James Terrace Apartments, the School of the Chimes, Union Memorial Hospital and the United States Public Health Hospital.

RSVP arranges lunch, transportation and accident insurance for its Senior Volunteers in the hope of eliminating the financial burden of volunteering.

Volunteers work in groups whenever possible so that they can meet and make new friends.

A gentleman working at Goodwill volunteering so much that he began to Industries one day a week enjoyed serve a second day at the Maryland Academy of Sciences. He is but one example of the determination of RSVP volunteers to remain active and important in the Baltimore community.

CONDITIONS at Lafayette Market are to be changed in the near future. After Del. Lloyal Randolph's Friday tour, the new manager agreed to rid the market of unused dilapidated stalls, like the ones pictured in the photos above by AFRO photographer I. Henry Phillips, Sr. He also agreed to thoroughly clean and paint the market where many persons in the community buy fresh fruits and vegetables. Del. Randolph said there are about 20 empty stalls in the building.

Free 'walk in' clinic to test lead poisoning

Plans are underway to open a free "walk-in" clinic to test youngsters for lead paint poisoning, the Baltimore City Health Department announced today.

The clinic will be open in the Druid Health District Building, 1515 W. North Avenue, each Monday from 1-3 p.m. beginning July 9.

This will be the City Health Department's first such clinic and will supplement the 15 child health clinics where similar testing has been done since the first of the year.

Lead paint poisoning is a crippling disease that can affect a child physically and mentally. Early detection can prevent serious illness.

The new walk-in screening clinic is made possible through a federal grant and the cooperation of the Maryland State Department of Health and Mental Hygiene Laboratories.

It is the latest development in the City Health Department's attack on child lead paint poisoning in Baltimore City that goes back to the 1930's.

ESTO '76 convention in Baltimore

The Estonian Salute to our nations's bicentinnial celebration of 1976 (ESTO '76) will be held in Baltimore in July, 1976, it was announced today by Baltimore Forward Thrust, Inc., the City's convention bureau.

The Estonian - American National Council has accepted the recommendation of over 200 cultural, scientific and religious Estonian Societies to hold the 1976 Estonian World Festival in Baltimore.

ESTO '76 will be the first world festival to be held in the United States, and is expected to attract over 15,000 Estonians from every corner of the world.

New motor vehicle laws into effect

Free State motorists should be interested in the folowing changes in Maryland motor vehicles which went into effect July 1:

Anyone who has ever had to fill out an accident report form will be pleased to learn that after July 1, 1973, they will no longer have to do so where the accident has been investigated by a law enforcement officer.

Motorists must still complete a report, however, where there has been a death or personal injury accident or property damage in excess of $100 resulting from an accident which has not been investigated by the police.

• • • •

Under other legislation, a learner's permit issued after July 1st will remain valid for 90 days instead of the present 60 days, allowing motorists an additional 30 days in which to take a driving test.

• • •

Young adults between the ages of 18 and 21 will no longer be required to have their driver's license application signed by a parent or other responsible adult.

• • •

Also, motorists will be prohibited from parking within 30 feet of a YIELD sign or driving over a fire hose unless directed to do so by an authorized official on the scene.

• • •

Doctors now must report certain specified medical conditions of motorists to the Motor Vehicle Administration's Medical Advisory Board for evaluation to determine whether or not such a condition would impair that person's ability to safely operate a motor vehicle.

Through this legislation, the Motor Vehicle Administration will be in a better position to remove potentially unsafe drivers from state highways before they are involved in a serious accident.
