Mrs. Nash, 63, dies in New Jersey

Funeral services for Mrs. Evelyn Lamb Nash, former Baltimore beautician, were held Dec. 8 at the Lutheran Church of Our Savior, 3900 Groveland Ave.

Mrs. Nash died Dec. 4 at the East Orange General Hospital in East Orange, N.J. after a long illness. She was 63.

Born and educated in Baltimore, she operated a beauty salon for many years prior to moving to East Orange, where she operated a knit and yarn shop until ill-health forced her to retire.

he is survived by her husband, Nicholas Nash; her mother, Mrs. Annie Lamb; two sisters, Mrs. Louise Booze and Mrs. Helen Maddox and a brother, Ellis Lamb.

Dr. Harvey Johnson, 82, succumbs in Portsmouth

PORTSMOUTH — Hundreds of friends of both races gathered Monday at the Ebenezer Baptist Church here to pay tribute to the memory of Dr. Harvey Nathaniel Johnson the 82 - year - old civic leader who had served as pastor of the church for 42 years.

Dr. Johnson, first black to serve on the Portsmouth School Board, died Thursday, Dec. 6, at the Portsmouth General Hospital.

A pioneer in the fight for minority rights, he was a candidate for House of Delegates in the 1940s and for many years was a bridge of communication between blacks and whites. At his death he was chairman of the Citizens' Advisory Committee a City Council appointed bi-racial group and a member of the Tidewater Community College board.

He was a school board member in the 1960s.

For many years he was a member of the boards of the Portsmouth Tuberculosis Association and Portsmouth General Hospital.

In addition, he was one of the founders of the Boy Scout movement for blacks in Portsmouth and held the Silver Beaver award for outstanding service to boyhood.

He was also founder and president of the Baptist Allied Plan, which united black Baptists in Virginia.

A native of Richmond, Dr. Johnson was an architect before going into the ministry. Starting as a carpenter with his father, Ruffins F. Johnson, a building contractor he graduated from Virginia Union University. He studied architecture at the Carnegie Institute of Technology in Pittsburgh.

After a trip to Norfolk in the course of his work, he accepted the pastorate of the Mount Olivet Baptist Church in 1924. In 1931, he accepted the call to Ebenezer.

Dr. Johnson is survived by his son, Harvey N. Johnson Jr. of Portsmouth; a sister, Mrs. Mary J. Dunston of Philadelphia; two grandsons; and four great grandchildren.

Funeral services were conducted by Dr. J. H. Foster, pastor of the Shiloh Baptist Church in Norfolk and president of the Tidewater - Metro Ministers' Conference. Burial was in Lincoln Memorial Cemetery.

2nd minister to head House

TRENTON — The Rev. S. Howard Woodson has become the first black legislator in the history of the New Jersey Assembly to be elected as speaker of the House.

He becomes also possibly the first clergyman to hold that position since the late Rev. Lester Clee, from upstate Jersey over 25 years ago.

The assemblymen met Monday at the Holiday Inn, in Trenton, and approved a slate of posts drawn up by the State Democratic chairman Sen. James P. Dugan of Hudson County and Secretary of State-designate J. Edward Crabiel of Middlesex Co.

Elected along with Woodson was Assemblyman Joseph A. LeFante of Hudson County, who will serve as majority leader in the lower house.

Many black organizations and individuals in the state had pressed for the selection of Ronald Owens, also a black veteran legislator from Essex County, for the majority leader post. Newark Mayor Gibson was one of the strong supporters of the move.

The assemblymen also approved a proposal by Assemblyman Eldridge Hawkins (D-Essex) of East Orange, to limit the leadership terms to two years.

This year marks the Rev. Mr. Woodson's 11th year in the assembly. His bid for the speaker's seat was knocked out last year by an alleged coup on the part of a Hudson County fellow Democratic assemblyman who switched his vote at the last minute.

But Woodson, who is also pastor of Trentons Shiloh Baptist Church, in the Nov. 6 election won by a wide majority in the general statewide Democratic sweep.

Burial rights held for Mr. A. M. Smith

Funeral services were held Tuesday for Alvin Monroe Smith, 52, 705 Lyndhurst St., who died unexpectedly last Friday at Loch Raven Veterans Hospital after a brief illness. Rites were held at Powell Funeral Home, 321-23 N. Schroeder St. with The Rev. Lewis Conaway officiating.

Mr. Smith, a Chesterbrook Va. native, born April 17, 1921, the son of Rufus and the late Mrs. Clara Smith, worked as a longshoreman for United Fruit Co. before retirement.

A product of Baltimore schools, Mr. Smith joined the Army and served in World War 2 before becoming a longshoreman.

According to relatives, Mr. Smith enjoyed helping people and was known as a handyman in the neighborhood. He was also a member of Cornerstone Baptist Church for some years.

Surviving are his wife, Mrs. Edna Smith; father, Rufus; aunt, Mrs. Florence Webb; children, Mrs. Paulene Henderson, Messrs. Gregory, Alvin, Lloyd, Charles, Andre and Tony Smith; and Misses Edna and Charles Smith and fourteen grandchildren.

Mr. Smith is buried in Cedar Hill Cemetery.

MASTER SERGEANT, and Mrs. Charles E. McKay are pleased with his recent promotion at Headquarters, U.S. Army First Recruiting District, Fort Meade.

SPRING SEMESTER

CCB offers new course dealing with pollution

By Dr. Sidney Kobre

Because of growing interest in pollution problems and the energy crisis, the Community College of Baltimore is offering an anti-pollution course for the spring semester.

This is but one of new courses being given this spring at the Liberty Campus and the various off-campus centers of the college. Classes begin in January, but registration is being held now.

A full program of liberal arts and career programs will be presented by the day division and the division of continuing education, which sponsors the later afternoon and evening courses.

The "Anti-Pollution course," which students are now enrolling for, will deal with air and gasoline pollution. The students will be concerned with river and stream pollution too.

Methods the nation and the state and city can use to counter-act effects of pollution will be discussed in class.

The course will devote considerable time to the present energy crisis, discussing how the problem developed, current status and future steps which may be taken to reduce the acute problem.

For further information about day division courses, call or write Joseph Stein, director of admissions, for the evening classes on the Liberty Campus or the off-campus centers, contact Paul Beckham, division of continuing education, CCB, 2901 Liberty Heights Ave. (21215) (telephone) 462-5800.

Complaints from truckers to be aired

Truckers who are filling their tanks at fuel pumps across Maryland and around the nation are cooperating with the Maryland Motor Truck Association in a motor fuel "price watch."

Any trucker who feels he has paid an excessive amount for diesel fuel or gasoline should call his company, giving location of the fuel pump and the price paid.

The company will forward that information to the Maryland Motor Truck Association.

The association will report excessive prices to the State Gasoline Tax Division which will act as a clearinghouse for both instate and out-of-state complaints. The Internal Revenue Service will be notified of price complaints.

The Maryland Motor Fuel Inspectors will investigate complaints of stations within Maryland.

Gasoline Tax Division personnel will alert administrators in other states of apparent violations of Federal Cost of Living regulations in their jurisdictions.

BLAIR WALKER, a freshman from Hampton Institute, and Miss Rita Lewis, a senior, were on the undefeated squad of the school's novice debate team, which won second place at the fall College Forensic Association Tournament held in West Chester, Pa.
