NAACP holds convention, annual banquet

By Brenda J. Wright

The highlight of the 33rd annual convention of the Maryland branches of the NAACP was the Freedom Fund-Life Membership banquet Saturday at the downtown Holiday Inn.

With the convention theme, "NAACP: Today and Tomorrow," the Honorable C. DeLores Tucker, secretary of state of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania, was the guest speaker.

As she began her talk, Mrs. Tucker received a standing ovation from the 300 delegates.

"It is the best of times for many of us but it is also the worst of times for so many others," Mrs. Tucker told the group before reminding them, "What happens to one of us, happens to the rest of us."

Mrs. Tucker, well-known as a strong supporter of the NAACP, remarked, "There aren't any friends of the NAACP, if they aren't members."

Miss Edith Throckmorton, chairwoman of the Incentive and Awards Committee, made the awards presentation.

Mrs. Salome Howard, president of the Charles County NAACP branch, received the coveted Dr. Carl Murphy Award for her outstanding service.

The Dr. Carl Murphy Award was created in 1965 by the State Conference to perpetuate the indomitable leadership of the journalist and civil rights fighter and to honor present day individuals who demonstrate leadership, spiritual and secular in the fight for freedom.

The Charles County branch received the noted Dr. Lillie Mae Jackson Award for meritorious service.

The Dr. Lillie Mae Jackson Award was created in 1965 to honor and perpetuate the life-long interest of the dynamic builder for full citizenship and to honor the contributions of the recipient branches.

Receiving awards of recognition were Father Robert Powell, of Anne Arundel County, the Baltimore City, Calvert, Worcester and Anne Arundel Counties branches.

Walter Weldon Black, State Conference president, presided during the two-day convention.

Others participating in the banquet program included: the Rev. J. C. Mills, Mrs. Enola McMillan, president of the Baltimore City branch; the Rev. John W. Holland, Silas E. Craft, national board member; Dr. William Watts and the Rev. Olin Moyd, of Baltimore.

Founders Day At Morgan

In the observance of its annual Founders' Day Convocation on Monday, Nov. 12, Morgan State College will reflect on 106 years of input into the field of higher education.

In the annual festivities, which will be held in the Carl Murphy Auditorium at 11 a.m., the entire College community will pause to take a look back at its historical roots and reflect anew on the challenges of the present and future.

Since 1867 Morgan State College has grown from a small private institution established by the Methodist Church with a handful of students and two part-time faculty, to a public institution supported by the State of Maryland with over 5,000 students and a full-time faculty of 315, of whom 49 per cent hold doctoral degrees.

Once with only a single classroom, Morgan now has a campus of 130 acres and 31 buildings valued at more than $33 million and some 10,800 graduates.

Earl G. Graves, a 1958 graduate is the keynote speaker for the celebration Monday morning. He will be preceded by Edward N. Wilcox, '21, Morgan registrar emeritus, who will present an historical account of the founding of the College and its activities since that time.

The observance is the kickoff of the first broadly-based Annual Fund Campaign ever undertaken.

The Foundation's goal is to seek $5 million over a 5 to 7 year period to maintain its level of excellence in the innovation of higher education and needs of students.

Graves, who has built a veritable empire of publishing institutions, among which is the Earl G. Graves Publishing Company, Inc., which publishes his magazine, Black Enterprise, will serve as national co-chairman along with James W. Rouse, a founder and chairman of the Board of Directors of the Rouse Company. He is the developer of the universally-famed, model city of Columbia, Md.

Gov. Mandel and Dr. King V. Cheek Jr., president are honorary chairmen of the Annual Fund.

Music is by the Morgan Choir under direction of Nathan Carter with Herbrett Clinton at the piano.

EARL G. GRAVES — distinguished Morgan State College alumnus, will deliver the annual Founders' Day Convocation address at the College, Monday, Nov. 12.

Historical study funded

Senators J. Glenn Beall Jr., and Charles McC. Mathias have announced approval of a $131,360 federal grant to the Maryland Historical Trust to continue survey and inventory of historic sites in Maryland.

The senators said the grant, from the Department of the Interior, will be used in developing a State Historic Preservation Plan. The plan will be a guide to the historic resources of Maryland, and it will be used to help the state carry out its preservation program.

The plan outlines the objectives of the historic preservation movement in Maryland, provides an inventory of the state's historic resources, and contains a status report on the state's preservation program.

Defective machines sought

Sears, Roebuck and Co., is continuing its efforts to locate owners of six models of portable dishwashers because of a possible safety-related defect.

O. L. Weir, general manager of all Sears operations in the Washington-Baltimore-Annapolis Area said the models can be identified as model Nos. 587.720210, 587.720211, 587.720310, 587.720311, 587.720410 and 587.720411. The unit can be identified by the model number located on the inside door frame.

He said some 65,000 units in question were produced since April, 1972.

Walbrook has career day

A Career Conference was sponsored at Walbrook High School by the Guidance Department, headed by Miss Lois Scherer.

Among those participating in the program were Mrs. Anne O. Emery, principal; Miss Sheila Lawson, vice president of the senior class and Dr. Haywood Harrison, director of development at Morgan State College.

Professions, representing various fields, were also on hand to address the student body.

MSTA suing college

The Maryland State Teachers Association (MSTA) filed suit in Baltimore Dsitrict Court charging seven members of Frederick Community College's trustee board and its president with violating the constitutional rights of two former professors.

The two professors, Roger M. Shaw and Richard A. Winn, were involved in the controversy at the college last spring and summer which resulted in the attempted firing of 32 staff members.

The suit charges the only two fired as a result of the controversy were Shaw and Winn. It appears that the only two chosen to be fired are active in Frederick County politics. Winn is the presently-elected mayor of Walkersville, and Shaw recently lost a close election for public office in Frederick City and has been a controversial figure in local politics.

DMV move cited by Randolph

Calling Department of Motor Vehicle facilities in the 600 block of N. Howard St. "woefully inadequate" Del. Loyal Randolph voiced support for the move of the office to the old Sears building in Mondawmin Shopping Center.

The DMV is expected to take February occupancy of the building owned by the Northwest Corporation Inc. under a five-year lease of $75,000 a year.

"It is commendable," Randolph said, "that this very fertile business area, which was abandoned . . . can now expect a revitalization . . .

"The DM Vwill bring new businesses and attractions to Mondawmin, thus making it again a noteworthy part of this city's economical life," he said.

Principals of Northwest Inc. include William "Willie" Adams, West Baltimore businessman, and Ellis Goodman, son-in-law of Irv Kovens, the governor's chief financier.

Jabbar, powerful Bucks to test Bullets Sunday

COLLEGE PARK — Emerging again as perhaps the NBA's dominant team, the Milwaukee Bucks will provide the test to the surging Capital Bullets Sunday, 7:35 p.m. at the University of Maryland.

The Bullets had won five consecutive games following their victory over the Houston Rockets. This raised their record to 5-5 after an 0-4 start. The game could mark the first appearance of Archie Clark, who has been sidelined all year with a separated right shoulder.

Abdul-Jabbar (formerly Lew Alcindor) and Oscar Robertson, two of the league's acknowledged superstars will lead the Bucks, along with forward Bob Dandridge.

Jabbar was fourth in scoring (25.3), seventh in rebounding (14.1) and second in blocked shots (5.25 per game) in the most recent NBA statistics, through games of Nov. 4. Dandridge was 14th in scoring with a 22.7 average.

* * *

The game will match two of the league's stingiest defenses. Milwaukee led the latest defensive statistics, allowing only 95.7 points per game. The Bullets vaulted from near the bottom to sixth, by allowing only 99.3 points per games over the last six games after a near-disastrous 120-per game for the first four games.

Phil Chenier, Elvin Hayes, Kevin Porter and Mike Riordan have been the best Bullets through the early going. Chenier is sixth in the NBA in scoring (24.9) and has also excelled defensively.

Hayes leads the league in rebounding with a 17.1 average. Porter has been all over the court, offensively and defensively, and Riordan has quietly raised his scoring to 18.2 and played his usual excellent defense.

Manny Leaks and Walt Wesley have filled in capably at center for Wes Unseld. The two have averaged 11.4 points and 15.6 rebounds.

More than one half the endangered wildlife species in the United States are found in Hawaii.
