New security measures for reform school

Following a July 15 disturbance at the Maryland Training School for Boys in which three employees were injured, the youth supervisors expressed concern for their safety.

Citing lack of security at the school, several employees contacted the Maryland Classified Employees Association seeking help.

The MCEA in responding to the employees request, scheduled a meeting with Robert Hilson, Director of Juvenile Services, and Robert Harrington, Superintendent, Maryland Training School for Boys, to discuss the problem.

Harrington, afterwards, contacted the MCEA and stated that the following changes would be implemented at the Maryland Training School for Boys:

1. The two cottages housing committed boys would be moved from the committed campus to the Junior Campus in a one-story building where there are individual rooms for the purpose of tighter security. The younger, non-aggressive boys moving to the Senior committed campus would be housed in a three-story building because they do not need as much supervision as the aggressive boys.

2. The Maryland Training School for Boys would start to fill all vacant Youth Supervisory positions immediately, in order to reinforce the Staff.

3. Two or more Youth Supervisors will be assigned to the more aggressive cottages.

Women in politics at UL Convention

By Lillian Wiggins

WASHINGTON

When six women get together and all are involved in politics, there is bound to be a lively session.

This was the occasion when "Black Women in Politics" were the center of attraction Tuesday evening at a forum in which they met the press at the National Urban League Convention.

The lively participants were Dr. Ethel D. Allen, Councilwoman from Philadelphia; the dynamic Miss Barbara Jordan, Congresswoman from Texas; Yvonne Brathwaite Burke Congresswoman from California; Maryland State Senator Verda F. Welcome of Baltimore; newly elected Congresswoman from Illinois, Cardiss Collins and the unbought and unbossed Congresswoman from New York, Shirley Chisholm.

The questions asked centered around politics, sterilization of black women; abortion, and welfare programs. Perhaps the most lively subject was the relationship between black men and women.

Representative Chisholm who stated that she has gone through much in her struggle to survive as a black woman in politics, when speaking about the role of black women and black men, said she might be a bit prejudiced . . . on the subject.

She feels that the best qualified should be utilized be it male or female. "While it is true that our black men have been masculated," she said, "You can't blame that on black women in this country today."

Mrs. Chisholm explained that black women and men are going to have to get away from letting "this stereotype attitude persist" and go ahead with the business of working together and making things move for the good of the race.

Making her mark in Washington with her sharp responses to questions asked of her was Barbara Jordan. She was witty and certainly can be dubbed as "a no nonsense woman."

Answering a question concerning the power of blacks in politics and how far politics can go to protect the rights of women and minorities, Rep. Jordan replied, "I am one who still believes that there is a coalition of people of goodwill."

In referring to a new breed of blacks in politics, Miss Jordan said she didn't just mean blacks taking part at the ballot box but actively taking part in the political process.

"It's going to take black people who are not trying to sell anything and who are not jockeying for any position.

She explained that all were desirous of striving for higher goals but if blacks hoped to achieve and become vocal in the political process they were going to have to be prepared to give up something. "We have to make a sacrifice in order to get things moving," she said.

Rep. Jordan indicated that if this were done then the votes to accomplish all of this could not only come from blacks, but from brown, red, female and male alike.

Dr. Allen, making an imput on the subject, explained that when she ran for her seat in the city council of Philadelphia she was the only one prepared to put her head on the chopping block. "No men," she said, "were in the running. After throwing her hat in the ring all of the men, she stressed, wanted to tell her how to run and the type of campaign she should wage.

"I ran on my FBI platform, Fat, Black and Intelligent."

This invoked laughter from the audience who clapped wildly. "I decided that what you see is what you get," she said. Dr. Allen said she was sorry for people who get hung up on "whether it's pants or panties."

Mrs. Chisholm stressed that it was time for the black politician to stop getting hung up in the leadership roll. "If they move together they will be able to capture more seats in the Congress and state legislature."

Pointing to Gary, Ind. and the black convention a year or so ago, Miss Chisholm said, "We are scattered. We have to stop talking about blackpower and move together. When men see woman moving . . they start tripping all over themselves."

Mrs. Chisholm who feels that after her experience in the Congress and that of running for President of the United States she has been "nailed to the cross by black politicians."

She hinted that it was easy for the black politician, to go his way when he doesn't agree, rather than knock the individual because she happens to be a woman.

In so many words, judging from her disheartening experiences, one gathered that the lady who has fought many battles, is giving up on the political process.

She stressed that she didn't want to be a career politician. "I don't want to be carried out on a stretcher," she said.

She concluded by saying that she had paved the way and that she would leave things in the capable hands of people like Barbara Jordan.

Mrs. Burke addressed herself to the issues involving sterilization. She was asked if the OEO guidelines did not indicate that such practice could not be carried and who was responsible.

The Congresswoman from California stressed that no one seems to know where the guidelines are. She strongly suspected that "they were lost on the desk of someone at the White House."

As of July 19, she said the guidelines were clear. "As black pwople," she said, "we are so dependent on government action. She stressed i before these sterilization cases came to light an awful lot of people were going along with the program.

"We don't have to sell our soul to get what government assistance is being provided," she concluded.

Senator Verda Welcome of Baltimore, Md. indicated that she had received a letter from a person of color asking her to introduce a bill in the State Senate which would prevent two retarded people from getting married.

She threw this out to show that both black and white alike are not sensitive to the needs of the poor and afflicted. "Of course, she said," I will not introduce such a bill."

"Personally, she stressed, "I am not for taking a life in any form." Mrs. Welcome pointed out some of the difficulties she has had while serving as a State Senator but stressed that she was there to serve all of the people.

The question of Watergate and political parties rose its head but was quickly solved when the panelists agreed that no one party can claim all of the votes of the black population.

Dr. Allen stressed that what happens in the Republican party where blacks are concerned solely depends on what blacks do within and outside the party. In Philadelphia, she said, we are taking the advantage of Watergate and have adopted an open door policy.

When it's convenient to run as a Republican then we will do so and when it is expedient to run as a Democrat . . then we will do that too."

The meeting ended on a happy note close to 10:10 and the participants, Miss Ethel Payne, moderator were honored with a reception in the thoroughbred room.

The panel of journalists included Simeon Booker, Johnson's Publications; Eileen Shanahan, New York Times; Nick Kotz, Washington Post; and Alice D. Travis, formerly of WTTG.

Ms. Sadie Brown of Lafayette Ave. in Baltimore, Md. recently retired from the Western Electric Co. Ms. Brown had 30 years service at the Bell System's Broening Highway telephone equipment plant.

MR. AND MRS. JOHN L. DAVIS
(former Miss Janice Bennett)

Miss Bennett - Mr. Davis wed at New Hope Baptist Church

In a traditional wedding ceremony at New Hope Baptist Church, Miss Janice Bennett became the wife of Sgt. John L. Davis of the U.S. Air Force.

The bride was lovely in a white full skirt organza gown of white with applique complementing the front. Her long full sleeves which cuffed at the wrist added to the attraction of the dress.

Her headpiece was a full Camelot-style which fell softly just below the shoulders.

Matron of honor, Mrs. Barbara McNeal wore a yellow full-length gown with matching accessories.

Bridesmaids were Misses Eileen Bynum, Alexandra Blumerg, Yvette Lucas, Sharon Lucas and Mrs. Phyllis Long. They were lovely in lime green floor-length gowns with matching hats.

Junior bridesmaids, Misses Melva Bennett and Lisa Hudnall, wore pink gowns and accessories.

Best man was George Davis, the groom's brother. Ushers were James Bennett, Howard Smith, Reese Jones, Louis Blackwell, Stanley Franklin.

Junior ushers were Mark Hudnall and Alvin Campbell.

Ringbearer was Master Steven Jackson and flower girl, Candice Smith.

The bride is a graduate of Douglass High School and Cortez Peters Business College. She is presently employed by Model Cities.

Mr. Davis is presently a student at Morgan State College studying as a political science major.

It's Homecoming Time In Calvert Co.

It was Homecoming time in Calvert County. Services were held at the Mt. Tabor Methodist Church, Crisfield, Md. on Sunday, July 22 at 3 p.m. The Rev. William H. Davis, pastor of Wards Methodist Church, delivered a glowing sermon. His choir members which included Miss Hortense Queen and Mesdames Martha Davis, Hilda Creek, Hazel Gray, Sarah Contee, Ruth Reid and Laura Randall, provided the music. They were accompanied by James Currie, pianist.

Visitors from Baltimore included the Rev. Mr. and Mrs. William Edwards, Mesdames Martha C. Davis and Hattie Charter, Mr. and Mrs. Howard Larkins and children and James Hackett, William Goodman and John Wesley Branford.

The closing services of the homecoming at Cooper Church will be held all day on Sunday, July 29, the Rev. Charles N. Bourne, pastor. The Rev. William Edwards will deliver the sermon at 3 p.m., and the Rev. Henry Chase will deliver the 8 p.m. sermon, along with his band.

The Peters camp meeting will open Sunday, August 5, 1973.

Funeral services were held for Mrs. Lionia Ardella Reid at Mt. Hope United Methodist Church in Sandy Land, Md. on Saturday, July 21.

She was born August 19, 1902 and was the daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Cephas (Susie) Randall.

Mrs. Reid attended Wards United Methodist Church until her marriage to the late John Reid when they both became members of Copper United Methodist Church. She worked in many churches and was a member of the Rainbow Gospel Singers.

The Rev. Charles N. Bourne presided, gave words of comfort and spoke on the subject taken from the Epistle of St. Paul, "Whatsoever state I find myself, I learn to be contented."

Mrs. Hilda Hawkins rendered a solo. Cards of condolence and the obituary were read by Mrs. Doris Tyler.

The Rev. William Edwards delivered the eulogy. His subject was "Precious in the sight of the Lord is the death of his Saints."

Words of comfort were given by the Rev. William H. Davis of Wards Methodist Church and the Rev. Henry Chase.

Survivors are son, James Wallace; four brothers, two sisters, Mesdames Sarah Hawkins and Maybelle Evans; one aunt, a devoted friend, Isaac Hawkins; a daughter-in-law, grandchildren, great-grandchildren, nieces, nephews and many friends.

Interment at Mt. Hope Cemetery. Pinkney Sewell and Sons, morticians.

Consumers can call FDA hot line

Baltimore area residents can receive timely messages from the Food and Drug Administration by dialing the agency's Consumer Phone — 462-4499.

Messages are recorded weekly on topical subjects such as nutritional labeling, safety closures for drugs and food additives. FDA often explains pending legislation and gives its position on controversial matters such as saccharin and vitamin regulations. Special interest items are also recorded — for instance, on pet turtles as carriers of salmonella or proposals on tobacco health-warning controls.

In addition, FDA will immediately record urgent messages. Information on recalls of dangerous products and public warnings regarding botulism are examples.

Be an informed consumer. Make a notation of the number and keep it near your phone. Call at least once a week.

Tip for picnickers

Planning some great picnic days in the outdoors this summer? BEWARE: lack of proper cooling of food can turn a summer picnic into a tragedy, warns the American Medical Association. Most foods spoil quickly away from refrigeration because of the rapid growth of bacteria that cause food poisoning. AMA offers these tips: Keep perishable sandwich ingredients cool and in their original wrappings, and prepare the picnic lunch only when ready to eat. For potato salads, keep hard-cooked eggs and potatoes separate in the cooler and then combine ingredients at the last minute. Be extra cautious about serving pies or cream-filled pastries. Following a few simple suggestions means a safer summer picnic!

• • •

Fresh vegetable kabobs cooked on the barbecue grill are flavored when brushed with melted butter. But they're even tastier when the melted butter has other flavors added! So, for a tastier kabab, brush with Parmesan-Butter Baster. Combine ½ cup (1 stick) melted butter with ¼ cup grated Parmesan cheese, 1 tablespoon lemon juice and ½ teaspoon leaf oregano. Then cook your favorite vegetable kabob combination, brushing occasionally with the butter baster for a great cookout meat accompaniment.

Now buyers are getting "bugged"! According to a survey conducted by the Council of Better Business Bureaus to which approximately 70,000 people responded, poor product performance, advertising that misleads or claims too much, and poor personal service in store, really bothers shoppers these days!

When it comes to cooking, the power companies offer a few tips to conserve energy during the latest crisis: Use a portable grill or fry pan instead of the oven. When the oven is used, cook as many dishes as you can at the same time. And, avoid using a large surface unit for a small pan. However, the dairy industry suggests ways to avoid cooking altogether: Use your imagination and dairy products right from the refrigerator for some super summer meals. Fresh fruits and vegetables complement such dairy products as cottage cheese, yogurt, sour cream or natural cheese, for tasty snacks, salads, main dishes or desserts.

This summer slip the family or friends something cool and refreshing to sip on made with milk. For three tall creamy coolers, mash 1 cup fresh strawberries, and mix or blend with 2 tablespoons sugar and ½ pint softened strawberry ice cream. Add 2 cups cold milk and beat until frothy. Pour into glasses and top each with a scoop of vanilla or chocolate ice cream.

AFRO bonus recipe

Fruited Sangral a la Mold

A salad or dessert:

This easy recipe, quickly put together the night before, can be hot weather salad or dessert. It tastes even better for cooling its heels a few hours or a day in the refrigerator.

Perhaps it hadn't occurred to you to eat your Sangria. When the bottle is open, pour Sangria for the meal and eat it, too, in this refreshing dish. Make use of the handy small cans of fruit; combine it for variety with fresh fruit in season.

Try different combinations, lining individual molds with surprises like banana slices, berries, a wedge of cream cheese, drained canned pears or pineapple. For salad, add 1/3 to 1/2 cup diced celery to fruit.

One (three ounce) pkg. wild cherry flavor relatin, one cup boiling water, One-half cup Sangria, chilled; One-third to one-half cup lee water or strained fruit juice.
