Mrs. Moore and Dr. Turner CCB Harbor campus deans

By Dr. Sidney Kobre

The two new top administrators of the Harbor Campus of the Community College of Baltimore, recently appointed by the Board of Trustees, have already begun to study the problems they will face in their new positions.

Dr. Richard M. Turner III, now Dean of Student Activities on the Liberty Campus, will become Dean of the Faculty at the downtown branch of the college, and Mrs. Christine J. Moore, Director of Developmental Studies, will be the new Dean of Student Personal there.

They will work with Dr. William V. Lockwood, vice president of the Harbor Campus. They have already begun to confer with him on some of the general policies which will be the concern of their departments, although officially they will begin their jobs next September.

The appointments of Dr. Turner and Mrs. Moore were approved by the Board of Trustees following upon recommendation by President Harry Bard, who spoke highly of their qualifications and wide experience.

Dr. Turner has served for three years as Dean of Student Activities at CCB, and during that time has acted as advisor to the Student Government Association.

He has also coordinated the personal counseling services for students. In addition to his administrative duties, Dr. Turner taught a music history and literature course as well as a piano class at CCB. He served also on numerous committees, including the Executive Committee for Long Range Planning and the Cultural Arts Council.

Dr. Turner holds the Bachelor of Arts degree from Fisk University and the master's and doctoral degree from Indiana University, Bloomington. He has served as official examiner for the National Association of Schools of Music and as an evaluator of the Southern Association of Colleges and Schools.

The new Dean of Student Personnel at the Harbor Campus, Mrs. Moore has been director of Developmental Studies at CCB for five years.

Previously, she held numerous positions in the Baltimore City public schools, including that of teacher, counselor, department head and specialist supervisor.

At Johns Hopkins University, she was assistant director of the Workshop on Employment Opportunities for Disadvantaged Youth during the summer of 1966.

This project was sponsored by the Baltimore City Public Schools in conjunction with the Voluntary Council on Equal Employment Opportunity. A major outcome of the workshop was "Project Go," a city-wide public school career development program, which has received national recognition.

Mrs. Moore has served as consultant for the Prince George's County Department of Guidance, the Baltimore Public Schools Human Relations Workshop and the Baltimore City Health Department's Health Aide Training Program.

Mrs. Moore received her B.A. in English and History from Morgan College and her M.A. in Guidance and Student Personnel Administration from Columbia University. She pursued further graduate studies at the Johns Hopkins University and at Syracuse University.

State board requests ban on student autos

During its regular monthly meeting Wednesday, the state school board drew up a resolution calling for a ban on the use of automobiles by high school students on their way to and from school.

The action is yet another step on the part of state agencies to respond to the present energy situation.

A survey is being initiated to determine just what percentage of fuel will be saved within the state if such a resolution is mandated by the governor.

The resolution encourages students to use school buses already provided and asks parents to see to it that their youngsters use the public transportation facilities which they pay for (out of their tax dollars).

* * *

Although the resolution is only in draft form, the question has already been raised as to enforcement, namely how are you going to stop licensed teenaged people from driving?

The governor's new emergency powers which provide him with a wide purview in which to deal with the energy situation may be the answer, but as of yet no final decision has been made.

If by chance the resolution is passed affluent areas such as Prince George's County, Baltimore County, etc., will probably be the hardest hit.

In other board action, a resolution cutting state funds for part-time students was passed, despite protests from board member William Sykes.

Mr. Sykes said he opposed the measure because he is "against any action to reduce state assistance to schools."

He added, "Local school systems need all the help they can get in order to supply quality education."

According to Dr. Fred Brown, associate state school superintendent, the board found that almost a half million dollars is given to school systems for students who receive little or no supervision from those schools.

Pimlico sets talent show at school

"Pimlico Junior High School is alive and well and blossoming in Northwest Baltimore.

This statement will be illustrated when the "Pimlico Pacesetters," talented students from the school, perform on Friday, December 7, at 7 p.m. in the school auditorium, 3500 West Northern Parkway.

Sponsored by the Parent-Teacher's Association of the school, the show will feature a variety of individual and group musical and dramatic talents and exhibits of student crafts, artwork, and sewing skills.

Program assistance and coordination are under the direction of Mrs. Barbara Kelly, faculty member, and Mrs. Grace Jenkins, fund-raising chairman of the PTA, in partnership with the students. Advance sale of tickets has begun at the school. The public is invited.

Gov. Mandel says thanks for observing 50 mph

By Claudette Newson

Gov. Marvin Mandel opened his Thursday press conference by offering his "thanks to Maryland residents for observing the 50 mph speed limits," and for their voluntary compliance to other energy saving measures.

He also stated that he is against gas rationing and announced that he is calling upon high schools, as is the Maryland State Board of Education, to voluntarily limit the number of teenagers driving to school.

There is an indication that gas rationing may become effective sometime in early spring, the governor says, expressing a personal inclination against it.

Before gas rationing, he says, he would rather consider limiting the amount of gas a person can buy at one time from a station.

"I would rather be hard and firm with rules of purchase," than go into gas rationing, the chief executive said.

He's asking high schools to voluntarily supply bus transportation to youngsters who drive, and is also considering a four-day school week, another recommendation from the State Education Board.

If the four-day school week is put into effect, the time will be made up during those our days and not during those fourdays andnot during a longer spring or summer session, Mandel says.

Although Nixon is calling for a 55 mph limit for trucks and buses, the governor says that such a limit will not be enforced in Maryland unless it is enacted as law.

The 55 mph limit appears to be working well, the governor says, noting that members of his staff cite a more "even flow of traffic" and "less congestion."

When asked about Hyman Pressman's Baltimore City comptroller, announced intention to run for governor, Gov. Mandel remarked as usual that anyone who "has the desire" to run also "has the right."

He says he does not think that his much publicized list of campaign contributors will be used to hinder his re-election efforts because he is sure some of the same names will appear on Pressman's contribution lists.

When asked about plans for the annual New Year's reception, held in the Governor's Mansion, now occupied by Mrs. Barbara Mandel and her staff, the governor said:

"They'll announce that when they're ready."

Jail exceeds budget by $200,000-4 months

The Baltimore City Jail has exceeded its overtime budget by more than $200,000 in the first four months of the current fiscal year.

According to a report to Jail Board members during Wednesday's Jail Board meeting, the jail's budget for fiscal year ending in June, 1974 allocates $94,000 for overtime pay.

As of Wednesday, the amount spent totalled approximately $311,000.

Excessive absenteeism and support personnel are cited as causes of the overspending.

If allowed to continue at its present rate, over-spending could well reach $800,000 and $900,000 by June, 1974.

In the months of Sept. and Oct. alone, more than $147,000 was spent for overtime pay and in November another $70,000 may be used.

According to Gordon C. Kamka, jail warden, an average of 11 guards are absent each day and their positions are filled by guards working overtime.

Another factor contributing to excessive overtime is the new program for inmate control started in Sept. which requires 10 guards a day to work an extra shift.

Warden Kamka said he intends to move people from support section to correction in order to ease the load.

He also mentioned using federal Public Employment Program to hire guards on a 90-day basis in the hopes that the PEP officers will stay on as regular officers.

It is conceivable that the excess spending could be made up by the City Council and through reorganization of funds in the jail's operating budget.
