MISCELLANEA

The Federalist Party was nearly extinct at this time; nomination by the Democratic-Republican Party was tantamount to election . . . Monroe's popularity and his administration referred to as the "Era of Good Feeling," led to an unopposed second term, an honor accorded only one other, George Washington. His tranquility is expressed in his inaugural address, ". . . the heart of every citizen must expand with joy when he reflects how near our Government has approached to perfection; that in respect to it we have no essential improvement to make; that the great object is to preserve it in the essential principles and features which characterize it, and that is to be done by preserving the virtue and enlightening the minds of the people . . ."
