Recent tests show that most chain saws make so much noise that operators should not be exposed more than 30 minutes a day without some kind of ear protection to cut down the sound volume.

W. Douglas Johnson, 95, long Baltimore educator

William Douglas Johnson, 95, pioneer Baltimore city educator, died Thursday morning at Johns Hopkins Hospital.

Mr. Johnson entered the hospital last Wednesday and lapsed into a coma. He never regained consciousness. Death was due to complications of old age.

Funeral arrangements are being handled by the Nutter Funeral Home.

Mr. Johnson was known to generations of young people who went through the Baltimore city schools as a wise and kind counselor and by members of Grace Presbyterian Church, where he served as Sunday School Superintendent, an elder and a member of the church's Genral Assembly.

• • •

In a 1960 AFRO interview about his retirement activities, Mr. Johnson said, "I love peonle. I was happy in my work. I a m happy in my retirement and I am happy in my marriage."

• • •

A native of Knoxville in Maryland's Frederick County, Mr. Johnson was educated in the public schools here.

He was a graduate of Storer College and Ohio University, where he was graduated in 1918.

After two semesters as a teacher at West Virginia State College, he came to Baltimore to begin his career here.

With the exception of seven years when he was principal of Elementary School No. 122, he spent his career, in Baltimore at Douglass Senior High School.

For 24 years he was an English teacher and then in 1942 he was named as the city's first male vocational counselor, a position he held until the day he hung up his academic gown in 1950.

Mr. Johnson had observed the vocational guidance program in Gary, Ind. and this was a factor which figured in his selection as a counselor.

He studied later during summer sessions at Harvard and also at the Catholic University in Washington.

• • •

Mr. Johnson and his wife of 33 years, Mrs. Edna Griffin Johnson, a retired Baltimore city school principal, resided at 2316 Montebello Terrace in Morgan Park.

They erected the home in 1928, and were one of the early residents of the northeast Baltimore suburban area.

After retirement, Mr. Johnson re-aquainted himself with his bookcase of books.

In an AFRO interview, he said, "I read quite a bit, magazines, as well as books."

A man with well-etched memories, Mr. Johnson remembered Frederick Douglass giving him a half dollar many years ago.

He also remembered AFRO founder John H. Murphy Sr., who as a young man came to his church in Knoxville, sang and played the organ.

• • •

His favorite song he would recite at the drop of a hat.

It was:

"All the shoulders we might lighten.

"All the hearts we might brighten.

"All the wrongs we might righten,

"Help just a little bit."

At one time, he told the AFRO the secret of his useful and healthy life and his throughout his life were the main occupation now and throughout his life were the same "happiness."

"I love people, all people," he repeated, "high on the mountain of life, in the middle or in the gutter, I love them all."

"Everyone wants happiness" he declared.

"I should advise young people to find themselves."

In addition to his wife, Mr. Johnson is survived by a son, Roscoe Douglas Johnson of Annapolis; a grandson, Roscoe Jr.; and a sister, Miss Mamie Johnson of Philadelphia.

Black Caucus seen readying for challenge

"As far as I know, I don't think he has the authority. I think he's gone a little too far. We don't need him to call a meeting. The Black Caucus will be meeting on Dec. 15," says Del. Lloyal Randolph, chairman.

He talked about the "opportunity," made available by City Council president Walter Orlinsky, for the city delegation to the House of Delegates to meet prior to a joint House-Senate delegation meeting with Mayor Schaefer on Dec. 18.

The Orlinsky move is seen as a renewed effort to oust Del. Troy Brailey, acting chairman of the city delegation, and means of counteracting an election held at the "illegal" meeting meeting will probably highlight the black caucus meeting.

• • •

If he is merely inviting us, that's one thing. If he is calling a meeting to elect a chairman, that's another thing. He will be acting without authority," said Del. Frank Conaway, running mate of Brailey and Randolph.

"If the black delegates are not together, then we will not be able to have a black chairman," he declared.

The letter, dated Dec. 3, was sent to Baltimore City members of the General Assembly, and calls for a 5 p.m. joint meeting usually held each year, "for the purpose of discussing Baltimore City's 1974 legislative program."

It also says, "At the request of several legislators an opportunity is being made available for members of the House to convene one-half hour earlier...."

• • •

Del. Brailey maintains that he is the only person who can call a meeting, and that the election of a city delegation chairman has in the past been conducted in Annapolis on the day the Legislature convenes.

Orlinsky said that he had not "called" a meeting, but said that "every time," he saw a member of the delegation, both lack and white, they had indicated to him that they wished to have a meeting to hold elections.

The regular joint meeting with the Mayor appeared to be a good opportunity for such a meeting he said.

The city council president said that delegation members could call a meeting whenever they liked. "They can hold a meeting in the middle of Charles Street if that's what they want to do."

Sen. Verda Welcome, who heads the ticket the three delegates are on says:

"If I were in his (Brailey) position, I would send a letter to Wally Orlinsky and to the legislators stating that the meeting will not be held at 4:30, but will be held in Annapolis. That should put an end to it all."

Col. Cade's mother to be buried Saturday

Funeral services for Mrs. Inez Richardson, wife of James Richardson of 2107 Windsor Ave., will be held Saturday, Dec. 8, at 12 noon from Ames United Methodist Church, Carey and Baker Streets, where she was a long-time member.

Mrs. Richardson, employed by the Department of Education until her 1961 retirement, was the mother of the late Army Col. Melvin H. Cade Sr., for whom the Winchester Street Armory has been renamed.

Before her death Tuesday in Sinai Hospital, Mrs. Richardson, 71, was active in the Order of the Eastern Star, Rebecca Chapter, Golden Circle and Jerusalem Court No. One, Daughter of Iris.

She served as past commandress and past emperial deputy of Daughter of Iris and was past matron of the Eastern Star group.

Fraternal services will be conducted by the groups on Friday, Nov. 7 at the church beginning at 7:30 p.m. The family will begin receiving friends at the church at 7 p.m.

Mrs. Richardson was born in Reisterstown.

In addition to her husband, she is survived by two grandchildren, Mrs. Deborah A. Bennett and Melvin H. Cade Jr.

Guess who's hanging out with I.W. Harper?

James Johnson, one of Baltimore's fly people.

The "Hip Set" digs James' style—which he shows best by the bourbon he drinks. I. W. Harper, the in-crowd pleaser.

In Baltimore, bourbon is Harper.

Market basket price dips

WASHINGTON (UPI) — With retail beef prices dropping for the frist time in 13 months, the annual rate cost of a typical food "market basket" registered its scord straight monthly is second straight monthly decline in October, an Agriculture Department report showed.

The report, however, also showed the 0.5 per cent October decline could have been 2.4 per cent if middlemen had passed through to consumers October's full price drop in raw farm products.

The October price of a retail market basket was $1,620.89 below September and $35 below the record August rate.

According to the report, the drop was due entirely to a continuing skid in the price of raw farm products.
