King Day, mini bike bills signed

The Martin Luther King Day bill captured the limelight of today's bill signing ceremony in Annapolis but many other bills of key interest to the community were also signed.

For instance, Del. Tom Brailey's mini bike bill which requires persons selling mini bikes to inform the purchaser that the bike can only be used on private property.

Del. Brailey says parents have purchased mini bikes for their kids only to find that the machine is banned from street or sidewalks by Maryland law.

Three bills sponsored by the Baltimore City Senators to aid Provident Hospital were also signed.

A bill sponsored by Sen. Clarence Blount, D-6th, which will allow persons convicted of certain crimes to have their voting privileges restored after completion of their sentence was also signed.

Of the over 300 bills signed by the governor some 18 were sponsored or cosponsored by black legislators. The AFRO will carry a complete list in Friday's edition.

Childhood on Bay recalled

By Roman Hankewycz

As John T. Spencer sat reminiscing the days spent of the Chesapeake Bay, he called out the different parts of the Shamrock, a 1-36 inch scale model of the Flore Kurbine, the ship where he spent most of his younger days with his dad John T. Spencer Sr., an oyster man serving the Kurbine.

He noted "Hampton Creek Va., was her home port." She'd carry about a 10,000 oysters a day, travelling up the James River, to Chesapeake Bay, and then through Hampton Roads."

With 9 crew members aboard, she would work daylight to dark. 150 smaller work boats filling her decks with Mollusks each day."

Spencer, now 66, originally came from Yorktown Va., then years later he moved to Baltimore and attended Morgan State College, where he graduated in 1935 receiving a Bachelors of Science degree in Education, serving as a teacher and Stationary Engineer later.

• • •

"It would take 3½ years to build a ship like that" he noted with a smile of remembrance, "She was made to be a work boat, but you just dress up the board through her, and she's a schooner."

Working 1½ hours a day, at the craft shop at Fort Howard Veterans Hospital while recovering from a glastone operation, Spencer used 1¼ months to build his 31 inch replica of a boat that was in rital life almost 220 feet in length.

"I was only 12-13 years old at the time, but I can still remember Captains Allen and Luther, calling out the numbers of the serving boats, and how many bushes of oysters they had loaded. "It would take man at least 180 lbs. in weight to use the big tongs, and then load the oysters on board."

John T. Spencer, Sr. died in 1963, at the age of 92, but his son John Jr. still remembers the glory of that day.

John A. Harvey cited driver of the month

John A. Harvey full time vehicle operator has been rewarded for continuing outstanding driving abilities, vehicle care and performance of duty and recognized by the Baltimore Post Office as its "Driver of the Month—April 1974."

During a special ceremony Warren M. Bloomberg, Chesapeake District Manager, Eastern Region, United States Postal Service, commended Mr. Harvey for his professionalism in the performance of his assignments, citing that new employees are often assigned to ride with him as part of their training to observe proper driving habits.

Mr. Harvey was also recipient of an 18-year Safe Driver Award and Certificate from the National Safety Council.

• • •

Clinton B. Blackwell has received a Certificate of Appreciation for outstanding service in the 1973-1974 Combined Federal Campaign of Central Maryland. He is an assignment clerk for the replacement crew at the Main Post Office.

• • •

Carroll Alexander, clerk at the South Station of the Baltimore Post Office has received commendation for an adopted suggestion.

Md. Law School elects black student president

By a margin of only three votes, Kenny (Baltimore) Bevins was recently elected president of the University of Maryland Law School's student government, thus climaxing one of the more hotly contested and controversial campaigns in recent years.

A graduate of Morgan State College, Bevins rose to prominence last year when he initiated a fierce campaign against former law school dean William Cunningham.

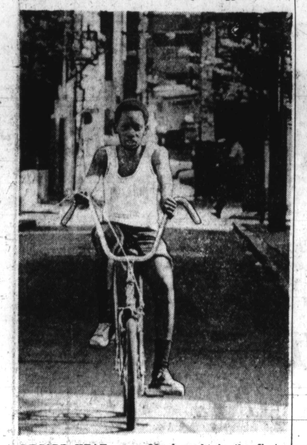
After Cunningham's sudden resignation in December, 1973, Bevins came under fire from segments of the white student population who had been in support of the 55-year-old dean.

Fortunately for Bevins the larger faction of the student body, both black and white, were in favor of his non-conservative approach to the law school.

"I was happy but not surprised. Most of the white students like me," he said.

Bevins' victory marks the first time in the school's history that a black student has served as both vice-president and president of the student government.

The 23-year-old Baltimorean is in the final semester at the law school and plans to enter politics after graduation.



RECORD HEAT, near 90, brought in the first days of May and tee-shirts and bikes. AFRO staff photographer Roman Hankewycz caught Ronnie Thompson, 14, enjoying the summer-like weather on Jasper St., just off the foot of Druid Hill Ave.

Aging Commission slates pre-retirement program

Mrs. Selma Gross, executive director of the Baltimore City Commission on Aging and Retirement Education has announced a pre-retirement planning series aimed at helping city employees prepare for retirement.

The series will be held at the Waxter Center, 861 Park Ave., each Tuesday beginning May 7 from 7 to 8:30 p.m. for eight weeks.

A pilot program jointly sponsored by the Baltimore City Commission on Aging and Retirement Education, the Classified Municipal Employees Association, and the City Employees Retirement System.

The purpose of the program is to help City employees prepare for retirement by looking at the many issues of retired life that face them. Each session will deal with a different aspect of retirement planning.

Experts will be brought in to discuss the following subjects as they relate to retirement: Income planning, City pension, housing, health, leisure time activities, legal and consumer problems, etc. The following agencies and groups giving input into this program are: CMEA, University of Baltimore, Employees Retirement System, Social Security Administration, Blue Cross and Blue Shield.
