Prior to the FBI listing, Mrs. Jones was only humiliated by two Baltimore County sheriffs who acted under Baltimore County Circuit Court Judge J. Harold Grady's bench warrant.

Mrs. Jones had been missing since Jan. 17. Previously she was absent from the witness stand because she was confined to a hospital with a heart condition.

General Peter D. Ward, prosecuting he case against Miles, said Mrs. Jones went in the hospital around Nov. 36.

He said he had no information that Mrs. Jones has been in fear of her life, only that she had been concerned over her physical condition and that Income Tax agents may get after her for having a cash sum of $72,000 as stated in the court records and supposedly turned over to Miles.

The affidavit given by FBI Agent states:

Charles Matthews III, Special Agent, Federal Bureau of Investigation being first duly sworn, deposes and says that Lt. Charles F. Greffen, Maryland State Police, advised him on Feb. 12 that Mrs. Ada Harris Jones is a material witness in the Circuit Court of Baltimore County in the case of State of Maryland vs. Stephen L. Miles, in which Miles is charged with false pretenses, larceny after trust, conspiracy to bribe, perjury and tax evasion, all felonies within the State of Maryland.

Lt. Greffen further advised that attempts by local police authorities to locate Mrs. Jones have indicated Mrs. Jones has fled the State of Maryland to avoid giving testimony and as a result an arrest warrant was issued by the Circuit Court of Baltimore County for Mrs. Jones' arrest on Feb. 8, charging that she did absent herself from the jurisdiction of Baltimore City to avoid service of process in State of Maryland vs. Stephen L. Miles.

Lt. Greffen further advised that two confidential sources of Maryland State Police of known reliability, who have provided information in the past which has led to the arrest of fugitives from justice, have advised that Mrs. Jones has fled the state of Maryland to avoid giving testimony.

These confidential sources are both personally acquainted with the family of Mrs. Ada Jones and have obtained their information through contact with said family and independently of each other.

Blount bill adds 'teeth' to consumer protection

ANNAPOLIS — A bill that would give the Maryland Consumer Protection Agency broader powers and outlines instances in which the agency would take action has been introduced by Sen. Clarence Blount, D-5th.

"The bill gives the Division of Consumer Protection three additional powers," Sen. Blount told the Senate Economic Affairs Committee, Tuesday.

They are:

"The power to issue cease and desist orders, the power to issue rules and regulations defining unfair, deceptive or unconscionable trade practices and the power to assess costs of investigation by the division and restitution to the consumer," he said.

"For the first time," Sen. Blount said, "S.B. 392 brings under the scrutiny of the division of consumer protection leases or rental items and consumer credit or debt collection abuses."

The bill lists 15 items, misrepresentations, ommissions or false statements of fact which are deceptive or mislead the consumer, which the agency may take action against.

It also enumerates "unsenator said.

conscionable practices" the "Whether these matters are covered in our present law is left up to the courts because of the lack of definition," he told the committee.

The bill "also sets up a nine member advisory council to the division of consumer protection to advise the division on general goals, development of programs, to undertake studies and to foster cooperation among federal, state, local and private agencies," Sen. Blount said.

Saying that he does not think the bill interferes "with the practices of any honorable merchant," the senator noted that the division is also empowered to dismiss complaints which it finds lacking in reason."

ing a clean wound, it mushrooms, tumbles end over end and rips the tissue, causing greater internal damage," Hill further explained. "The Department does not condone the use of hollow point bullets," he continued.

A gun specialist at an E. Baltimore St. sporting goods store told this reporter that the "dum dum" bullet is used for hunting fox, coyotes and small bear. "Hunters," he said, prefer this bullet for its deep penetration."

Later, the AFRO asked Hill whether he thought the use of a regulation bullet would have been the difference between life and death. "It is to my understanding that the victim would have died anyway," he said, because the bullet passed straight through the shoulders and into the neck."

Medical Examiner, Dr. Irving Sopher agrees. "Although the "dum dum" bullet tends to be more destructive, in this case the lead-nosed bullet would have the same affect. Even a 22 cal. bullet could have done the same damage because the bullet went through the soft tissue of the shoulder and neck and didn't hit any bone," he said.

Hill also announced that the Baltimore City Police Department, "in the near future," will switch to a bullet with "more impact" because "the criminals in the street are using more powerful ammunition than we are."

"We are changing to a new 38 cal. 158 grain "Semi Wad Cutter," which has the same velocity and impact as the "dum dum," but is not as destructive," he said. "The difference between the two bullets is that when the SWC bullet enters the body, it doesn't fragment, but stays intack," he added.
