HISTORIC MT. MORIAH — For more than a year, the city of Annapolis and Anne Arundel County have battled over whether 99-year-old Mt. Moriah, one of the oldest structures built in Maryland by free blacks, will be destroyed to build a parking lot. The county, to which parishioners sold the structure, want the parking lot. While arguments continue, the building has suffered thousands of dollars of vandalism including breakage and theft of stained glass windows valued at over $100.
