her son slowly assisted her to her seat.

Guests stood again when the Right Rev. and Mrs. Doll and the Rev. and Mrs. Wilson entered.

The honorees were last to be presented. It was well worth the wait. Were their friends ever surprised when they learned Mrs. Williams had made a complete change of outfits from white to blue.

When her son motioned her to enter, she walked graciously, a few tiny steps at a time, so that everyone could see her New York designer's original gown of sky blue. Sleeves to the wrist with a matching panel trimmed with dyed fox added even more beauty to the gown along with the V neckline and complementing blue accessories. She wore peau de soie pumps, sky blue, studded with rhinestones.

While Hen For Dinner

Following the Rev. Mr. Wilson's blessing, guests dined on a delectable stuffed boned breast of white hen meal with all the trimmings, including fresh Hawaiian pineapple boats.

Mrs. Elaine Howard, Dr. Williams' godmother and active member at St. James Episcopal Church, introduced the keynote speaker, the Right Rev. Mr. Doll, retired bishop of the Episcopal Diocese of Md., who remembered the Williams family through their active participation at St. James.

In his brief address he said: "Parents are not ones to lean on but ones to make leaning unnecessary. Their (Mr. and Mrs. Williams) own achievements in him are greater than his. The rest of the costs are buried in their hearts. Where there is real love, no sacrifice is too great."

Following the Right Rev. Mr. Doll's speech, Mr. and Mrs Williams presented his wife with a set of sterling silver water goblets.

On three occasions during the evening musical selections came from Mrs. Gloria Chester, accompanied by Mrs. Charlotte P. Swan, longtime member and organist at St. James music instructor in the Public School system and private piano teacher. The first piece rendered was dedicated to Mrs. Anethia Williams, her favorite, "More."

No One Knew

At this point, if guests didn't have their printed programs in hand, they probably would have thought the affair was over. But little did they know it had only just begun.

Dr. Williams called upon Mrs. Mitchell and Dr. Roland Patterson to come to the podium and make a special presentation from the Mayor to his parents. Dr. Patterson read the inscription designating Nov. 25, 1973 as "Mr. and Mrs. Roland B. Williams Day in Baltimore."

Citation From Mayor

Guests then saw Mrs. Mary E. Clayburn before the microphone looking a bit puzzled. She recalled that Dr. Williams had asked her to attend the salute and sit at the head table. She added that he told her she'd have a duty to perform that night. The night had come, she said, and she still didn't know what she was to do. Dr. Williams then said that everything else on the program was kept secret. No one knew what was to follow.

Never did the elder Mr. and Mrs. Williams know that their son would show his appreciation in such a manner as he did on Sunday. Or did they think he would give them a four-week sprint vacation abroad with a $1,000 to spend only to return on the famed Queen Elizabeth. And Mr. Williams didn't know he was going to get a hand-cut diamond ring designed especially for him by Stieff and presented by James Moore, general manager. When Dr. Williams called on Mano Schwartz to make the final presentation, Mrs. Williams didn't know she was going to get "the finest silver mink coat money can buy." But she did.

A champagne toast was made by Miss Betty Williams, Dr. Barksdale and guests to the honorees followed by the Honoree's Waltz where Mr. Williams swayed his lovely wife across the dance floor. A few moments later they were joined by their son and daughter-in-law and then by their hundreds of guests.

"A thing of beauty is a joy forever," that's my favorite saying," said Mrs. Anethia William. "You are the beauty and Ronald is the joy," she added.

Woodlawn HIGHlights

MRS. GREEN

In the mailbox this week was a letter from a dear friend and former Social Security employee, Mrs. Loisetta Nortleet Smith.

It has been several years since Mrs. Smith left Baltimore to live and work in National City, Calif. Accompanied by two other delegates she will be arriving at Dulles Airport on Sunday to attend the National Convention of the National Council of Negro Women. She will be staying at the L'Enfant Plaza Hotel through December 9.

Mrs. Smith was one of the pioneer key punch operators in the Candler Building. At the time of her resignation she was secretary to Dr. Lucius Lesper, Employee Health Service deputy director. She was also a member of this writer's wedding party several years ago. She plans to stay in Baltimore at her mother's Garrison Ave. home until December 16 visiting with friends and relatives before returning to California.

Mrs. Gwendolyn McRae, mother of the AFRO-AMERICAN Newspapers' Club Notes writer, Miss Michelle McRae, was promoted this week in the Bureau of Disability Insurance.

In her new GS-9 position as disability inquiries specialist, Mrs. McRae will be answering inquiries from wage earners, field offices and congressional staffs relating to SSA's Disability Insurance Program.

Mrs. Olivia Weems, technical assistant in BDI, recently served as hostess to the Les Tams at their November meeting. The club ladies discussed plans for their annual spring dance to be held on April 26 at Emerald Gardens.

SSA members helping with the plans included: Mesdames Gladys Scott, Irene Terry, Marjorie Green and former employee, Miss Barbara Cox.

Other members contributing ideas were Mesdames: Elnora White, Virginia Patterson, Forriest Ayres, Hortense Henry and Jenny McCoy. Absent member was Mrs. Vivian Randall Wells, another former SSA pioneer key punch operator.

The atmosphere was warm and friendly in Galilee Baptist Church when the Senior Usher Board celebrated their 29th anniversary. It was well worth the trip to Dundalk just to hear the renditions of the fifty voice choir under the direction of SSA's Mildred Ranson. The children in the group were so well trained in song that it was hard to believe the musical sounds were coming from such small youngsters.

Mrs. Ranson also plays the organ for the choir. She is the wife of the Rev. Shirley Ranson, pastor of Galilee Baptist Church.

Cases

Case No. 31 — I have 7 children and their father was in some trouble back in September and he went to jail. He lost his job at General Motors and so he will not be able to give us a happy Christmas this year. I would like very much if you will send my children a basket. He will have to go to court for the trouble he's in but we don't know when.

* * *

Case No. 32 — I am the mother of 4 children. I was receiving welfare help but I was cut off. Now the only income that I have is what I work for. I as married but my husband deserted children. I would like to have some food and clothes for them. The children's sizes are 12, 16, and 16½.

Case No. 33 — I would like a basket for Thanksgiving or Christmas. Husband has been out of work for 4 years. Had a heart attack. I have 8 children, 5 girls and 3 boys. I suffer from high blood pressure. We receive small check from welfare.
